A KING'S BOOKS

AT some time, probably when Dr. Cogswell, first librarian of what John Hill Burton calls "the Astorian," was in Europe "with his princely endowment in his pocket," the Astor Library acquired a set of British Army Lists, beginning with the year 1755 and ending in 1842. The first of them has a title-page reading, in part, "A List of the General and Field-Officers, as they Rank in the Army. A List of the Officers in the Several Regiments of Horse, Dragoons, and Foot, &c, on the British and Irish Establishments: with the Dates of their Commissions, as they Rank in each Corps... The Whole to August 1755. London: Printed for J. Millan, opposite the Admiralty-Office. (Price Three Shillings.)" It is a book of 126 pages, and about 20 cm. in height.

By 1842 the title was somewhat less formidable: "A List of the Officers of the Army and Royal Marines, on Full, Retired, and Half-Pay: with an Index. 1842. By Authority: London: Printed by W. Clowes & Sons, etc." But the size of the volume had increased to 639 pages, and the height to 31 cm. The set is handsomely bound in red morocco (in the style shown in the plate opposite page 4) with the earlier and smaller volumes set in cases so as to produce a set of uniform height. These books had been the property of William IV, King of Great Britain and Ireland, and of one or another of his sons, the Earl of Munster, or Colonel Fitz Clarence, and bear the bookplates of one, or more, of these personages. The Royal bookplate is that of the King when he was Duke of Clarence.

At a much later date, in 1905, and through the James Owen Proudfit Fund, The New York Public Library acquired eighty volumes of the British Naval List, to which the binder has given the title "Sea Officers." The earliest, 1715, is only a narrow pamphlet of about half a dozen leaves, printed on one side, without separate title-page, and giving only a list of ships. Bound with this is "A General List of the Lieutenants of His Majesty's Fleet..." for 1718-19. By 1817 this had become a plump little volume of 338 pages, called "...A List of the Flag-Officers of His Majesty's Fleet..." The bindings vary slightly; they are also red morocco, the backs ornamented with conventional designs like flowers or with anchors, or ships, as in the plate opposite page 5.

These also belonged to William IV, the Sailor King, and their especial interest lies in that fact. For in the long, idle hours of his service at sea, the young Prince had amused himself (or advanced himself in that glorious profession, as his Royal father would have put it) by annotating certain volumes of the set, which he seems to have had in his cabin. That he was faithfully endeavoring to become a good naval officer is borne out by the facts which are known about him, and although the Admiralty were too sage ever to entrust a fleet to his command, even when he bore the rank of Lord High Admiral of England, he is believed to have attained some proficiency as a sailor, and he certainly commanded both the "Pegasus" and the "Valiant." He won the praise and friendship of Nelson, although that great man's weakness for royalty may have added to the warmth of the praise. A number of the volumes have his autograph signature, "William Henry," on the title-page, with his naval rank at that date, and sometimes the name of his ship. The one reproduced here has all three, as well as his erasures and annotations.

It was meritorious for the young Lieutenant of twenty years, on board the "Hebe," to have annotated and corrected the List for 1785 (see frontispiece), and if the comment opposite the name of His Grace the Duke of Bolton, Admiral of the White, looks suspiciously like the word "mad," it may be that the Prince, even as a Lieutenant, was in a position to know whereof he wrote. Looking through these volumes for a number of years, one discovers many of His Majesty's officers against whose names the young officer has written this word. It was by no means the only comment at his disposal. The Right Hon. George Lord Viscount Mount Edgcumbe, although ranking as an Admiral of the White, is tersely described as "damned miser." This is in the list for 1786. The same volume shows that he considered Hugh Pigot, Esq., an Admiral of the Blue, a "gentleman," Matthew Barton, Esq., Vice Admiral of the White, as "blind" (a frequent comment) and that he refers to Commander James Mackenzie, perhaps affectionately, as "old Daddy."

More of the Prince's remarks are professional than personal: "Commands at Newfoundland," "has a yacht," "dismissed," "French War," "Spanish War," "Dutch War," and other similar phrases occur in great number throughout half a dozen volumes, and are much more frequent than "cheating," "beast," "old woman," or "cowardice." There are others, mysterious today, to anyone ignorant of sailors' slang of the eighteenth century; others, whose significance has no shade of doubt, — the blunt language of the quarter-deck or the barracks; and at least one, which some discreet hand — his own, when he had succeeded to Majesty?, or one of the Fitz Clarence's?, has seen fit to cut out with a sharp penknife.

All are in keeping with the character of the man, who, when he became King, over forty years later, was known for his good-humor, but also for his seafaring manners. His was a bluff and hearty nature, and at the most solemn moment of his life, as he acceded to the Throne, and spoke of his Sovereign and brother, George IV, then lying dead, with as much feeling for that Monarch as anyone, not a trained actor, could put into his voice, instantly added in his usual easy-going gruffness, as he affixed his first signature as King to some papers of state: "This is a damned bad pen you have given me!"

The bookplates in the volumes are those of the Duke of Clarence, bearing his coronet, the motto of the Order of the Garter, and the cipher: "W. H." for William Henry. Other plates show that his books passed into the possession of some of his sons, of whom the beautiful Mrs. Jordan was the mother. There are cards with the brief inscription: "Col. Fitz Clarence." And there are also plates, with the arms of the Earl of Munster and of Adolphus Fitz Clarence. The two latter bear the Royal arms, "debruised" by what novelists call "the bar sinister" and the herald knows as the baton sinister.

As Prince William Henry, the King stayed for some time in New York, with the British military and naval forces, then (1782) occupying the city, contrary to the wishes of General Washington and the American Army, which was encamped in New Jersey. The Prince had his quarters in Hanover Square, and skated, according to tradition, on the Collect Pond. Colonel Ogden, of the First Jersey Regiment, formed an elaborate and well-matured plan to capture the Prince and his Admiral, and take them into Washington's camp. General Washington approved the plan, and his letter may be read in Sparks's Washington's Writings (viii, 261), or in Fitzgerald's "Life and Times of William IV." In it, Washington stipulated that the Prince and the Admiral, if captured, be treated as prisoners of war of high rank, and that no indignity nor insult be offered them.

It is improbable that the Prince ever heard of this letter, but something seems to have affected him favorably toward this country and its first President. He had, throughout life, an extraordinary weakness for making speeches, some of which were not remarkable for their tact, — as when he lectured the House of Lords at great length upon certain grave sins of mankind. He chose for this moral discourse a time when his brother, afterwards George IV, was present, and laid especial emphasis upon denunciation of conduct to which that Prince was particularly inclined. A happier example of his oratory was afforded when he was King, and happened to be entertaining a group of gentlemen which included the American Minister. He was "seized with his fatal habit of making a speech," and said that it had always been with him a matter of serious regret that he had not been born a free, independent American, he respected that nation so much. He added that he considered Washington the greatest man that ever lived.

Coming as this did from the King of England, compliment could go no farther, not even in after-dinner speech-making of the most enthusiastic variety. It justifies the belief that the simple and good-hearted old gentleman would not be displeased to know that a number of shelves full of his books had, after long separation, come together again in the American city whose mild gayeties amused him when he was a junior officer in the Navy, and the star of Nelson was rising.

MIELATZ MEMORIAL EXHIBITION

THE artistic activity of the late C. F. W. Mielatz was inextricably bound up with New York City. Here he worked and issued that series of etchings which constitutes a veritable hymn in praise of the Metropolis. He graphically describes New York with an unerring eye for the picturesque viewpoint and with a mind ever alive to the interest of historical association and social surroundings. Reasons enough are these for the memorial exhibition which is to be on view in the Stuart Gallery of The New York Public Library, February 1 to April 15.

For some years before his death he was the dean of American etchers, but his position was based not alone on length of service. Some of his finest plates were done in the days of his rich maturity. Notably the "St. Thomas's Church," and that delightful "Bride's Door" of the same edifice. During that late period he produced also his scenes at Lakewood, of a richness in marked contrast to what Huneker called the "lean, ascetic line" of his city scenes.

He was not a man of rigid specialization. A handful of roses, a tarpon struggling against an angler, the reproduction of "Woman and Macaws" by George B. Luks (a fascinating piece of color work), scenes on shore and in field and woods, to all such things he turned with active interest. His work for the Society of Iconophiles included etchings, lithographs and monotypes reproduced in photogravure. Drypoint, soft-ground etching (the crayon-like strokes of which served him for color-work), aquatint, and various aids of the etcher, all served him at the right time.

To go through the New York section of this exhibition is to make a journey, like Dr. Syntax of old, "in search of the picturesque." This devotion to a native subject, expressed as it was with knowledge and ability, is enough to insure this artist a lasting place in the records of American etching.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of December, 1919, the Library received as gifts a total of 7,858 volumes, 11,072 pamphlets, 134 maps, and 641 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

Mr. Victor Hugo Paltsits presented to the Library the Gansevoort-Lansing Collection, which was bequeathed under the terms of the will of Catherine Gansevoort Lansing, granddaughter of General Peter Gansevoort, jr., and widow of the Honorable Abraham Lansing, of Albany. It consists of a library of general works and of Americana, numbering 5,500 volumes and 4,500 pamphlets, together with 200 broadsides, 100 newspapers, 1,000 photographs, and also about 25,000 manuscripts, including the military and other papers of General Peter Gansevoort, jr., papers of his son, the Hon. Peter Gansevoort, and of the latter's son, Brigadier-General Henry Sanford Gansevoort. There are also numerous papers of the Lansing, Douw, Van Schaick, and Melville families, and several hundred papers of Abraham Yates, jr. Taken together, these manuscripts embrace a period of nearly 250 years, from the last quarter of the seventeenth century.

Mrs. Charles F. W. Mielatz, of New York, gave the Library 42 etched views of New York and vicinity by the late Charles F. W. Mielatz (these prints formed the remainder of the collection from which the Library in December purchased 34).

From Miss Grace Bigelow, of Highland Falls, N. Y., came 195 volumes, 508 pamphlets, and other material, including the "New York Times" from 1857 to 1865, and volumes of "La France," "La Patrie," "Le Constitutionnel," "Journal des Debats," etc.; from Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, of New York, came a miscellaneous collection of 106 volumes, including "The Historians' History of the World," in 25 volumes.

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation gave the Library a specially bound set of their press books from January, 1918, to December, 1919, also a list of Paramount Arctcraft stars and productions of the same period. From The New York Times Review of Books came review copies numbering 364 volumes and 64 pamphlets.

Mr. H. C. Levis, of London, sent "The British King who tried to fly; extracts from old chronicles and histories relating to Bladud, the 9th King of Britain...compiled by Howard C. Levis," London, 1919 (one of 100 copies privately printed). Mr. John B. Cauldwell, of New York City, gave the Library 1,089 photographs, mainly views.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN DECEMBER, 1919

DURING the month of December, 1919, there were received at the Library 21,482 volumes and 12,592 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 80,551. They consulted 206,216 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 248,209.

LIST OF WORKS RELATING TO DRUIDS AND DRUIDISM

COMPILED BY GEORGE F. BLACK, PH.D.

The following list of works relating to Druids and Druidism comprises not only what is in The New York Public Library on the subject, but also titles gathered from other trustworthy sources. The aim has been to make a fairly complete list of works on the subject, and it is believed that few titles of any importance have been overlooked. The works which are in The New York Public Library have the class-mark added at the end of the title—all others are to be understood as being not at present in the Library collection. References to works on "Stone circles," etc., erroneously called "Druid circles" by unscientific writers are omitted. These stone circles are of a much earlier date than the Druids.

Discusses the origin of Druidism (priesthood, magic, cult of the oak, etc.). According to this author "Druidism originated among a people, inhabiting the British Isles before the Celts, a people belonging probably to those great stocks that occupied western and southern Europe long before the coming of the Indo-Germans." In the discussion Much and Goldmann treated the etymology of the word Druid.

ECONOMICS, SOCIOLOGY, AND POLITICAL SCIENCE

Basset, William Rupert. When the workmen help you manage. New York: The Century Co., 1919. 3 p.l., 266 p. 12°. TDC

"Within the range of his observation Mr. Basset has kept his mind open. His book is proof that through engineering many of the findings of contemporary psychology are getting practical application in industry. Mr. Basset is able to show that most of the democratic tendencies in management pay from the standpoint of dividends... He advocates representation but he is committed to no particular system... The contribution of his research is very great."—W. L. Cheney in The Survey, Nov. 29, 1919, p. 212.

A "PARADOX" OF PANCRATIUS JUSTINIANUS

THE Library has recently acquired a copy of the "Paradoxa" of Pancrazio Giustiniani (or Pancratius Justinianus, as his name is given in the Latin form) which was printed at Venice by Johannes Tacuinus of Tridinum, in April, 1530. It is a quarto of fifty-one leaves, including the title-page and colophon.

The "paradoxes" discuss various subjects, such as anatomy and sacred theology, but the passage of greatest interest, for its bearing upon American discovery and exploration, is that which begins on the verso of signature D 5. It is reproduced with this note. The Venetian noble had evidently been pondering the voyages of Columbus, and his reflections may be translated thus:

"You are greatly mistaken in believing that Spanish sailors saw the Antarctic Pole, the opposite of our Pole, which is always visible to us, for the Spaniards must needs have discovered a region scorched by the heat of the sun and uncultivated; since it is not to be doubted that the equinoctial circle divides this sphere into two equal separate parts, equally distant from each pole of the world, by which are meant the two points at the extremities of the axis of the sphere. And so the circle of the first motion is called equinoctial. Here, so great is the noise of the whole world in its most rapid revolution, that the ears of men are unable to endure it, just as you are not able to gaze directly at the sun, and your eyesight and perception are overcome by its rays. I am, therefore, of the opinion that the Spanish sailors did not traverse the region of the equinoctial zone, in which, if they are to be believed, the earthly paradise is situated; much more likely is it that the Spaniards did not see a land situated under the equinoctial, since no one except Adam and Eve, as the sacred writings bear witness, ever was in the earthly paradise which some assert to be under the equinoctial circle, where the equinox always prevails. If, therefore, the world is believed to be globular and round in shape, or is by any reasoning shown to be so, it is nevertheless a fabulous statement that men walk in a position the reverse of ours, though no ancient history worthy of notice so states, nor does the sacred word say anything as to this; furthermore it is not written by the ancients learned in the sacred writings that the region of the antarctic pole is uncovered by the mass of waters; although the poets say that there are five zones in the sky, and as many regions are marked out on the surface of the earth. But the astrologers have divided the land of our pole into seven habitable climates, which constitute the three parts of the world, Asia, Europe, and Africa, which last some have thought to be situated in Europe."

As the title-page indicates (see frontispiece) Pancrazio Giustiniani was of a patrician family of Venice. According to Litta's "Famiglie Celebri Italiane" (Milan, 1837) he died in 1519. Brunet assigns this and three other books to him: the "Pandecta," 1527; "De Praeclaris Venetae Aristocratiae Gestis Liber," 1527; and the "Epistolae," 1534, all printed by Johannes Tacuinus.

The verse at the top of the title-page, a sixteenth-century publisher's "blurb," may be translated: "Reader if you are wise, may you read this little book, and we implore you to read it through ten times, for it is learned, varied, serious, gay; it has the fragrance of Arpinum, it reminds one of Plato."

DURING the month of January, 1920, the Library received as gifts a total of 2,349 volumes, 4,516 pamphlets, 19 maps and 76 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

Mr. William Hamlin Childs and Mr. Lewis E. Pierson, in response to the efforts of The Merchants' Association of New York, presented the Library with a complete file of "La Libre Belgique," published during the war and consisting of 171 numbers.

From Mrs. John Kane, of New York, came the four volumes of the "Musée Français, recueil des plus beaux tableaux, statues, et bas-reliefs qui existaient au Louvre avant 1815, par Duchesne aîné," Paris; from Miss Grace Bigelow, of Highland Falls, New York, came a collection of material relating to the Panama Canal, mainly in French, and consisting of 27 volumes, 133 pamphlets and 254 periodicals; from Mr. William Sloane came a portfolio of 12 prints by Daniel Putnam Brinley, "Ruines de Guerre, Ligne Hindenburg, Soissons, Verdun, Arras," Foyers du Soldat, Paris, 1919; and from Mr. William K. Bixby, of St. Louis, Number 56 of 60 copies printed of the "List of books privately printed by William K. Bixby, and those privately printed by Book Clubs from manuscripts in his collection, including short sketches written by Mr. Bixby for Book Clubs," St. Louis, 1919.

The National Bank of Commerce in New York, Service Department, gave the Library a collection of documents and reports, chiefly relating to the Liberty Loans and containing 42 volumes and 8 pamphlets; from the Publishers' Weekly came a miscellaneous collection of 322 volumes, 146 pamphlets and 65 periodicals; from Mr. G. K. Parsons, of New York, came 51 bound volumes of electrical trade periodicals, etc.; from Mrs. B. Aymar Sands came a miscellaneous collection of 42 volumes; and from Mr. H. E. Williams, of Calumet, Michigan, came 33 volumes, 43 pamphlets, 165 periodicals, 3 maps and 9 prints, including old invoice books, day books and ledgers of the period 1806-1831.

The following gifts of prints were received: from Mr. Herbert Adams, of New York, 2 mezzotints (portraits by I. Beckett and I. Smith); from Mr. Bolton Brown, of New York, 4 lithographs drawn and printed by himself; from Mr. McDougall Hawkes, of New York, 2 engravings by Alfred Jones; and from Mr. E. T. Hurley, of Cincinnati, 3 pamphlets containing reproductions of his etchings with comment by Amelia Hickenlooper Dunham and James Albert Green.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN JANUARY, 1920

DURING the month of January, 1920, there were received at the Library 17,365 volumes and 5,063 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 88,228. They consulted 213,639 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 253,879.

"J'intitule ce volume 'Matériaux d'une théorie du prolétariat,' parce qu'au temps où j'écrivais les plus importantes des études qui le compose, je me flattais de pouvoir quelque jour, en utilisant les faits relevés dans les enquêtes récentes, compléter les indications sommaires que Marx et Engels avaient données sur le devenir de la classe ouvrière. Je doute fort maintenant que, dans notre société si embrouillée d'intérêts hétérogènes, si occupée d'intrigues politiques, si peu attentive aux créations de l'esprit libre, l'agitation du monde du travail puisse être condensée, même symboliquement, sous l'ordonnance d'une synthèse propre à rendre de sérieux services — Si je reprenais aujourd'hui l'examen des questions qui sont traitées ici, je suivrais les principes exposés dans l'appendice que j'ai ajouté en 1910 aux 'Réflexions sur la violence.' — Preface, p. 2, 5.

The details of the work and operations of the Library during the past year are shown, as usual, in the accompanying reports of the Treasurer and Director.

In both the Reference Department and the Circulation Department the statistics indicate an increased demand by the public upon the facilities of the Library.

The number of books issued for home use by the Circulation Department was 9,892,648, an increase of 265,143 volumes, or about 3 per cent as compared with the previous year.

The figures show a much greater increase in the use of the Reference Department. No count is kept of the many thousands of volumes which readers use from the open shelves in the various rooms, especially in the Main Reading Room, and the statistics relate only to the use of volumes for which regular call slips were filed. These show that 892,298 readers in the Reference Department consulted 2,244,452 books. In 1918 the number of readers was 764,587 and the number of volumes consulted was 2,063,261. Thus, the use of the Reference Department in 1919 shows an increase over the previous year of about 17 per cent in readers and of about 9 per cent in number of volumes consulted.

In former reports the Trustees have called attention to the absolute necessity of a substantial addition to the endowment funds of the Library, from which the Reference Department is supported. The constantly increasing demand upon its facilities and the increased cost of operation have now reached a point where it is impossible for the Library, with its present resources, to furnish facilities and service commensurate with its ideals and responsibilities and adequate to meet fully the great demands made upon it by the public.

When we realize that in the year 1919, the number of readers who availed themselves of the service of the Reference Department of The New York Public Library was nearly seven times as great as the number of readers who used the Library of the British Museum in London, which is probably the greatest reference library in the world, some idea can be formed of the extent to which our institution is called upon to furnish efficient service to the public.

The first complete year of operation of the Central Building was 1912; and a comparison of the number of readers and of volumes consulted in that year with those of 1919 will show the enormous increase in the use of the Reference Department in this short period of seven years. The number of readers grew from 400,275 to 892,298, an increase of 123 per cent, and the number of volumes consulted, from 1,307,676 to 2,244,452, an increase of 72 per cent. At the end of 1912, the total number of volumes and pamphlets available in the Reference Department was 1,181,392. At the end of 1919 the total number was 1,437,178, an increase of about 22 per cent. In 1912 there were 435 persons on the payroll of the Reference Department, and in 1919 there were 515, an increase of only 18 per cent in a period during which the number of readers had increased 123 per cent and the number of books consulted, 72 per cent.

There is now being expended in the maintenance and operation of the Reference Department more than the entire income of the Library from its endowment funds. During the earlier years following the consolidation it was found possible to accumulate a certain amount of income, and while this accumulated income was added to principal the Trustees have been obliged in recent years to draw upon it from time to time as necessity required. The appropriations which it has been found necessary to make for the year 1920 will not only take the whole of the estimated income for that year and the unexpended balance of these accumulations, but would, in addition, create an estimated deficit of some $60,000, but for the generosity of two of the Trustees, who have contributed $55,000 towards that deficit.

The Trustees desire to call attention to the accompanying Report of the Director, which sets forth in detail the facts showing the urgent need of the Library for an increased endowment. Its present income is wholly insufficient to keep abreast of its work and to furnish with efficiency the constantly increasing service which the public requires.

The increased cost of the Central Circulation Branch, which, under the contract with the City, is supported by the Library from its endowment funds, the necessity for large extension of book purchases, which for several years have been less than normal, owing to lack of means, the need of increased appropriations for binding for the proper preservation of the books, the greatly increased cost of fuel and other operating expenses, and a large increase in the salaries of the staff for 1920, which the Trustees have found to be imperatively required in the interests of justice and efficiency — all these factors unite in bringing about a situation which can be relieved only by a substantial addition to the endowment of the Corporation, if it is to continue the efficient performance of a work which has proved of such inestimable value to the public.

During the past year there were received as gifts 35,174 volumes, 79,697 pamphlets, 938 maps and 4,517 prints.

Some of the more important of these gifts were the following:

The Gansevoort-Lansing Collection was presented to the Library by Mr. Victor Hugo Paltsits, under the terms of the will of Catherine Gansevoort Lansing, of Albany. This collection consists of a library of general works and of Americana containing about 5,500 volumes, 4,500 pamphlets, together with prints, broadsides, photographs and newspapers. There are also about 25,000 manuscripts covering a period of nearly 250 years from the last quarter of the seventeenth century and among them are the military and other papers of General Peter Gansevoort, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fletcher McGrew, of Scranton, Pa., gave a collection of books on poultry raising, comprising 333 volumes and 35 pamphlets.

Mr. Ellwood Hendrick, of New York, gave 40 manuscript letters from Lafcadio Hearn in Japan to Mr. Hendrick during the years 1891–1902.

Mrs. Charles F. W. Mielatz, of New York, gave 42 etched views of New York and vicinity by the late Charles F. W. Mielatz.

Miss Grace Bigelow, whose honored father was the President of the Tilden Trust and the first President of The New York Public Library, gave 195 volumes, 508 pamphlets, etc., consisting mainly of bound French newspapers and public documents.

Mr. George Kennan, of New York, gave a collection of 439 photographs and 100 pieces of manuscript material, comprising letters and portraits of Russian political exiles, views of Siberian cities, etc.

From the estate of Isaac J. Greenwood, of New York, there was received a collection of historical and general reference books, early American plays, early Psalm books in Dutch and English, etc., comprising 808 volumes and 109 pamphlets.

Much interesting and important material relating to the great war was received through gift, including lithographs by Vernon Howe Bailey (presented by the artist), showing preparatory war activities; also linguistic, order-of-battle, and other maps from the various countries, propaganda material, regimental and divisional histories, war poetry; and from Major Mark H. Watson a complete file of the "Stars and Stripes," the official newspaper of the American Expeditionary Forces.

During the year a final adjustment of the various claims and legal questions relating to the legacy of the late J. Hood Wright to the Washington Heights Library was effected and The New York Public Library received the sum of $50,362.50 as its share in the final settlement.

The John Stewart Kennedy Memorial was completed and the bust of Mr. Kennedy by H. A. MacNeil, the sculptor, was installed in the niche prepared for it in the Fifth Avenue entrance lobby. Mr. Kennedy was formerly the President of the Lenox Library, and upon the consolidation became a Trustee and Second Vice-President of The New York Public Library, in which capacities he continued to serve until his death in 1909. He took an active part in the negotiations which resulted in the consolidation, and the deep interest which he displayed in the development of the Library and his liberal benefactions to it will be ever remembered.

Four vacancies occurred in the Board of Trustees during the year:

Mr. Carnegie died on the 11th of August, in his eighty-fourth year. He became a member of the Board in 1902 and served as a member of the Finance Committee for four years. His great gift of $5,200,000 made possible the establishment of a comprehensive system of circulation libraries in the City of New York, such as exists nowhere else in the world, and one which has proved an instrumentality of the utmost usefulness in promoting the education, welfare and happiness of the people. Of the total amount given by him, $3,360,000 was allotted to the erection of branch libraries in the Boroughs of Manhattan, The Bronx, and Richmond, to be controlled and operated by The New York Public Library as a part of its system. Under this allotment, thirty-seven branch library buildings have been erected, and plans and specifications for the thirty-eighth building, to serve the Fordham district, are now being prepared.

It is through the generosity of Mr. Carnegie that the Library School of The New York Public Library has been supported since its foundation.

Professor Henry Fairfield Osborn, who had been a member of the Board since 1911, resigned on the 13th of February.

Mr. Henry W. Taft, who became a Trustee in 1908 and had served on the Law Committee and Committee on Circulation, resigned on the 8th of October.

Mr. John Henry Hammond, who had been a Trustee since 1909 and had served on the Law Committee, Library Committee and Committee on Circulation, resigned on November 12th.

Archbishop Patrick J. Hayes was elected to the Board on the 12th of March to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Rives in 1917.

Mr. Edward S. Harkness was elected to the Board on the 12th of March, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Cardinal Farley in 1918.

Mr. John G. Milburn was elected to the Board on the 12th of March, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Halsey in 1918.

Mr. Arthur Curtiss James was elected to the Board on the 11th of June, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Professor Osborn.

The Trustees desire to express their sincere appreciation of the spirit of loyalty and cordial co-operation, in which the members of the Staff have discharged their duties during the year.

EDWARD W. SHELDON,

*Treasurer.February 20, 1920.LEGACIES TO THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

No precise words are necessary to a valid legacy to the Corporation. The following clause, however, may be suggested:

"I give The New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox and Tilden Foundations, the sum of.....dollars."

If land, or any specific personal property, such as bonds, stocks, books, prints, etc., is given, a brief description of the property should be inserted instead of the words "the sum of.....dollars."

REPORT OF THE DIRECTOR

FOR THE YEAR ENDING DECEMBER 31, 1919

LEWIS CASS LEDYARD, ESQ.,

President of The New York Public Library.

SIR:

Readers to the number of 892,298 are recorded as using books in the Reference Department (Central Building) during 1919. They were supplied with 2,244,452 volumes. This is a gain of 127,711 readers, and 181,191 volumes compared with the year 1918. Every year, of course, the actual use of books is much larger than the records show, since there are thousands of books which may be consulted without any application, written or verbal. The total number of visitors to the Building was 2,478,633.

In the Circulation Department (the Branch Libraries, Extension Division, and Library for the Blind) the number of volumes issued for use at home was 9,892,648. This is more than the number issued in 1918 by 265,143. This increase was made in spite of the fact that 1919 was a year of retrenchment and curtailed service, due to the decrease in the library appropriation. The necessary curtailments are mentioned in the report of the Circulation Department, page 142.

At the end of the year there were 1,117,565 books and 319,613 pamphlets in the Reference Department, — in all, 1,437,178 pieces. There were 1,177,896 books in the Circulation Department. The total number of books and pamphlets in both departments of the Library was therefore 2,615,074.

The number of employees on December 31, 1919, was 1,217. Of these, 515 were in the Reference Department, 11 in the Municipal Reference Library, and 691 in the Circulation Department.¹

REFERENCE DEPARTMENT

While the figures for the Reference Department for 1919 show an increase in use, it was a period of retrogression in other respects. Though the books increased in number, and the record of volumes consulted by readers is higher than in 1918, real progress has fallen far short of our hopes, obligations and responsibilities. This is due primarily to the new conditions resulting from the war. Five years ago $50,000 was appropriated from unrestricted funds for the purchase of books. For the past two years it has been possible to appropriate only $30,000 for this purpose. In other words, the decrease in the fund available for the purchase of books, combined with the decreased purchasing power of the fund, has actually reduced purchases to from one-third to one-half of what they were five years ago. In consequence it has not been possible to develop our collections systematically, to strengthen the weak places and maintain the strong. The funds available have made it possible to keep up moderately well with current publications, but the Library cannot provide for the present and future demands of scholars if it stops there. The Library has a responsibility to the far-sighted men who bought its books in the past, and a responsibility to the investigator in the next generation, which cannot be met by the mere selection of the books of to-day. Instead of $30,000 or $50,000 a year, the Library should have at least $100,000 if it is to live up to its opportunities and meet its proper obligations. We have now a good endowment for the purchase of beautifully illustrated books, and funds of moderate amounts for naval history, political science, Semitic literature, early cartography and Americana, and prints. Our position in Americana — or, for that matter, in any other field in which we have any responsibilities — cannot be maintained unless we have an income for this purpose that will put us on a par with our competitors.

In this connection it should be remembered that all the great libraries of Europe, and our own national library, the Library of Congress, receive free all copyrighted publications of their own countries, while The New York Public Library has to buy American publications at market prices.

Not only does the Library need more money for the purchase of books and the development of its collections, but it also needs more money for the preparation for use, and physical care, of the books it now owns. In 1914 we bound 55,517 volumes and repaired 1,364; in 1919 we bound 26,199 volumes and repaired 1,606. The decrease is due to the necessity of advancing salaries without increased income; consequently, the allowance for binding had to be diminished. As a result, the books are wearing out faster than they can be repaired. With a collection as large as ours, subjected to such continual use, the number of volumes bound each year should at least be trebled. For the years 1914 to 1917, inclusive, the Trustees made special appropriations for bringing up arrears in binding, but since 1917 there has been no fund which could be used for this purpose. As a consequence we are again falling behind, approximately 45,000 volumes a year, in binding and rebinding.

With our present funds for binding we can do nothing but adopt makeshifts which are expensive and unsatisfactory. They require the double handling of material, once when it is temporarily put into Manilla-rope paper, and once when it is to be bound in some permanent form. These makeshifts are expensive in time, since it takes longer to tie, untie, and retie a volume in Manilla-rope paper than to consult a bound volume. They are unsatisfactory, because the volumes so treated are difficult to handle on the shelves; because they suffer more from wear and tear; and because they lend themselves to slipshod, careless and inconsiderate treatment from readers and attendants. Work deferred is not avoided; it has to be done at a later day, and usually costs more than if done when the occasion arises.

If funds for buying books and binding them are increased, an enlargement of the staff comes as a parallel demand. More people are needed to prepare for use the books now being added to the collection, and the need is naturally greater if acquisitions are increased. In 1914 we had 547 people on the payroll of the Reference Department; in 1919 the number was 515 — a decrease of six per cent.

There is no reference library in the world which has as many readers as The New York Public Library. During 1919 the number of readers in this Library was nearly seven times the number in the Library of the British Museum in London, which is probably the greatest reference library in the world. The British Museum and the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris each have more than three times as many volumes as the Reference Department of The New York Public Library, while the Library of Congress in Washington has twice as many volumes.

In the Central Circulation Branch, which, though administered as a part of the Circulation Department, is maintained both as to staff and material from Reference Department funds, the staff at the end of 1914 numbered 33, the stock of books 46,454 volumes, and the annual circulation 448,986. For 1919 the corresponding figures show a staff of 37, a stock of books of 72,802, and a circulation of 579,899 — an increase of 12, 56, and 29 per cent respectively.

As a result of all the facts recited above, the staff is overworked. There is no power in reserve for sickness or unforeseen contingencies, and the constant strain is beginning to show in the quality of our work. During the war the staff gladly contributed increased speed and tension to its share in the war effort; now they find it difficult, without a serious sacrifice of health, to meet the increased and increasing demands.

There seems to be no escape from the fact that the Reference Department needs a large increase in its income.

MAIN READING ROOM

There have been various inquiries about the effect of the war upon reading. We are often asked whether we have noticed any changes in literary taste; whether people are reading now the books they read five years ago. Interest in current happenings — political, literary, etc. — is always more or less immediately reflected in the calls for books and information, but strangely enough even a world upheaval like the War, and the critical period of economic and social readjustment through which we are now passing, have — apparently — caused no great change in the relative use of books as presented in our classified statistics. People seem to be reading — in nearly the same proportions — the same kinds of books they read in 1914.

There have been compared the tables of percentages of volumes consulted in the Main Reading Room in the various classes or subjects for the past four years, i. e., 1916, 1917, 1918, and 1919. (See Appendix, Table 2-A, page 155.) There has been no noticeable change in the relative use of Art, Bibliography, or Biography. There has likewise been little or no change in Geography, American History (as used in the Main Reading Room in connection with other material), Law, Medicine, Philology, or Science.

There has been a steady increase in the demand for books in the field of economics for use in the Main Reading Room, notwithstanding the increasing use of the Economics Division. Of all books consulted in the Main Reading Room, 18.17 per cent are classed as economics. Unless we combine all Literature (American and English, 15.48 per cent, and Foreign Literatures, 10.50 per cent), which would then account for 25.98 per cent of books used, Economics would occupy first place. However, it would be fairer to say that Literature is the most popular subject, and Economics next in point of demand for books. (For the Main Reading Room.) The public interest — constantly growing — in Economics, whether for practical business information, or from historical and philosophical interest in social questions, is worthy of comment.

The call for Literature shows no noticeable change in relation to other subjects. There is a steady call on the part of certain classes of readers for the masterpieces of literature, both English and foreign. Interest in new books on the drama, dramatic history and technique, the art of writing, modern poetry — as well as current plays and poetry — is keen, and the demand for them large.

During 1916 and 1917 calls in the Main Reading Room showed an increase in the relative use of books classified as Technology. This was due to the demand for books on military and naval art, science, history, etc., caused by our entrance in the war. We have noticed also a growing demand for books on Agriculture. During the latter half of the year there were frequent calls for books on brewing, distilling, and wine-making. The figures for Technology dropped from 6.89 per cent in 1917 to 5.98 in 1919. (Main Reading Room only. In the Technology Room, volumes consulted rose from 266,410 in 1918 to 328,152 in 1919.)

There has been a surprising drop in the demand for History. In 1916 the use of books classified as History, other than American, formed 9.4 per cent of the total called for. In 1917 it rose to 10.01 per cent, and in 1918 to 11.25 per cent. Last year it dropped to 8.87 per cent. During 1917 and 1918 we not only supplied the popular demand for war books and for books dealing with the nations at war, but the calls for historical material from students working on official investigations.

There has been an increase in the call for Philosophy — the class in which we put psychology, spiritism, psychic phenomena, etc. In 1916 the percentage was 5.436; last year (1919) it was 7.2 per cent. There has been no more popular class of books on the new book shelves than those about immortality, life after death, psychic phenomena — whether learned or popular.

It is impossible to say whether philosophy has triumphed at the expense of religion or not, but there has been, since 1917, a steady decline in the demand for books on religion. Three years ago the percentage was 4.03. In 1918 it had dropped to 3.6 per cent. Last year but 3.43 per cent of the books used were classified as Religion. The latter half of 1919, as we recovered from war conditions which had caused a decided drop in our statistics in 1918, was extraordinarily busy.

In 1919 we recorded in the Main Reading Room 295,119 readers who filed slips for 624,506 volumes. This is the largest number of readers recorded to date.

ART AND PRINTS DIVISION

The attendance record shows an increase of 30 per cent over 1918, a slight increase over 1917, and a slight decrease from 1916, — the war-time decrease is evidently at an end. The Division continues to serve a public of varied interests; an increased number of scenic artists and people from the moving-picture houses have been coming for aid. The agitation to better the training of American designers seems to be bearing fruit in the manufacturing circles most concerned. Librarians are apt to consider themselves part of our educational system, but in such an activity as this their rôle is propagandist rather than pedagogic, and it is exercised unofficially and outside the library walls. In that way art librarians can do their share in promotion of the arts of every-day life. In considering the number of our readers it seems fitting to note that the Art Division competes with nearly a dozen art libraries in the city, a condition that confronts few other divisions.

AMERICAN HISTORY DIVISION

The statistics will show that the Map Room has served more than one-fifth of the applicants recorded for the Division. The increasing demand in this respect and the variety and value of the uses served, emphasize the growing need for larger quarters, for both public service and administrative convenience.

The Reserve Room has been consulted for early industrial illustrations to be used for commercial advertising publications, and for early maps to be reproduced in an historical cartography. Data have been secured from old almanacs in regard to eclipses; the bibliography of ichthyology has been studied and the earliest picture of the tarpon has been obtained here. Investigations were made concerning the history of flags and ensigns, the history of Manhattan Island, the history of early Oregon, and the life of Hugh Henry Brackenridge, an early American jurist and author. Bibliographical data have been also sought for with respect to rare publications on shorthand, fifteenth-century printing, and early French voyages.

The Map Room has been consulted in a study of old flags on maps; for procuring decorations from Leonardo da Vinci's map to be used in a lighting fixture in the Hamilton County Court House in Cincinnati; for investigating aeronautical routes for commercial purposes; and for looking up water area in the different states in order to find out whether to send airplanes or hydroplanes for commercial purposes. A member of the Aero Club of America, who proposed flying from New York to Buenos Aires, looked up South American maps; maps of Paris were used for a Trust Company for locating a branch office; commercial maps were used by a map publisher; old maps of Brooklyn and of Newtown Creek in Queens Borough were consulted for the Interstate Commerce Commission; another investigator looked up large scale maps of Siberia for commercial purposes; a district superintendent of schools examined maps for planning a revision of maps for school geographies; a member of the American Automobile Association examined maps of the Navajo Indian Reservation to plan a highway through the reservation; in preparation of a thesis maps were examined for the early trails of the United States; the Revolutionary War sites in the environs of Bound Brook, N. J., were investigated; old maps of Louisiana were used in a comparative study; old maps of South America were photostatted for illustrating a book; old

New York City maps were consulted for historical purposes; a student of Americanization problems looked up the location of towns in Europe from which synagogues in the United States are named, with the object of diverting emigrants from settling on the East Side of New York City, as well as to aid in their Americanization; old maps of Long Island were examined for the Corporation Counsel's office of New York City; a representative of the New Jersey Harbor Board looked up the piers of New York City, for the separation of the railroad from the steamship piers; maps of the Hudson River were also consulted for the Harbor Line Board of the Government; another person sought to find out if the Tabasco River of Mexico is navigable between certain points for small steamers for carrying ammunition; a member of the Police Department of New York City got locations of streets newly opened for the purpose of locating new police patrols and precincts; Staten Island maps were investigated to supply data for which the records are otherwise lost; maps were used for locating golf clubs and golf courses in the United States; a representative of the Western Electric Company looked up the latitude, longitude, temperature, climate, and altitude of São Paulo, Brazil, to be used in plans for installing telephones in that region; and a member of the United States Air Mail Service examined topographical maps of the region between New York and Cleveland.

About 350 titles were added by purchase or gift to the Reserve Room, relating to or representing such a variety of subjects as agriculture; rare Americana; angling; art; astronomy; biography; bookbinding; bibliography; Mexican chapbooks; commerce and transportation; cosmography and geography; education, including early textbooks; freemasonry; heraldry; history of various countries and localities; hymnology; the Indians; statute laws and legislative journals; classical, American, English, French and Italian literature, including fiction, drama, and poetry; medicine and physiology; military science; navy and shipwrecks; politics; philosophy; religion and theology, including Bibles and Psalm Books; the pure and applied sciences; slavery; and voyages and travels.

The following short-title list presents some of the more interesting accessions:

MANUSCRIPT DIVISION

During the year there were 324 readers, who used 526 volumes, 130 boxes, and 231 pieces of manuscripts. The general work of the Manuscript Division has continued, such as assorting, arranging, cataloguing, classifying, and shelving the accessions and other manuscripts, answering queries of correspondents, aiding persons engaged in research, and supervising in the Photostat Room the manuscripts, etc., that were reproduced for applicants.

In the field of special research, investigation was made for material relating to the biography of George Washington; biography of Silas Deane; and biography of Gov. David B. Hill; history of the origin and development of the national colors of the United States; African slave trade; history of the United States during the Jacksonian period; medical history of the United States Navy; Boston journalists, 1830-1840; Iconography of Manhattan Island; local history and views of New York City; Armenians in Virginia during the early colonial period; writings on agriculture by John Randolph; the history of Peru, Korea and Siam; and material relating to historical bells of the world; the use of medical language in shorthand court reporting; family history in the Loyalist papers; the art of illuminating manuscripts; and the care and preservation of manuscripts.

The accessions to the Manuscript Division have amounted to about 28,000 pieces and 250 volumes. The principal gift of the year is the Gansevoort-Lansing Collection, given to the Library by Victor Hugo Paltsits, under the terms of the will of Catherine Gansevoort Lansing. It is estimated that the gift includes about 25,000 manuscript pieces and several hundred volumes. These papers illuminate the social, business, military, and political careers of members of the Gansevoort and Lansing families of New York during a period of 250 years, and include such collateral branches as the Van Schaick, Yates, Melville, Sandford, Hoadley, and Thomas families. Principally important are the military correspondence of Gen. Peter Gansevoort, jr., and the political correspondence of Abraham Yates, Jr. (b. 1724; d. 1796), President of the Provincial Congress of New York, 1775-1776, member of the Continental Congress, 1788-1789, mayor of Albany, 1790-1796, and otherwise active in public affairs in State and Nation. Herman Melville, the author, was of this ancestry, and material by or relating to him is also included.

The next in importance was the gift of several thousand pages of the Papers of William Smith, chief justice of the province of New York, author of the "History of the Province of New York" (London, 1757), a tory in the American Revolution, and later chief justice of Canada. This acquisition now rounds out the series of Smith Papers secured by the Library a few years ago. Taken together, these papers represent one of the most interesting bodies of source materials for the history of New York in the eighteenth century. This gift included also a number of papers of his son, William Smith, clerk of the parliament and master in chancery of the province of Lower Canada, as well as author of the "History of Canada" (1815).

Other valuable gifts were as follows:

Mrs. Edward McClure Peters, of Brooklyn, N. Y., presented diaries, account books, correspondence, etc., of Henry Hunter Peters. The diaries include descriptions of two journeys from New York to San Francisco and return via Panama and Nicaragua, respectively, and journeys to Sacramento and Oregon, 1850-1854; also a farm diary kept at Southboro, Mass., 1855-1856. The correspondence relates to personal and business affairs in California, 1850-1853. In all, there are 17 volumes and about 30 pieces. Mrs. Peters also presented William Cullen Bryant's holograph account of his journey from Burgos to Madrid, Spain, dated at Madrid, November 5, 1857. This manuscript is printed as Letter XI in Bryant's "Letters of a Traveller," second series, New York, 1859.

Mr. Frederick S. Dellenbaugh, of New York City, presented the diaries of Almon Harris Thompson, which record the explorations of the second Powell expedition down the Green and Colorado rivers and through adjacent country, 1871-1874. The diaries have to do mostly with the topographical surveys, with frequent mention of inhabitants including Uinta, Navajo, Pai Ute, Moqui (Hopi) and Shewits Indians, Mormons, etc. He gave also a diary recording the second entrance, for exploration, into the region of southeastern Utah, June 7 to September 18, 1875. In all, 6 volumes.

Mr. Ellwood Hendrick, of New York, presented a collection of forty holograph letters of Lafcadio Hearn addressed to Mr. Hendrick, 1891-1902. The letters relate to personal and family matters, finances, relations with publishers, Oriental customs, morals, his teaching, Japanese students, professors at the University of Tokyo, literary work, etc. Portions of many of these letters are printed in the "Life and Letters of Hearn," by Elizabeth Bisland (Wetmore), 1906.

Simon Gratz, Esq., of Philadelphia, Pa., presented 61 autograph letters, etc., of eminent American physicians and surgeons covering the period, 1756-1880. These letters have some value for the history of American medical and surgical practice and for the history of the sciences of chemistry, botany, mineralogy, astronomy, etc. A selection was printed in the Bulletin of the Library, September, 1919.

Colonel Robert C. Richardson, Jr., of the General Staff, American Expeditionary Forces, presented a map showing the order of battle — with location of division headquarters of the Allied and German troops — on the western front at 11 a. m., November 11, 1918, the hour at which the armistice was declared. The map, a pen-and-ink drawing on a French topographical map, scale approximately one inch equaling nine miles, was prepared in the map room of the General Headquarters of the American Expeditionary Forces, and represents the maximum information that was extant about the positions of divisions and their headquarters.

Mr. Lathrop C. Harper, of New York City, gave to the Library, 30 pieces and 2 volumes of manuscripts, among them certain law dockets of Dutchess county, N. Y., and New York City, 1801-1811; a transcript of the vestry minutes of Trinity Church, New York, 1710-1717; an apothecary account book, New York, 1773-1774, and certain original papers relating to Francis Rombouts, his widow, and estate, in New York, 1691-1705.

I. N. Phelps Stokes, Esq., presented the original parchment release issued by the heirs of Daniel Coxe to the Crown of Great Britain for the old grant of Carolana in exchange for crown lands in the province of New York, dated January 1, 1770.

Mrs. Charles S. Fairchild, of Cazenovia, N. Y., gave about 25 manuscripts, among them a letter of Henry Clay, 1798; a letter of De Witt Clinton, 1812, and papers of John Lincklaen, 1818-1820.

Miss Grace Bigelow presented some papers of her father, the late Hon. John Bigelow, in all, about 40 pieces.

Mr. J. W. Van Boskerck gave a sales' record book of the old Olympic Theatre, of New York City, Sept. 5, 1864, to July 8, 1865.

Miss Augusta Parkins, of Cooperstown, N. Y., presented about 22 pieces of family papers, 1781-1844.

Robert H. Fuller, Esq., of New York City, gave 41 pieces of copies of speeches, telegrams, etc., of Gov. Charles E. Hughes, some with the governor's corrections, 1907-1909.

Colonel William Barclay Parsons presented an autograph letter of Gen. Robert E. Lee, commendatory of the character of Gen. Longstreet, later endorsed in concurrence by Gen. U. S. Grant. Colonel Parsons's father, who received this letter, said that it was Gen. Grant's opinion that this letter was the only one on which both his and Lee's names were written.

Mr. Duane Mowry, of Milwaukee, Wis., gave three more autograph letters from the papers of the Hon. James R. Doolittle, United States Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. Benjamin Adams, of Brooklyn, N. Y., gave a treasurer's book of the Aqueduct Association of Claremont, N. H., 1828-1871.

The purchases amounted to about 2,000 pieces and 10 volumes. The following list embraces the more important items and exhibits, also their variety, namely:

Papers of Cæsar Rodney and Cæsar Augustus Rodney, consisting of letters from Cæsar Rodney to Thomas Rodney and to Henry Laurens; letters to Cæsar Rodney from Gunning Bedford, John Dickinson, Mordecai Gist, Richard Peters, James Rivington, Tench Tilghman, Nicholas Van Dyke; also letters to Cæsar Augustus Rodney from John Quincy Adams, William M. Armstrong, James Barron, Aaron Burr, Tench Coxe, Joseph Hopkinson, Charles J. Ingersoll, and Edward Livingston. About 165 pieces. At the Rodney sale were also secured some miscellaneous letters of Benedict Arnold, 1775; James Buchanan, 1845; George Clinton, 1784; Thomas Mifflin, 1777; Jacob Read to George Washington, 1798; Jeremiah Wadsworth, 1779, and the order of the General Court of Massachusetts to the delegates of that State in the Continental Congress, directing them to subscribe to the Articles of Confederation, 1778.

Contemporary copies by Tobias Lear of letters from George Washington to President Adams, Alexander Hamilton, and others, in regard to his appointment as Lieutenant-General of the United States Army, July 4 to July 15, 1798.

"Minutes of a Council of War held by [his] Excellency William Shirley, Esq^r, General & Commander in Chief of all his Majesty's Forces in North America, at New York on Friday the 12th of december, 1755." This is an official contemporary copy attested by William Alexander, the secretary, of the famous council of war held in New York City in the crisis after Gen. Braddock's defeat.

Original exemplification of the credentials of James Duane, William Floyd, John Morin Scott, Ezra L'Hommedieu and Philip Schuyler, delegates from New York to the continental congress, made at Schuyler's request, signed by Gov. George Clinton, endorsed by John Morin Scott as secretary of state, November 9, 1779. With wax seal.

Veinte piezas de documentos de los servicios hechos al Rey nuestro Señor por Don José Fernandez de Castro, desde el año de 1777, en que paso a la America de Sud, con la expedicion del General Don Pedro de Cavallos. 40 leaves. f°. Certified copies made at Cadiz, Dec. 20, 1823; the documents cover Castro's services from 1777 to 1823.

Letter books and an order book of Admiral Sir Herbert Sawyer, K. C. B., of the British navy, covering the years 1810-1815, during part of which time he was in command of the North American station. 5 volumes.

Papers of Wynant Van Zandt, Jr., alderman, a governor of the New York Hospital, and a director of the Bank of New York, about 35 pieces, including some papers of business before the common council of the city of New York regarding butchers, ferries, free schools (1807), the Government House (1807), the Manhattan Company (1804), police justices and streets.

Miscellaneous papers of various members of the Livingston family of New York. About 90 pieces.

William Bradford, New York's first printer, is represented by a holograph document signed twice by him, of date April 20, 1704, being his bill against the Custom House of New York for supplies furnished.

Hugh Gaine, the New York printer, is represented by his original marriage license to Cornelia Wallace, widow, September 9, 1769; by his lease of land in the city from the Trinity Church corporation, 1795; by a discharge of a mortgage, 1797, and by a receipt to him from the New York Whaling Company.

There was purchased the original manuscript, used as printer's copy, of Charles Raymond Beazley's "The Dawn of Modern Geography," vols. 1 and 3.

Papers of George W. Gordon, United States consul at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, in 1844-1845, 25 pieces. They consist of his correspondence with Daniel Webster and others, 1841-1852, as well as official papers during his residence in Brazil.

Dennett Papers, of Kittery, Maine, 18th and 19th centuries, about 460 pieces, relating to local and social history, personalia, etc.

Manuscripts having interest for the history of trade and commerce were added, as follows:

Papers of the Ellms family, of Scituate, Mass., including some mercantile accounts, 1725-1820. 8 pieces.

Mercantile accounts, receipts, etc., of firms in New York, Philadelphia, and New Jersey, 1752-1848. 121 pieces.

Papers of John and Joseph Robbins, of Acton, Mass., being mercantile, legal, military, and official in character, 1767-1827. About 100 pieces.

Papers of the Asylum Company, 1795-1796. 4 pieces.

Papers of Dwight and George B. Ripley, of Norwich, Conn., relative to lands, manufactories, whaling vessels, etc., 1802-1848. About 100 pieces.

American shipping papers, 1806-1864. 76 pieces.

Papers of Gardiner and William P. Greene, of Norwich, Conn., relating to land transactions in Ohio and Michigan, 1843-1862. About 700 pieces.

The Manuscript Division of the Library is a natural place for deposit of letters, documents, and other manuscripts of historical, literary, scientific or biographical nature. It is hoped that the owners of such papers will present them to the Library. Manuscripts of whatever nature, although seemingly trivial in themselves, may be valuable if they refer to any eminent person. Collections given to the Library will be carefully sorted, and any material of a personal nature will be returned to the donor.

PUBLIC EXHIBITIONS

The standard exhibition of rare and exceptionally fine books and manuscripts, which had been opened in the Main Exhibition Room in December, 1917, was continued also in 1919, from January 1, to April 28, both inclusive, with a total attendance for the period of 39,908 visitors. This was succeeded by an exhibition of Foreign War Posters, from May 26 to November 27, both inclusive, with a total attendance for the period of 114,609. It was, in turn, followed on December 6 by a remarkable exhibition of War Photographs taken by the United States Signal Corps, A. E. F., including numerous enlargements. From December 6 to 31, both inclusive, the attendance was 47,298, revealing the public interest in these pictures of the great war. The total number of visitors to the Main Exhibition Room during 1919 amounted to 201,815. Both of these war exhibitions were prepared by Mr. Edwin W. Gaillard.

In the Spencer Room the same conditions exist as were reported a year ago, except that several purchases have been added to the overcrowded showcases. The prospect of a new and adequate equipment of the Spencer Room is a pleasant anticipation. The total number of visitors reported to the Spencer Exhibition of fine books in fine bindings, during the year, was 52,553.

MUSIC DIVISION

On May 9, 1919, the Chief of the Division returned to his post in the Library after an absence of almost two years in the military service.

The division has continued to grow, both in size and in the number of readers. The most notable addition to the resources was the bequest of $10,000 by Mrs. Catherine Drexel Penrose, a daughter of Joseph W. Drexel, to whom the Library owes the Drexel Collection.

Of actual additions to the music collection the most important were the full scores and other music by modern composers, particularly Russian and French, purchased by Mr. Newton with the funds raised through his personal efforts. During the year 1919, $672.23 of this money was expended. The number of books bought in this way is estimated as follows:

240 full scores of operas, orchestra music and chamber music.

15 vocal scores of operas.

203 pieces of sheet music (piano, songs, etc.).

In addition to this, Mr. Newton induced the following artists and composers to donate music to the Library, in many cases their own compositions: Maud Powell, Frieda Hempel, Charles Griffes, Bruno Huhn, Harvey Worthington Loomis, Frank LaForge, Alexander Russel, and the publisher, Carl Fischer.

About fifty vocal scores of modern French and Italian operas, belonging to the late Miss Bessie Abbott, were donated by the singer's mother, Mrs. Frances J. Pickens.

At the sale of the library formerly belonging to Evert Jansen Wendell, there were purchased for our Music Division about 25 volumes, 70 pamphlets, and 3,000 pieces of sheet music, the last consisting chiefly of American publications of the middle of the nineteenth century and of popular songs of the eighties and nineties.

The following figures show the growth in the number of books in the catalogue and in the number of readers in the Music Division. (The number of readers does not include those who use books from the Music Division in the Main Reading Room in the evenings or on Sundays. The number of titles added does not include additions to periodicals or continuations of works catalogued previously. The number of cards in the catalogue includes shelf lists and song indexes.)

	ACCESSIONS NUMBER OF TITLES	NUMBER OF CARDS (estimated) IN CATALOGUE	NUMBER OF READERS	VOLUMES CONSULTED

It is evident that the problem of shelf space, which was postponed by the removal of the Drexel Collection to Stack VII, two years ago, is again becoming acute. Other books besides the Drexel Collection have been removed to the stacks; and at present a further removal of seldom-used periodicals is being arranged.

GENEALOGY DIVISION

The registration of readers in this Division showed a marked increase. The total was 26,446, or 3,487 more than for the preceding year. Volumes and pamphlets to the number of 100,208 were applied for by slips, and there was a correspondingly large use of the books on the open shelves.

An increased interest in membership in patriotic societies was a result of the war. Readers seeking to know the birthplace and parentage of their immigrant ancestors used many British and American local histories, parish registers and kindred works.

Aside from the predominant genealogical researches, special studies were made of American stage coaches, 1790-1820; historic bells in the United States; statues and busts of George Washington; New York

City, its pageantry and celebrations; origin of New York City street names; biography of President Grover Cleveland; the military medals given to General Pershing; allegorical inscriptions on public buildings; biographical sketches of botanists; Nonesuch Palace, Surrey, Eng., in the time of Henry VIII; the meaning of crests and symbols on Japanese gift cloths; sketches of Army officers of Great Britain serving in American colonial wars; flags of the world and their history.

ORDER DIVISION

The Order Division received during the year, for the Reference Department, 46,891 volumes, of which 11,717 were purchases, and 35,174 were gifts. The number of pamphlets received was 89,550, of which 9,853 were purchases, and 79,697 were gifts. For the Circulation Department there came as gifts 5,370 volumes and 1,536 pamphlets.

REFERENCE CATALOGUING DIVISION

The number of volumes newly catalogued in the Reference Department for the year 1919 was 15,501; pamphlets, 11,748; maps, 647. The cataloguing of 1,300 volumes and 1,225 pamphlets was carried on by adding to entries already existing; 1,743 volumes and 615 pamphlets were recatalogued; 4,446 volumes and 1,983 pamphlets were catalogued by the use of cards purchased from the Library of Congress.

Of works serial in their form, magazines, society publications, etc., there were catalogued 3,208 volumes and 5,163 pamphlets, making a total of 8,371. Besides these, 10,002 volumes and 8,135 pamphlets were added to entries already in the catalogue. There were recatalogued 783 volumes and 381 pamphlets.

In all, 36,983 volumes, 29,250 pamphlets, and 647 maps were handled, making a total of 66,880 items.

For the above work 26,785 cards were written (on the typewriter); 31,329 copy slips were sent to the printing office, from which 290,531 cards were returned; 77,432 cards were purchased from the Library of Congress.

Cards were distributed to the official catalogue, the public catalogue, and the various special divisions; 68,508 cards were sent to the Library of Congress, the latter also receiving 14,515 cards from the Central Circulation collection.

The depository set of Library of Congress cards filed in the public catalogue room contains 770,122 cards, the set in the reference cataloguing room, including unrevised cards, 815,415 cards.

The official catalogue in the cataloguing room and in Stack VI contains 1,980,824 cards; 1,366,817 in the general alphabet, 170,316 in the serial catalogue, 50,190 in the author record of books in the Central Circulation collection, 6,996 in the railway catalogue, 18,521 in the central reserve catalogue, 347,271 in the official document catalogue, and 20,709 in several smaller catalogues.

In the special reading rooms the number of cards contained in each catalogue is as follows: American History, 177,660; Art, 182,556 (general art, 103,778, prints, 78,768); Economics, 405,330; Genealogy, 85,340; Jewish, 120,900; Maps, 45,460; Music, 132,940; Newspapers, 6,977; Oriental, 82,370; Patents, 2,075; Reserve, 111,980; Science and Technology, 444,000; Slavonic, 95,680.

The number of periodicals indexed in the past year approximates 1,190; 27,019 index cards were written; and additions were made to 831 index cards in the catalogue.

ACCESSIONS DIVISION

During the year 1919 there were 25,801 volumes and 350 pamphlets accessioned. Of this number 12,555 volumes and 69 pamphlets were purchased or were received on exchange account, and 13,246 volumes and 281 pamphlets were gifts. Included in this record are 946 "pamphlet volumes" made by binding together in single volumes 501 unbound volumes and 12,390 pamphlets, grouped so as to bring together a sufficient number of pieces to make volumes of about two inches in thickness, each relating to a single subject.

SLAVONIC DIVISION

In addition to the usual type of student and writer on Slavonic matters, the collection was used by workers who are educating the immigrant Russian masses in this city and its vicinity. To the journalist the Division could offer but little, for the reason that the current literary output of Slavonic Europe still remained practically beyond the reach of the Library. No printed matter reached the Library directly from the Russian Soviet Republic, Yugoslavia, and Bulgaria; a very limited amount of literature came from Poland and Czecho-Slovakia. A great deal of Russian newspaper material published in Siberia and Southern Russia was turned over to the Library by the editors of a local Russian weekly ("Narodnaya Gazeta"). A number of periodicals issued by recent Russian émigrés in Paris and elsewhere were also secured.

The Division has been making every effort to increase its collection on the Russian revolutionary movements. A great many "underground" pamphlets and periodicals, including an entire little library owned by a local Socialist organization, were added to this collection. A group of photographs (some 500 in number) and manuscripts, both of great historical value, were given by Mr. George Kennan. The pictorial material includes some 250 photographs of Russian revolutionists, mostly convicts and exiles in Siberia. The remaining photographs depict Siberian scenery, city views, and the various aspects of the life of the aboriginal Siberian tribes. The manuscripts are mostly letters written by political convicts and exiles in Siberia and other material bearing on the conditions of their life there.

Upward of 50 volumes in the Bohemian language, mostly belles-lettres, were given by a local Czecho-Slovak organization, and some additions were also made to the Polish collection.

A revision of the catalogue was started in the autumn.

JEWISH DIVISION

The year 1919 has been another lean year for Jewish literature, and more especially as regards the growth of the Jewish collection which has, moreover, been handicapped by the still reduced facilities of the book trade. Groups of Jewish authors of ability have for some time been enlisted in the service of the Zionist cause and are writing about the Jewish nationalist movement. A number of works on Palestine and Zionism have been acquired, together with some books recently published in Palestine. Of these acquisitions mention should be made of the works of Sokolow, Wilkansky, and Ruppin—three of the more important books which deal respectively with the past, the present, and the future of the Zionist movement. Nahum Sokolow, the greatest of Hebrew journalists, is the author of the "History of the Zionist Movement, 1600–1918 [largely documentary]; with an introduction by the Rt. Hon. A. J. Balfour, M.P., and ninety portraits and illustrations, selected and arranged by Israel Solomons," in two volumes, London, 1919. Isaac Wilkansky, the Palestinian agronomist, in his Hebrew work "Ba-Derek," Jaffa, 1918, analyzes and discusses the present agricultural and economic conditions of the Jewish colonies in Palestine from the point of view of labor, criticizes the methods heretofore pursued in colonization, and advocates the nationalization of the land. The book will soon appear in various languages; several chapters have already been published in English, in "Palestine, the organ of the British Palestine Committee." Dr. Arthur Ruppin, the Palestinian economic expert, in his "Der Aufbau des Landes Israel: Ziele und Wege jüdischer Siedlungsarbeit in Palästina," Berlin, 1919, after giving a most useful summary of Jewish life and work in Palestine, elaborates a thoroughgoing national programme for the reclamation of the land, its settlement by Jews, its temporary administration by Great Britain by virtue of the mandate of the League of Nations expected to be given in March, and the gradual assumption of control by the Jews, when they have become the majority and have been trained in the art of self-government.

In Hebrew literature mention should be made of the ambitious new literary monthly "Miklat." This occupies a position similar to that formerly held by "Ha-Shiloah," published in Odessa, which, to a certain extent, meant to Hebrew letters what the "Atlantic Monthly" is to American letters. The new magazine owes its existence to the generosity of a Russian merchant, devoted to the revival of the Hebrew language and to the development of its literature. In the pursuit of his aim, this Maecenas founded a publishing house in this city, with a branch in Warsaw; in the latter, a series of Hebrew translations of the literary classics of the world are being issued.

The number of Yiddish publications in this country, both original and translated, continue to increase. Since the war and Russia's dismemberment, New York has become the centre of activities of Yiddish men of letters, similar to Warsaw during the quarter of a century preceding the war.

In general, it may be observed that during the last few decades, the Yiddish-reading public has been growing constantly and rapidly. At the time the Jewish Division was established, about twenty-three years ago, there was hardly any serious thought given to Yiddish literature. Few then foresaw the importance it would soon assume in Jewish life. Many even predicted its speedy decay and disappearance from the number of living languages, some giving it at the utmost twenty-five years of life in the United States. Meanwhile, Yiddish was continually forging ahead as a result of the rise of democracy and the awakening of the laboring classes of Eastern Europe.

Of late a new development has been observed in connection with the use of Yiddish books in the library. A number of schools maintained by the labor element of the more recent immigrants are giving instruction both to children and adults in the Yiddish language and its literature. This has created a new class of readers — the students of Yiddish.

Other noteworthy works added to the Jewish collection are: "The Catholic Encyclopedia," the gift of Henry Osborne Havemeyer, Esq.; "The New Schaff-Herzog Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge," New York, 1908-1914, 13 v.; the "Bible" volume of the "British Museum Catalogue," 1892-1899; S. Kirschstein's "Juedische Graphiker aus der Zeit von 1625-1825," Berlin, 1918; and the "American Jewish Year Book," v. 21, Philadelphia, 1919, in which the story of the Jews in the world war is told by means of special articles on the participation in the struggle of the American, British, and French Jews, and on the "Jewish battalions and the Palestine campaign."

Mention may be made of a number of books, including "The Northern British-Israel Review," v. 1-6, Glasgow, 1910-1916, that have been added to the curious collection of Anglo-Israelite books, now numbering more than a hundred volumes. According to their theory, the glorious future promised to Israel by the Hebrew Prophets was not meant for the modern Jews, the descendants of Judah, who are to remain a "by-word among the nations," but for the Anglo-Saxons who are thought to be the descendants of the Lost Tribes of Israel. In these prophecies, the United States is seen in the guise of the tribe of Manasseh, and a reference is found even to the American eagle in Ezekiel xvii, 3. Like other theorists in the various domains of thought who are now busily engaged in adjusting their ante-bellum doctrines to the events and results of the European war, some stray Anglo-Israelites will now and then visit the library to grapple with the task of re-interpreting the Biblical prophecies so as to fit Great Britain's recent vicissitudes. This theory, flattering to race-pride and appealing to simple, pious minds, naturally has found more followers and produced more expositors than the kindred theory of the identity of the North American Indians with the Ten Tribes. Started by the eccentric Richard Brothers early in the last century, it is said to have now 2,000,000 adherents in Britain and the United States.

There is but one step from Anglo-Israelism to another peculiar class of literature which may be mentioned here. In numerous publications there are attempts to show that the Hebrew Prophets predicted the world war, as well as its minutest operations, and its final outcome. They lay under contribution Ezekiel's descriptions of the wars of Gog and Magog, Daniel's allegorical four beasts, his seventy weeks and other oracular time divisions, the well-advertised Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, and its Battle of Armageddon, and many other similar passages of the sacred writings. Eighty-two titles of such books and articles are listed in the public catalogue. As a Judeo-Aramaic saying has it: There is nothing to which Scripture does not allude.

DIVISION OF SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

On December 1st the former divisions of science and technology were consolidated as the Division of Science and Technology, with quarters occupying practically all of the north end of the first floor (Rooms 115, 117, 118, 120 and 121). Administration of the separate divisions having proved the futility of trying to draw a rigid line between pure and applied science, it seemed advisable to rearrange the material, bring together related subjects, and consolidate the two catalogues, with their 450,000 cards.

In Room 115 is shelved much of the former science collection. To this have been added the books on mining and metallurgy, which are thus brought into closer relation with the works on geology. Astronomy, a large but little-used section, has been placed in the main stacks, while chemistry, as noted below, is now in a separate room.

Room 117 has been set aside as a reading room for current technical and scientific periodicals. About twenty sets of the most widely-used periodicals are also shelved here. Room 118 is a new section in which all of the works on chemistry are brought together.

In Room 121 are the works on engineering, with the addition of a section on theoretical electricity. The bulk of the patents collection, formerly shelved in this room, has been removed to the adjoining part of the main stacks, although all of the United States patents, as well as the British patents for the last 10 years, still remain.

The work of consolidating the two catalogues is well under way. When completed it will be installed in the north corridor of the first floor.

ECONOMICS DIVISION

The outstanding event, not only of the year 1919, but of the entire history of the Economics Division, was the enlargement of space assigned to it, made possible by the merging of the Science and Technology Divisions. The new rooms provide a quiet and satisfactory reading room for about sixty persons, as well as increased shelf space greatly needed, especially for current periodicals and government publications. The added space also gives the Division a larger room for the accommodation of readers carrying on researches, and for those whose work requires the use of typewriters.

PERIODICALS DIVISION

The number of readers for 1919 is less than for 1918, though the titles called for and periodicals given out show an increase. One cause for the falling off in number of readers may be the transfer, during the year 1918, of several hundred titles to the Economics and Science Divisions. The statistics show a decrease in these subjects. The revision of the list of magazines on the shelves accessible to the public, placing there periodicals with a more popular range of subjects, may have satisfied more of the casual readers.

The increase in periodicals and titles given out, and the falling off in numbers of readers, indicate a larger amount of material used by each reader, which may be interpreted to mean more research work. A reader looking up the history of the macaroni and noodle industry in this country wanted whole files. An exporter wanted the exporters' and importers' journals of all countries — the foreign trade journals in his line of goods, and also the shipping journals. Present economic conditions have led to a wider interest in world trade and world affairs. This has increased the demand for foreign periodicals, especially the trade journals. Business houses have more than ever come to us for lists of foreign trade journals in order to subscribe.

We have added 334 new titles to our collection during the year, 133 of which are foreign. Our collection of Latin-American periodicals has been revised during the year by Dr. Peter H. Goldsmith, director of the Inter-American Division of the American Association for International Conciliation, and should now represent the best in those countries.

NEWSPAPER DIVISION

The readers in the Newspaper Division seem to be divided into three classes. First, those who consult newspapers simply for the purpose of absorbing news. Then, those who use papers for business purposes, such as the compilation of statistics. The third class use newspapers as a source from which to obtain atmosphere and local color for a biography, a novel, a moving-picture scenario or a play.

An interesting piece of work done in this division during 1919, was the "Headline History of the World War," compiled by a former newspaper man, who took the files of New York City newspapers as the basis of his compilation. The publicity man of a moving picture firm which is shortly to present a film version of notable stage successes, consulted back files of papers for criticisms of these plays to use in advertising the films.

This division now receives currently 380 domestic and 115 foreign newspapers. This number includes 153 domestic and 30 foreign papers given by the United States Rubber Company. Nearly every foreign country is now represented by one or more papers on file in the Newspaper Division.

The total number of readers who made written application for newspapers was 126,161, an average of 346 daily. The total number of volumes consulted was 157,242, a daily average of 431. This is an increase of 17.2 per cent in readers and of 23 per cent in volumes, over the preceding year.

These figures apply only to persons filing written applications for newspapers and do not include the large number of readers who make use of the papers on the newspaper racks. The list of papers displayed on these racks is given in the Appendix.

MUNICIPAL REFERENCE LIBRARY

The Municipal Reference Library has been collecting every type of civic publication that might be of interest to the civics teachers, or their students, in connection with the new courses in the public schools of New York City. As a result of a plan entered into with Mr. Frank A. Rexford, in general charge of civics work for the Board of Education, the Library supplied over 6,000 civic documents which were sent to the city's high schools to form the nucleus of a civics library in each school. Between 400 and 500 pamphlets and leaflets on municipal subjects were mailed to the Branch Libraries. A questionnaire-study of the civic work of the public schools in other large American cities was made and this information was placed at the disposal of civics teachers and of a special State Committee investigating methods of instruction. Finally a selected list of books on the government of New York City was compiled for publication in the bulletin issued by the Library of the Board of Education.

GIFTS

Gifts of manuscripts have already been described in the section devoted to the Manuscript Division. Other gifts have been recorded throughout the year in the Bulletin. Of the important gifts of books and other material, the following are notable:

From Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fletcher McGrew, Scranton, Pa., a collection of books on poultry raising, including: Illustrated Poultry Record, volumes 1-6, London, 1908-1913; Birds, a monthly serial, illustrated by color photography, volumes 1-10, Chicago, 1896-1901; and others, comprising 333 volumes, and 35 pamphlets.

From Mrs. Charles F. W. Mielatz, of New York, Etched Views of New York and vicinity, by the late Charles F. W. Mielatz, 42 prints in all.

From Professor Henry Fairfield Osborn, of New York, N. Y., a collection of 56 periodicals, 2 posters, 2 broadsides, and 7 leaflets, comprising: Private News Letters, translations from Russian papers, published by H. Custis Vezey at Petrograd, March - May, 1917, number 573-578; Bulletins of the Petrograd Soviet; and others.

From Mrs. Hamilton Rice, Elkins Park, Pa., A catalogue of the works illustrated by George Cruikshank and Isaac and Robert Cruikshank, in the Library of Harry Elkins Widener, by A. S. W. Rosenbach, privately printed at Philadelphia in 1918; a catalogue of the books and manuscripts of Harry Elkins Widener, by A. S. W. Rosenbach, 2 volumes, privately printed at Philadelphia in 1918; a catalogue of the writings of Charles Dickens, in the Library of Harry Elkins Widener, by A. S. W. Rosenbach, privately printed at Philadelphia in 1918.

From I. N. Phelps Stokes, Esq., of New York, The Iconography of Manhattan Island, 1498-1909, by I. N. Phelps Stokes, New York, 1918, volume 3.

From Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, of New York, "The Wartburg. A Monument of German History and Art," restored by the Grand-Duke Charles Alexander of Saxony, described in monographs by the Grand-Duke Charles Alexander of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach...and in 706 original illustrations, in the Text and in 54 Plates, under the direction of the Editor, Max Baumgärter. The English translation, by G. A. Greene.

From Rodman Wanamaker, Esq., of New York, "S. Marks Church, Philadelphia, and its lady chapel, with an account of its history and treasures," by the Rector, the Reverend Alfred Mortimer. New York, privately printed 1909.

From Brooks Adams came two privately printed works of the late Henry Adams, one A letter to American teachers of history (1910), the other the study of Samoa called Memoirs of Arii Taimai, etc. (1901.)

From Miss Grace Bigelow, Highland Falls, N. Y., New York Times, 1857-1865, inclusive, and July, August and September, 1869; France. Affaires Etrangères. Organisation du Departement des...1865-1843; and others, 195 volumes, 508 pamphlets and 57 sheets in all.

From Señor Don Ventura García Calderón, Paris, France, Reliquias de José García Calderón † en Verdun, el 5 de Mayo de 1916, containing Dibujos de José García Calderón. Paris, 1917: Francia, 22 dibujos, Italia, 2 dibujos, Alemania 3 dibujos, España, 16 dibujos. Ocho dibujos publicados en "La Gazette du Bon Ton" de Paris.

From Lady Helen Carnegie, Perthshire, Scotland, Catalogue of the Collection of Antique Gems formed by James Ninth Earl of Southesk K. T., edited by his daughter Lady Helena Carnegie, in two volumes. Vol. 1, 2. London, 1918.

PUBLICATIONS

The Branch Library News was reduced in 1919 from a monthly to a quarterly publication. The News is a publication of the Circulation Department, and hence suffered from the effects of the decreased municipal appropriation for the Library for 1919. At first it was hoped to increase its size, so as to make up, in part, for the lessened frequency of appearance. But after the first two numbers were issued, even this was found impossible of continuance and a return to the former size — 16 pages — became necessary.

The other periodical publications, the Bulletin, with its reprints, New Technical Books, Municipal Reference Library Notes, Library School Notes, etc., have appeared as usual.

The "Census of Fifteenth Century Books Owned in America," compiled by a committee of the Bibliographical Society of America, which appeared serially in the Bulletin from April to December, 1918, with addenda in August, 1919, was printed in the Library as a separate, in September, 1919, but at the expense of the Bibliographical Society.

Two extra publications of the year were the circulars: "Questions About Your Library" and "Does New York Know New York? Its Library, for Instance." The first is designed to correct misinformation, and the latter, reprinted from a newspaper article by a visiting journalist, shows an outsider's opinion of the Library. In addition to the distribution of these in the reading rooms and Branch Libraries, about five thousand copies of each were mailed to a selected list of citizens and organizations. Another circular of the same series, "Why They Came to the Library," was distributed in the same manner early in the present year.

The Library's thanks are due to the newspapers of New York City for their increasing tendency to print accurate and interesting articles about the Library. Perhaps in no previous year has the press given more attention to the Library than in the one just ended, — and the articles have been of a character calculated to help us in our public service.

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

The number of volumes issued for home use by the Circulation Department, through its 43 Branch Libraries, the Extension Division including 6 sub-branches, and the Library for the Blind, was 9,892,648, a gain of nearly three per cent compared with the previous year. The total recorded number of reference readers in the branch library buildings was 531,881.

The number of volumes added to the Circulation Department was 133,238, but 142,481 were withdrawn or discarded as worn out, leaving the net loss 9,243. The total number of volumes in the Department at the end of the year, therefore, was 1,177,896.

The total number of employees in the Department, including 50 in the Central Circulation Branch and Central Children's Room, on December 31, 1919, was 691.

Of 507 employees in the graded and office service, 125, or 25 per cent, resigned during the year.

The oldest Branch Library, that at 49 Bond Street, was closed on December 31, 1918. This was one of the necessary curtailments of library service enforced by the reduction of its appropriation for library purposes for the year 1919.

The building in which this branch was housed was the third home of the old New York Free Circulating Library. This institution, from which the Circulation Department of the present New York Public Library sprang, was incorporated in March, 1880, and began its work in a room on Thirteenth Street, east of Fourth Avenue. From this room the Library moved first to 36 Bond Street, where it occupied two rooms, and then (on May 1, 1883,) to its final quarters, 49 Bond Street.

The changing conditions of city life, and the shifting of population farther up-town, left the Bond Street Branch in a neighborhood which was increasingly devoted to business, and less a residential section. The circulation of books was therefore naturally less than at many of the other branches, and when the closing of some building was forced upon the Library, the Bond Street Branch was naturally designated, although not without great regret on the part of the Trustees.

The appropriation in the City budget for the Library for 1919 was $72,467 less than that for 1918. This made unavoidable some readjustment in the schedule of expenditures.

Necessary salary increases involved an aggregate increase of $66,000. In order to make this increase and still bring the expenditures within the budget allowance, many changes in addition to the closing of the Bond Street Branch, became necessary. Among them were these:

The staff was reduced by sixty.

The funds available for books were reduced by half.

Third floor reading rooms were closed wherever possible.

Seven reading rooms formerly open until 10 p.m. were closed at 9 p.m.

Jackson Square and Ottendorfer Branches were closed every morning except Saturday.

Reserve privilege on fiction was discontinued.

The purchase of supplies was curtailed.

The Branch Library News was issued quarterly instead of monthly.

The increased use of the Branch Libraries, the reduced funds available for the purchase of books, and the increased cost of books, combined to deplete the stock of books and to cause a serious deterioration in the condition of those available for use at the end of the year.

The reduction in the number of the Staff, and the continued difficulty in filling vacancies, made the strain of conducting the branch service very severe.

On December 28, 1917, the City took title to a plot of ground in the Fordham district on which a branch library was to be erected from funds provided by Andrew Carnegie. The plot is about 200 feet north of Fordham Road, and runs through from Bainbridge to Marion Avenues, with a frontage of 76 feet. War conditions made building impracticable at that time. Although the cost of building is still very high, the architects — Messrs. McKim, Mead & White — are preparing plans and specifications for the Fordham Branch; and it now seems probable that building operations will begin in the spring of 1920.

WORK WITH CHILDREN

The return of four experienced children's librarians, after one or more years of service overseas, to the administrative responsibilities of the children's rooms of three large branch libraries and the work with children of the Extension Division, is perhaps the most important event of the year. Not one of these young women went overseas to do library work, but all have returned to it with added power and a lively interest in what had been accomplished during their absence.

Notwithstanding the impoverished state of the book stock and the reduced staffs of the branch libraries, the year has been marked by a gratifying increase in the use of books in the children's reading rooms, and during the latter months of the year from the circulation shelves.

The Central Children's Room reports many visitors from England, France, Belgium, South America, Mexico, China and Japan. Among these visitors there have been many writers and educators who seemed eager to take back the idea of the free use of the books by children as a new feature of an enlarged educational scheme. This room also reports an increased use of the books by artists and art students and a very close association with the Lincoln School of Teachers' College. During the summer months an exhibit composed of books of French prints, models and other material pertaining to aviation, lent by the Aero Club of America, attracted many visitors to the room.

A new development in the work with schools has grown out of repeated requests for addresses at assemblies in the high schools of Manhattan, The Bronx, and Staten Island. High school students have also been received in classes at the branch libraries and in the Central Building. These students have been told about the Library, beginning with the children's room, with which nearly all of them are familiar as readers, leading on to the use of the entire library system with its varied opportunities. Similar talks have been given to 8th grade classes and to Junior High School groups. There is a growing appreciation on the part of elementary school teachers and principals, of the educational value of the children's rooms, as used by the children themselves, apart from any connection with formal school work. The Library assisted in the preparation of two Syllabi for the Board of Education: The War Syllabus, and a reading list for the 7th, 8th and 9th year classes on the Growth of Democracy. The Supervisor of Work with Schools also served on a Committee of the New York City Association of Teachers of English to prepare a list of books on contemporary literature for High School students. This list has been printed and widely used. The schools have made repeated requests for story telling and talks about books from the children's librarians.

Work with other organizations has been the distinguishing feature for the year of the Library Reading Clubs and story-hour groups. Two years of Red Cross service have been followed by service with the United War Work, the War Camp Community Service and the Community Councils.

The Holiday Book exhibits in the Central Children's Room, at the St. George Branch and other branches, were used more than ever before. The exhibit in the Central Children's Room was opened by Kate Douglas Wiggin on the first day of Children's Book Week. The public interest in the Book Week, aroused by some excellent editorial and other articles on children's reading, and the earlier date of opening the exhibit, attracted an unusually large number of visitors. A printed list of the books recommended was urgently requested for the exhibit in 1920. American books were selected for children in England, South America and Japan.

THE EXTENSION DIVISION

Although the Extension Division was unable to expand in 1919, several features of its work stand out.

It increased the use of books at its 391 agencies. The Sub-Branch at Van Nest Avenue was moved to more spacious quarters, and is experiencing increased popularity. The tiny Fordham Sub-Branch is so filled with children as to be overcrowded. At Columbia University the Sub-Branch is taxed by the great student body. Its record month was July, when it gave out 5,043 books, and "saved our lives," the students declared.

In Staten Island isolated schools are now made the source of book supply. Collections have been placed in eleven of the twenty-two schools on the Island. In February the reading room at New York University Library, previously used by the S. A. T. C., was opened to the public. It also attracts the University corps, from chancellor to night watchman.

Lack of funds necessitated withdrawing from factories and business houses. However, the pioneer work of the Division proved so conclusively the value of books as welfare equipment that many of the business houses have now established their own libraries for their employees.

Perhaps the most interesting use of books is at such agencies as employment bureaus, fire and police stations, and community clubs, where the books are read on the premises and not counted as circulation. The return on the use of these books is immeasurable.

INTERBRANCH LOAN OFFICE

In addition to its regular work the Interbranch Loan Office has compiled special lists of books for out-of-town readers and for other libraries, upon the following subjects: Accounting (2); Indexing and filing; Coal mining; Banks and banking (2); Dyeing; Textiles; Law; Books on Chaucer written since 1908 in Reference and Circulation Department; Finance (2); Typewriting; Efficiency; Success; Business correspondence; Vocational guidance (2); Capital; Labor; Tariff; Mental defectives; Books in Spanish by English and American authors; Manual training; Pottery; the Talmud; Technical books on the automobile; Voice culture; Checkers; English for foreigners; Teaching citizenship to foreigners; Profit sharing; Spiritualism and psychic phenomena; Agriculture, economic conditions, and commerce of the Philippines; Municipal government; Artificial flowers; Relations between China and Japan; Infant mortality; Sanitation; House decoration; House building; Short-hand texts (2); The family; Ghost stories; Exporting; Foreign exchange; Credit; Currency; Fire prevention; Educational dramatics; Americanization (three lists on related subjects); Works of J. Ayscough; Cardinal Newman; R. A. Cram; W. D. Steele; M. Corelli; M. G. Marchesi; W. Pett Ridge; S. Asch, in Russian; Andreyev, in Russian and English; Plays in Bohemian by Halek-Kolar Vrchilicky; Books on algebra by A. Schultze; Books on the life of J. C. Calhoun; Titles in French by Clemenceau.

This report is compiled from more extensive reports of the staff officers. No such favorable account of progress under untoward conditions could be given had not the work of the staff been loyal and intelligent throughout the year.

Respectfully Submitted,

E. H. ANDERSON,

Director.

BUILDING SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT

FOR THE YEAR ENDING DECEMBER 31, 1919

During the year 1919 there were 2,478,626 visitors in the building as against 2,528,657 in 1918. There were not as many parades on Fifth Avenue as in the previous year, but the year is noteworthy on account of great commercial and manufacturing activity. Visitors who formerly came as sightseers now come to read, as the crowded condition of reading rooms indicates.

The cost of operating the building was $103,035.76, as against $89,382.70 in 1918, and it was difficult to secure labor and supplies. To this cash expenditure must be added $1,200.00 worth of electric lamps purchased the year before and used, also $42,600.00 for building repairs furnished by the city. To use these figures in a comparative sense and to determine the cost and efficiency in operating the building, the above figures may be analyzed by the following distribution of cost.

To clean 358,400 square feet of floor space and 35,800 square feet of glass, cost $26,422.28, of which $24,664.07 is labor.

To provide guards at three entrances from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m., three guards for picture galleries, one guard for each of three floors, and two night watchmen, costs $7,947.07. To provide coat room facilities for two entrances costs $3,501.32. To operate three elevators costs $2,866.83, but on account of lack of men one car was often not running. The cost for public conveniences, such as lavatory attendant, matrons, paper towels, soap, ice water in the summer, etc., was $5,659.71. Uniforms are usually worn two years, and last year summer-uniforms were provided and cost $864.19, including some overalls for porters.

In analyzing the above figures to the cost per man, it must be borne in mind that on account of the scarcity of labor the duties at the stations were often filled by porters working overtime, or by women, and a constant change of employees made a routine of duties impossible, except by the doorman and night watchman whose faithful services are acknowledged.

The cost of light, heat, and power amounted to $52,259.04, and 1,329,580 kilowatt-hours of electric current were generated, at an average cost of 2.2 cents per kilowatt hour.

The engineers' department includes: generating plant, carrying from 600 to 1,600 amperes to 240 volts from 8 a. m. to 10:30 p. m. daily; storage battery to light building the rest of the time; hot and cold water supply system; ice water system; filter plant; vacuum cleaning system; pneumatic tube system; compressed air system; ventilating supply and exhaust system; sewage pumping plant; internal signal and 'phone system; elevators and booklifts.

A charge of $22,999.18 is made against heating the building. The heating plant includes both a direct and indirect system, with tempering apparatus for 10,380,000 cubic feet content. A survey of cost per hundred cubic feet for heat, varied from 30 cents to $1.00 per year in New York before the war.

The expenditure on repairs and alterations was $42,600.00, which is provided by the city, besides $2,500.00 furnished by a trustee for the extension of the women's lunch room into the south court. There were $24,047.00 spent on labor and $18,453.00 for material. The most notable repair was the installation of two new Alberga hot water heaters to replace others which leaked and had worn out.

The roof of the building is of copper. A copper roof in this climate with the cinder precipitation of the neighborhood is very expensive and unreliable. $5,000.00 of the above was expended to repair and make raised seams on the roof.

For minor repairs partitions and bookstacks were built; desk room, lighting and locker space were provided to satisfy the demand by readers.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of February, 1920, the Library received as gifts a total of 1,642 volumes, 3,619 pamphlets, 88 maps and 76 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

From the Estate of Virginia P. Bacon came two privately printed catalogues of paintings and of Chinese art objects in the collection of Edward R. Bacon; from Señor Raimundo Cabrera, of Havana, Cuba, came a collection of bound periodicals (51 volumes), including "Cuba y America" and "El Tiempo, Boletín Semanal de la Revista Cuba y America"; from Mrs. Andrew Carnegie came a miscellaneous collection of 312 volumes and 60 pamphlets; from Mr. M. Gregory, of New York, came a copy of Robert's "Chester Guide, with forty-six engravings and an illustrated plan of the city revised by John Hicklin," Chester, 1860; and from Mrs. William H. Walker, of New York, two volumes (in portfolio), of "Wild Flowers of New England, photographed from nature and published by Edwin Hale Lincoln," Pittsfield, Mass., 1914.

The following gifts of prints were received: From Mr. Joseph G. Butler, jr., of Youngstown, Ohio, a copy of an etched portrait of himself by W. G. Reindel; from Mr. Paul Dougherty, of New York, three of his etchings ("Wooded Landscape," "Cedars," "Shipyard"); from Mrs. Mabel Hyde Gillette and Mrs. Hallie Hyde Irwin, of Pasadena, Cal., 17 woodcuts by Helen Hyde, given in memory of Helen Hyde by her sisters; from Mr. Eugene Higgins, of New York, two of his etchings ("The Forgotten Trench" and "A Bit of an Old Farm"); from Mr. J. J. Lankes, of Gardenville, New York, two of his woodcuts ("Abraham Lincoln" and "Tavern"); from Mr. Vincenzo Pandolfi, of New York, one of two proofs of his etching, "La Romantica"; from Mr. W. G. Reindel, of Euclid, Ohio, a copy of his etching, "Indian Summer"; and from Mr. Rudolph Ruzicka, of New York, copies of two of his etchings, "Hudson River at Ardsley" and "The Elephant."

During the month there were received as gifts a large number of regimental and divisional histories, official war maps, and books of war poetry.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN FEBRUARY, 1920

DURING the month of February, 1920, there were received at the Library 19,173 volumes and 3,953 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 82,050. They consulted 197,398 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 228,594.

AMERICAN ETCHINGS OF TO-DAY

ETCHING is with us to-day. Ever since the impulse toward original etching which this country witnessed during the eighties of the last century, the movement thus inaugurated has persisted. Not always vigorously, but on the whole with increasing force. To-day the art flourishes in a manner heartening and, in a measure, perhaps also calling for caution, for fear of overdoing. As Rajon once said, "It is so easy, so very easy, to make an etching, and so hard, so very hard, to make a good one." A review of present achievement seems timely. Hence the arrangement of an exhibition of "American Etchings of To-day" in the Print Gallery of The New York Public Library, on view during March and April.

The older movement, — the initial one — referred to, had organized expression in the old New York Etching Club. It projected into the present day activity in etching a number of artists, of whom some (such as C. F. W. Mielatz, recently deceased,) carried their practice of the art into a rich maturity in these later times, while others (such as the late J. Alden Weir, and C. A. Platt and Stephen Parrish) laid aside the etching needle. Their work and that of Mary Cassatt, A. Schilling and the late C. A. Vanderhoof and A. T. Millar, must find its place in an exhibition such as this.

The Painter Gravers of America, Brooklyn Society of Etchers, New York Etching Club, Chicago Society of Etchers form rallying points to-day. The more recent arrivals include artists of various minds, moods and degrees of ability. They illustrate the adaptability of the etched line to figure pieces, portraits, landscapes, city scenes, architecture and still life. They exemplify the interest of home scenes and the lure of old world subjects. They show the influence of great individual masters of art, — Rembrandt, Whistler, Meryon — evidenced in that gradation of variations lying between imitation and adaptation. They offer the incisive line in pure etching, the velvety richness of drypoint, the quivering crayon-like stroke of soft-ground etching. They give us the etched line in the clearness of the "clean wipe," or clothed in the gauze of retroussage or the heavier garments of aquatint. They demonstrate the possibilities of color in prints. They give the choice of technical dexterity and of a personal force that thrusts back technique into its proper place as a language.

All of this is presented in the non-committal arrangement of a strictly alphabetical sequence. No emphasis of position on the wall except the fortuitous one brought about by the chance coincidence of a given alphabetical place and a given place on the wall.

The prints are there and the public finds not the suspicion of an attempt to guide or admonish. That is, beyond the actual choice of the prints, and with that it may be easy to take issue on the score that this or that other example by an artist would have been more representative. Other prints might have been shown, and the choice of artists might have varied. But the exhibition, on the whole, gives a fair idea of what American etching of to-day has to offer and what it promises for the future.

CHRIST IN ART

(NOTES ON THE JOHN POWELL LENOX COLLECTION)

THE Art Division of the Library has, from the beginning, tried to satisfy the public interest in Bible pictures. These were to be found, not only in illustrated books, but in separate prints of all kinds, which could be arranged and classified so that a request for illustrations of a given Bible scene or portrait could be answered promptly and to some degree fully. Thus, a useful collection of pictures (especially of the Saviour) was being formed, supplemented by a classified lot of titles in the card catalogue, referring to numerous plates in books, or prints in portfolios shelved apart from the Bible collection, with such specialties, for instance, as "persepios" listed under Nativity. And now, at one stroke, through the generosity of Mr. John Powell Lenox, of Oak Park, Ill., there has come to the Library a wonderful body of pictorial documents dealing entirely with the life of Christ. The result of a quarter of a century of patient collecting, on the part of Mr. Lenox, these pictures, several thousand in number, are mounted in fifteen finely bound volumes with the general title "Christus in Arte." The prints are arranged in the order of accession, but the donor has prepared a card index of painters.

In this collection may be traced the development of the portraiture of Christ from the early representations in the Catacombs of Rome, down through the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, and to modern times. The history of art, with all the kaleidoscopic changes in outlook and tendencies which make up the development of this field of mental activity, is reflected to a great extent in this body of Christian portraiture.

As to the question of actual life portraits of our Lord, nothing stronger than legend or tradition seems to have been adduced to support the claims of such productions as the reputed portrait by St. Luke or the sudarium of Veronica bearing the impression of the holy face. At all events, this is not the place to enter on any discussion of this question, in which one has the choice between F. W. Farrar contra and Wyke Bayliss pro authenticity of likeness. One interesting and significant fact remains, and that is, that down throughout the changes of time and country during nineteen centuries a certain definite type of face prevails and persists.

F. W. Farrar finds that "the primitive Christians shrank from any direct presentment of the human Christ," and, in fact, entire realism did not come until the Renaissance. Meanwhile, in the words of Raoul Rochette, "an art is not improvised," and the early Christian art grew from that of antiquity. The earliest pictures of Christ, then, were, as Lanciani says, "ideal and symbolic in character, conventional types," Orpheus charming the animals being a particularly favorite pattern. These, as well as the various statues of Christ as the Good Shepherd, are beardless. About the fourth century artists passed from these classical forms to realistic portrayal taking on the familiar face which has persisted. For some centuries the ideal of Christ was expressed in the stereotyped and rigid conventionality of Byzantine art as we know it, for instance, in mosaics. With the dawn of the Renaissance the presentation of Christ took on, with Giotto and Masaccio, a vital reality which, as this great period burst into its full bloom, developed into a life, a spirituality which marks the best of the pictures of the Saviour treasured by the world to-day.

There have been numerous efforts to express the ideal face, with a great variety brought about by the natural influence of period, nationality and individual viewpoint, joined to the great body of tradition lying back of the artist in each case. Maxwell, in his "Annals of Spanish Art," says: "In the hands of Roman artists the Saviour is often little more than a beautiful Apollo copied from the marbles of Greece; at Venice, a noble personage of the blood of Barberigo or Contarini; while in the later and feebler school of Bologna His beauty sinks into effeminacy, and the Man-God into a mere mortal Adonis."

As we look through a collection of pictures such as this we see the ascetic Christ give place to the more saintly type, then with the Renaissance beauty of lineaments is accentuated, the appeal of physical suffering is made with a loss of higher spiritual import, and finally in our present times we have seen efforts to treat scenes in the life of Christ with realism and modernity and yet a preservation of natural dignity and sanctity of the subject. It is, of course, natural, as the pictures pass before one, to note characteristics of individual artists, — the "majestic calm" (to quote Sir Martin Conway) of Hubert van Eyck's regal Christ; the devotional feeling of Fra Angelico and Bartolommeo; the austerity of Mantegna; "the conflict of the impulses of Christianity and Hellenism" in Botticelli; the "spiritual feeling" of Da Vinci's conception for the "Last Supper"; the rugged, sculptural effect of Verrocchio; the masculinity of Michel Angelo (in contrast to the languorous effeminacy so often met with); the moving pathos of Guido Reni's famous "Ecce Homo," which, true product of the decadence, skirts bathos in its effort to inspire emotion; the strong realism of Velasquez ("Christ Scourged"); the nobility and naturalism, product of devotion, of Juan Juanes; and above all, perhaps, the tender sympathetic humanity of Rembrandt's "Supper at Emmaus" (giving, as La Farge said, "both the fact and the mystery"), a scene with all the spiritual content which, in similar pictures by the great Italians, is often lacking, lost in the imposing magnificence of the setting. Or, dealing with the artists in national groups, one notes preponderance of characterization over beauty in old Flemish art; the gaunt, at times cadaverous, countenance presented by the early artists of the Netherlands and Germany; the displacement of the ascetic Christ by the beautiful one in Venetian art; the somewhat sensuous expressiveness of the Italian High Renaissance, which could take on the sickly beauty of a Barroccio (over against which one might set the crass, agonizing realism of fifteenth century Grünewald); the robust conceptions fathered by Rubens and Van Dyck; the austere solemnity, tending to the morbid, of the old Spanish school; or the rather sentimental attitude of certain nineteenth century artists, which again trails into such quite personal conceptions as Holman Hunt's figure of Christ the carpenter throwing the shadow of the cross as He stretches Himself at the end of His day's work. In our own day we have seen also, in the works of Beraud, Uhde and others, the placing of the traditional Christ figure in modern surroundings, as did the earlier painters in their day.

In all the long record of pictorial illustration of Christ and His ministry, from the Nativity to the Crucifixion and Ascension, with the widely varied play of artistic imagination directed at the realization of the features of the Saviour, there is emphasized the old truth stated again by J. R. Aitken: "However sure the touch, or wise the hand, heart counts more than hand, and soul than touch. If there be no sureness of life, and no wisdom of deeds, the hand is curbed and the vision marred. If there be no lifting of the heart and the life, the highest skill will not avail." Thus we have come to the fundamental principle in all art, that it is the artist behind the work that counts; as Millet said, "the artist must be moved himself." Here particularly, in these attempts to realize the character of one who, even apart from any divine attributes, stands to-day as the very embodiment of human sympathies and noble aspirations, the artist inevitably reveals himself and to a great extent his time. For as all art worth while is an expression of time and place, so these many representations of Christ reflect the mental attitude of their day, — in not a few cases the racial characteristics of the painter. In the end, therefore, humanity's soul is bared in these conceptions of the Saviour, and so these pictures illustrate in their way a large section of the history of human development.

THE HARRIS LETTERS

MRS. Thomas A. Janvier of South Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, has given the Library an interesting collection of letters, written to her and to her mother, Mrs. Sandwith Drinker, by Hon. Townsend Harris during his sojourn in Japan as our first Consul General and, later, as our first Minister. The earliest is dated November 21, 1856, and the last — written shortly after his return to the United States — October 29, 1862. Their style is delightful, and they contain narrative and description which is not in his Journal as printed by Dr. William E. Griffis in his "Townsend Harris" (Boston, 1895). These — with the exception of an occasional comment — do not relate to diplomatic affairs, but to the scenery, the customs of the people and his estimate of their character, his daily life and the difficulties and hardships and loneliness which he endured, and the ceremonials which were attendant on his intercourse with local officials and the Imperial Government. The present and ever increasing importance of the Far East in world affairs gives especial interest to all information concerning the years in which our intercourse with Japan was beginning. Our knowledge of those days from European sources is slight, at best, and this enhances the value of the letters of so experienced an observer as Mr. Harris. These facts, also, make valuable his brief comments on diplomatic affairs and on his European colleagues when they had followed him to Tokio.

The first letter contains a description and plan of the house at Shimoda which was assigned to Mr. Harris as a residence and is accompanied by two india ink sketches — one a view of Shimoda, the other an exterior view of the Consulate, really our first legation in Japan — by Mr. Henry C. J. Heusken, the devoted Secretary and Interpreter of the Consulate and Legation. Another letter describes his first journey to Tokio, his ceremonial entry into the city — when the American flag, the first foreign flag to fly in Yedo, was carried in the procession which attended him — his interviews with the Imperial officials, and his state presentation to the Emperor. Still another refers to the gift of a snuff-box from Queen Victoria — with it is correspondence of Mrs. Janvier with Dr. William E. Griffis and Professor Brander Matthews concerning the disappearance of the box after Mr. Harris' death.

All the letters are supplied with notes by Mrs. Janvier, which add materially to their value by identifying persons and explaining allusions.

GIFTS

DURING the month of March, 1920, the Library received as gifts a total of 3,318 volumes, 5,448 pamphlets, 505 maps and 139 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

Mr. John Powell Lenox of Oak Park, Illinois, gave to the Library his "Christ in Art" Collection, consisting of fifteen large leather-bound albums of reproductions of paintings and sculpture. Mr. Lenox had been collecting these photographs and prints for a period of about twenty-five years.

Two rare and important items of early Americana were received as gifts: from Mr. Edward W. Sheldon, "Indian Treaty Proceedings," New York, Parker & Wyman, 1757; and from Mr. William Sloane, "A Sermon preached at Plimmoth in New England, Dec. 9, 1621 [by Robert Cushman]," London, 1622. Mrs. Howard Townsend and Mrs. R. P. Carroll presented a collection of 130 letters and documents (including 4 on parchment) and 63 deeds, being chiefly the papers of James Hamilton and Alexander Hamilton, Junior, also two maps and 126 letters and documents in the Polari Case 1831-32, etc.

From the Library of Henry E. Huntington came a photostat facsimile of "The Book of Lauues and Libertyes concerning the inhabitants of the Massachusetts, collected out of the records of the General Court for the several years wherein they were made and established," Boston, 1647, Cambridge, 1648; from Mrs. Isaac N. Seligman came "The Journals of Washington Irving (from July, 1815 - July, 1842) edited by William P. Trent and George S. Hellman," 3 v., Boston, 1919 (printed by the Bibliophile Society from the original manuscript journals belonging to the collection of the late Isaac N. Seligman); from the Baron Shibusawa, Tokyo, Japan, through the courtesy of the Hon. Theodore E. PAINTERS

These books are brought together for the sole reason that they deal each with an individual artist. But the subjects range from Spain of old to present-day Arabia, and include such contrasts as Cézanne and Titian, Guys and Giordano. The wide possibilities in painting are thus accented, as well as the resources of the Library's Art Division.

THE WASHINGTON IRVING COLLECTION

FORMED BY ISAAC N. SELIGMAN

BY GEORGE S. HELLMAN

THERE has been placed upon exhibition in The New York Public Library the collection of manuscripts, books, drawings and engravings relating to Washington Irving, formed by the late Isaac N. Seligman. It was presented to Mrs. Seligman during the life of the collector, and is now lent by her to the Library for an indefinite period. It is peculiarly appropriate that this great collection, relating to one of New York's most eminent authors, should be shown in the Library of which the old Astor Library forms a part, since Washington Irving was the first President of the Astor.

Irving was Mr. Seligman's favorite author; the kindly humor and generous philosophy which characterized the life and writings of Irving were also traits of his admirer, as Mr. Seligman's friends and kinsmen well know.

At Irvington, Mr. Seligman had spent many of the summers of his younger life on the old Barney estate, not far from Sunnyside, Irving's home; and in his later years, he bought the tract of land adjoining Sunnyside, and made his home in the old house which had once belonged to Irving's uncle, in which the author had played as a boy. Willowbrook, the little stream celebrated in Irving's pages, provided the name for Mr. Seligman's estate, and Sunnyside Lane, so familiar to all lovers of Irving, makes its leisurely way past the grounds of the Irving and Seligman homes, ending its journey in view of the Hudson. At Irvington, where his favorite author died, Mr. Seligman's life came to an end.

The collection thus represents far more than the usual hobby, and is intimately interwoven with personal associations, characteristics and predilections. Mr. Seligman loved those traditions of the Hudson and of New York City, which Irving, more than any other writer, has perpetuated. He held in warm affection Irving, the man, as revealed in all his delightful books and letters. It may well be questioned whether any other collection has ever been formed for more intimate and appealing reasons.

How variously, over a number of years, all these Irving rarities came into Mr. Seligman's possession would make too long a story. While I had the pleasure of aiding my uncle in acquiring the major portion, his enthusiasm as an Irving collector was widely known, and both from obvious and out of the way sources Irving material came to his eager attention. The series of forty-two Irving journals came from Mr. Irving Van Wart, the grand-nephew of the author, as similarly the magnificent series of letters from Irving to Henry Brevoort came from Mr. Grenville Kane, Brevoort's grandson. These two items are to my mind the gems, although others may lay more stress on the manuscripts of famous books. When they were acquired by Mr. Seligman, they had never been published. Some collectors would have wished to keep them for themselves; or, perhaps, had them printed privately for the delectation of a small circle of friends. But Mr. Seligman's public spirit led him to prefer that this wealth of material should be presented for the enjoyment of many readers; and this resulted in the publication of the Irving-Brevoort Correspondence, by Messrs. G. P. Putnam's Sons, who had been Irving's publishers during his lifetime; and the publication of the Journals by the Bibliophile Society. With the journals an arrangement was made so as to have them when printed presented to a number of public libraries and universities of America.

The eleven cases, in Room 112, near the main entrance of the Library, now contain the treasures which their former owner took such pleasure in showing to friends at his Irvington home. In the first case are the Ms. journals describing Irving's tour in France, Italy and Sicily in 1804-1805. There are two other such journals of travels relating to this first visit to Europe, and these three, together with a fourth in the possession of Mr. W. A. White, are unpublished Mss. that may soon be issued in book form by the Grolier Club. Irving drew on these journals in writing letters home, and for the most part they constitute a hitherto unknown record of his earliest adventures and experiences in European countries, and may be regarded as his first extensive undertaking as a man of letters. A notebook, mainly concerning London and Paris, with various original drawings by Irving himself, including a sketch of himself shaving, belongs to the year 1805-1806. Irving at one time seriously considered making art his career, and many of his journals of travel are interspersed with pencil and pen-and-ink sketches. Thus he is of a class with authors like Thackeray, Kipling, Stevenson, Dickens, and Victor Hugo, who had a talent for drawing; and this is evident in the journal of his tour through Wales, with its many sketches of scenery and castles. This journey, undertaken in 1817, with his friend, James Renwick, who later became a professor at Columbia College, is the subject of the first of the twenty-four Mss. published by the Bibliophile Society in 1919. Passing by with mere mention a few other Ms. books containing thoughts, anecdotes, excerpts, verses, landscape sketches, and records of his travels in England and France (in all, four volumes of the years 1817-1820) we come to the second case. In this are displayed the entire series of Ms. journals kept by Irving during his travels in Germany, Austria and Bohemia, in the years 1822-1823. So much new light has been thrown upon Irving by the publication of these Mss. that it is difficult to emphasize all the special points. His interest in the drama, both as a translator of plays, as an incipient author, and as an amateur actor; his intentness on acquiring new languages, ultimately leading him to know something of German, Italian, Spanish and Arabic, as well as possessing a considerable knowledge of French; his adaptability in all circles of society, from peasant life to royal courts, are all manifested here. But perhaps, humanly considered, the most important revelation in these journals lies in the incontrovertible evidence that, at Dresden, Irving proposed marriage to a young English girl, named Emily Foster, and was made intensely unhappy by her refusal. This fact was suppressed by Irving's biographer and nephew, Pierre M. Irving, who chose to perpetuate the legend that Irving's love for Matilda Hoffman, who died during the days of their engagement, led him to decide upon a life of bachelorhood.

The third case is given over to one English notebook (1824); five journals (1824-1826) written in France; and two (1826-1829) written in Spain. Three of these Mss. books belong entirely to Paris days, and are full of details concerning hours of work and of social relaxations. Names famous in literature figure intimately therein, Irving's tastes causing him to have friends of every nature. Although "The Sketch Book" had brought him European fame — he was the first American author to acquire distinction outside his native land — Irving retained his characteristic modesty, and there is in these journals, written of course for the private eye of their author, no single note of egoism. He is always the simple recorder of little events and of great; his accounts become, however, frequently enriched by reason of the keenness of his observation and the picturesqueness of his style. The customs of the peasantry, legends and ghost stories, recountals of robber-infested roads in Spain, thus add to the interest of the rehearsal of his literary labors and his social doings.

Five other journals are shown in Case 4. These belong to the American period, after his return to his native country which he had not seen for seventeen years. Four of them describe adventures among the American Indians and are the basis of his volume entitled "A Tour of the Prairies." The fifth is a journal of 1842, beginning with his departure from New York to undertake his duties as Minister to Spain. In the same case are an English notebook of the year 1829; and a volume recording Irving's disbursements as Secretary of Legation at London in 1830. This secretaryship was Irving's first diplomatic office. Here, too, is the original Ms. of Irving's translation of Sahagun's "Conquest of Mexico." How Irving (1838-1839) gave up his ambition to write the history of Mexico on learning that Prescott was engaged on a similar work, is recorded in every life of Irving; how greatly his courtesy was appreciated by Prescott is made evident by another Ms. in this collection, wherein Prescott refers to Irving's unselfishness, at the same time furnishing Irving with material for his "Life of Washington."

After viewing these four cases, containing for the most part Irving's journals from the years 1804-1842, we reach the fifth case, with its manuscripts and printed books, drawings by Darley, and unique proofs by Hollyer, of engravings after Darley's drawings, relating to "Knickerbocker's History of New York" and "The Sketch Book." These two works, to which Irving owes his lasting fame, have an unparalleled place in American literature and history. To the former, New York City owes its name of Father Knickerbocker; to the latter is due the debt for the legend of Rip Van Winkle. Such flavor of old times and old traditions, as that in which we who live on the banks of the Hudson still delight, emanates from the pages of these two books.

The English years provide the material shown in Case 6. Here the most important items are the original Ms. of "Oliver Goldsmith," the greatest of Irving's biographical works; and of "Bracebridge Hall," the famous book dealing with English institutions and traditions. A Ms. notebook contains miscellaneous material, the exposed page showing what are said to be unpublished verses by Lord Byron; while first editions of "Tales of a Traveller" and of "Bracebridge Hall," etc., are among the other items displayed here.

The seventh case is devoted entirely to letters written by Irving, between one hundred and fifty and two hundred in all. The most important group, as it is indeed the longest and most fascinating of Irving's correspondences, is the series to Henry Brevoort, Irving's life-long friend and intimate adviser. Fascinating also are the epistles to brothers and sisters and nephews and nieces, of whom Irving was very fond; and to a great number of distinguished men of letters who were his friends, such as Thomas Moore, Lockhart, Allan Cunningham; and to historians and diplomats.

In Case 8 are Mss. of books having to do with Irving's writings on American lands and customs. "Astoria," "Communipaw" (the first essay in "The Book of the Hudson"), "The Tour of the Prairies," "Wolfert's Roost and Other Stories," are here shown in initial or final Ms. form. These books were widely read, Irving having become a great favorite with his countrymen, who had quite forgotten the criticisms that some of their number so unjustifiably directed against Irving for having remained away from America during the greater part of his early manhood. It was now recognized that he, more than any other, had brought Europe to regard with respect that American literature which Europeans had previously neglected or despised; and the letter here shown, signed by many prominent New Yorkers (1832), inviting Irving to a dinner in his honor, together with newspapers of the time, recording the proceedings at this banquet, is but one of the many indications of American pride in Irving.

Writings relating to Spain occupy the ninth case. Here are Mss. notes for Irving's "Life of Mahomet and his Successors," together with presentation copies given by Irving to his nieces, Julia Irving and Sarah Storrow. An original drawing by Darley, illustrating the "Life of Mahomet"; first editions of the "Life and Voyages of Columbus"; Ms. notes of American trade with Spain; and other related items are here. But most interesting to the eye is the Arabic notebook whose exposed pages reveal in picturesque script Irving's studies in the African-Arabic alphabet, the ancient Cufic-Arabic, and Arabic arithmetical cyphers.

Irving's final and most arduous enterprise as an author was the "Life of Washington," and in the tenth case, we have the original Ms. notes for this work, covering two hundred and fifty-two pages; together with various chapters of the fifth and last volume, the only part of the Ms. extant, the first four volumes having been destroyed by a fire at Putnam's. The Ms. notebook for the "Life of Washington"; a Darley drawing illustrating it; the unpublished Prescott letter referred to above; and Irving's letter to an American author, Henry T. Tuckerman, dated Sunnyside, June 8, 1859, and written only a short time before his death, also revolve around Irving's most ambitious undertaking as a biographer.

The last case contains the Grolier Club edition of George William Curtis's "Washington Irving"; memorial volumes and books of essays on Irving, with Mss. and rare prints and documents. Here also are privately printed letters from Irving, and the sermons preached in Christ Church, Tarrytown, on Irving's death, and published by request of the vestry.

The walls of the exhibition room are covered by twenty-one frames, containing 84 portraits of Irving, from early manhood to late life, reproduced from paintings and drawings by various American and European artists. Painters and engravers, magazine editors, of England and of America, of France, Germany, Italy and Spain, — all were eager to present the kindly lineaments of this lovable man, who, now that almost a century and a half has passed by since his birth, is still regarded by two continents as one of the most delightful of men of letters, and who, for the great city of New York, will remain for all time its most cherished author.

THE MAKING OF A MEZZOTINT

THE exhibitions — “Making of an Etching,” “Making of a Lithograph,” etc. — which have already been held in the Print Gallery of the Library, have all been well attended and apparently useful. That is partly due, perhaps, to the fact that what was aimed at was not merely a dry exposition of technique. A complete description of the process was given, with the aid of printed matter, tools, plates, or any other exhibits serving the natural interest in “seeing the wheels go ’round.” This was illustrated by the best procurable specimens of the art, thus emphasizing the old truth that technique is a language, and that the important thing is its application.

A similar course has been followed in arranging the exhibition “The Making of a Mezzotint,” to be on view in the Print Gallery until Fall.

First, the manner of production is made clear by tools and materials — copper-plate, rocker, scraper, — with descriptions and illustrations. Then, in a number of fine examples, drawn mainly from the collection bequeathed to the Library by John L. Cadwalader, the peculiar nature of mezzotint, imposed by the process by which it is made, is well and fully illustrated. An art of tones, of masses of light and shade (instead of lines, as is the case in etching or in engraving on copper and steel), mezzotint, with its soft outlines and gradations, was peculiarly adapted to the reproduction of paintings. For this it served particularly in the latter half of the eighteenth century in England, where it was inextricably bound up with the development of that brilliant group of painters including Reynolds, Gainsborough, Hoppner, Romney, Lawrence and the American Gilbert Stuart. Moreover, these mezzotints can hardly be considered apart from that life and art and period of which they are the outcome. They reflect that period of British history so well that the interest of subject is an important factor in their appeal to collectors. They bring before us an imposing array of persons, a gallery of royalty, nobility, statesmen, soldiers, authors, actors, artists, with an especial grace and distinction devoted to the ladies.

In translating into black-and-white the notable achievement of this national school of portraiture, the mezzotinters developed an original energy, creative almost. As one looks over these plates by Smith, McArdell, Jones, Dean, Dickinson, Fisher, Watson, Green, Dixon, and others, the individual expression and style become apparent.

Mezzotint served also to preserve records of the genre painting of the day by George Morland and others. Not a few of these pictures of rural life and sports appeared in color. Caricature was another specialty served by the “black manner,” as the French call it.

A noteworthy application of mezzotint to landscape design is found in J. M. W. Turner’s monumental “Liber Studiorum,” most remarkable in its range of light and shade. And Lucas offered masterly interpretations of Constable.

In our own day, there has been considerable revival of mezzotint, by T. G. Appleton, R. Josey (translator of Whistler), and others, and especially in color-prints, S. Arlent Edwards being prominent in that specialty. Mezzotint lacks the appeal of comparatively easy production which has made etching so pre-eminently a painter-art, a process for original work, — an appeal and quality which have indeed their drawback in leading weaker individualities to facile and inconsequential activity. But mezzotint has nevertheless been wooed by the experimental maker of original prints. By Haden, Sir Frank Short, Alphonse Legros, Pietschmann, James D. Smillie and Hubert Herkomer. They drew much from its rich resources. They availed themselves of its engaging qualities, which are its own, different from the suppleness or incisiveness of etching or lithography. Each art has its limits and possibilities, and finds its best results in the expression of its own nature. What is very briefly indicated in these notes is brought out fully in the exhibition.

THE MIELATZ EXHIBITION

THE memorial exhibition by the late C. F. W. Mielatz in the Stuart Gallery (Room 316) closed on April 15. But it attracted so much attention that the half-hundred etchings by this artist which have recently come into the possession of the Library have been continued on exhibition in the same gallery.

SAMUEL COLMAN'S ETCHINGS

THE Prints Division has placed on exhibition, in the Stuart Gallery (Room 316), its collection of etchings by Samuel Colman, who was identified with that interesting and influential movement of the eighteen-eighties toward original etching. A true painter-etcher, he executed his plates in strong lines and a characteristic and original style.

HELEN HYDE, MAKER OF COLOR PRINTS

THE exhibition of "Recent Additions" to the print collection includes a number of color prints by the late Helen Hyde. To these have been added the prints by her which were already in possession of the Library, as well as some bibliographical material, thus forming a memorial exhibition. Miss Hyde, who lived much in Japan and chose Japanese subjects, caught much of the spirit of the native print-makers and their delicate and subdued color-harmonies, and even won a prize in competition with artists of Nippon. Yet she did not copy slavishly, and while the gesture was Japanese, the language was English.

A YEAR'S ADDITIONS TO THE PRINT COLLECTION

THE annual exhibition of "Recent Additions" to the Prints Division is of the usual and natural miscellaneous character. Its very variety emphasizes the inclusiveness of such a public print collection, the varied interests which it meets.

Important groups are formed by accessions to the Avery and the Cadwalader Collections. The latter has been enriched notably by those wonderful wood-cut illustrations to the Apocalypse, by Duerer, that magnificent and impressive series, "abounding in vitality and dramatic invention," as Campbell Dodgson says. They form an effective centre around which are grouped Duerer's engraving "Adam and Eve" and the woodcuts "Virgin and the many Angels," "Martyrdom of early Christians," and "Siege of a Town." Other additions to the collection of old prints are: Leyden's "Temptation of St. Anthony," Stimmer's "End of the Jewish Kingdom," J. Van Assen's "Christ on the Cross," A. Spingler's "Creation," a chiaroscuro ("Neptune") by Goltzius, Mantegna's "Scourging of Christ," one of the "Baldini" Dante illustrations, Rembrandt's "Amsterdam" and "Dessinateur d'apres le modele," and Callot's "Tour de Nesle." A group of 17th and 18th century engravers includes Pitau, Van Schuppen, Vorsterman, Hondius, J. Smith, J. Beckett, and our own John Norman ("Battle of Bunker Hill"). A number of these are gifts from Cortlandt F. Bishop, Mrs. C. S. Fairchild, Mr. Herbert Adams, Mrs. A. S. Sullivan, and Mr. George H. Sullivan.

To the Avery collection have been added etchings by Steinlen ("Les trois compagnons"), Paul Du Pont ("Workhorses") and F. W. Benson ("The Alarm"); 22 etchings by various artists after Delacroix; two woodcuts by Ruzicka, and lithographs by Pryse, Jones and Nevinson. American etching is represented by: J. T. Arms, W. B. Closson, Paul Dougherty, Eugene Higgins, Thomas Moran, V. Pandolfi, C. A. Platt, J. Reich, W. G. Reindel, H. B. Shope, J. C. Vondrous, Emily B. Waite. American wood-engraving by W. Bobbett, Helen Hyde (17 pieces, which form a sort of memorial exhibition), J. J. Lankes, J. J. A. Murphy, F. Treidler (linoleum cut). American lithography by Bolton Brown, W. M. Hunt, Wm. Oberhardt.

One of E. D. French's elaborately fine certificate plates is here, and that famous wood-engraving in the steel-plate manner, by Wm. Harvey after B. R. Haydon, "Assassination of L. S. Dentatus." There are book-plates by C. Bragdon, A. J. Brown, G. W. Edwards, W. E. Fisher, E. H. Garrett, N. Hurd, A. N. Macdonald, Ruzicka, W. P. Schoonmaker, S. L. Smith. Other specialties include a selection from a lot of one hundred 18th-century line engravings, colored, of the kind used in the "peep-shows" of old, of interest not artistic but historical. The sporting lithograph of other days is seen in various examples by L. Maurer. Finally, Hiroshige is shown in a number of interesting color-prints.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of April, 1920, the Library received as gifts a total of 2,314 volumes, 4,916 pamphlets, 156 maps and 24 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

From Mr. Frederick S. Dellenbaugh came the original manuscript diary of F. S. Dellenbaugh, relating to his journey with Major Powell of the United States Topographical and Geological Survey, of the Green and Colorado Rivers, 1871-1873; from Messrs. Stewart & Shearer came, from the estate of Grace L. Gordon, a Horn Book, measuring 4 inches by 2¼ inches, containing the alphabet, followed by various letters in syllabic combinations, and the Lord's Prayer. The book is apparently of American origin, of about 1750. From Mr. Theodore N. Vail came a copy of the privately-printed work, "John Eliot and the Indians, 1652-1657," being letters addressed to Rev. Jonathan Hanmer of Barnstable, England, reproduced from the original manuscripts in the possession of Theodore N. Vail, edited by Wilberforce Eames, New York, 1915. Mr. Sam P. Avery, of Hartford, Conn., presented a copy of the "Avery, Fairchild and Park Families of Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island...", Hartford, 1919. From Dr. L. J. Leon came a file of Japanese dental and railway journals, 523 in number.

Interesting miscellaneous collections were received from the following: From Mr. C. Altschul, 126 volumes of American histories, books on the War and text books; from the Expansió Catalana of Barcelona, Spain, came 10 works in Catalanian; from Judge Greenbaum came 82 volumes of documents, American Bar Association Reports, etc.; from Mrs. Eliot Norton, 12 volumes and 216 pamphlets; from Mr. Henry Preble, 18 volumes and 38 periodicals, including "A Handbook of Gastronomy... By Jean Anthelme Brillat-Savarin," Boston, 1915 (No. 202 of 375 copies printed); and from Mr. C. B. Upjohn, 60 volumes and 3 pamphlets.

Mr. Henry B. Shope presented 8 of his etchings to the Library. From the Composer's Music Corporation and from the Istituto Editoriale Italiano came collections of music published by these firms.

As in previous months, many interesting and important books on the War were received as gifts, among which were divisional and regimental histories, reports and memorials.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN APRIL, 1920

DURING the month of April, 1920, there were received at the Library 22,758 volumes and 5,430 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The figures are not yet compiled giving the total number of readers and of volumes consulted in the Central Building. These figures will be printed in a later Bulletin.

A LIST OF NEW YORK ALMANACS 1694-1850

COMPILED BY ALEXANDER J. WALL
Assistant Librarian, The New York Historical Society

PREFACE

THIS list of Almanacs published in New York, covering the years 1694-1850 is, for the most part, the result of a personal examination by the compiler of all the almanacs in the seventy-eight libraries and private collections visited for that purpose. Besides the fifty-four libraries credited, there were twenty-four which had no almanac collections. In a few instances it was necessary to rely upon the courtesy of Librarians to supply data concerning their collections.

A number of Almanacs, prior to 1800, which were advertised in the early newspapers, or listed in bibliographical works, have not survived. These have been included in this list and the source of information noted.

Every copy found of each Almanac has been credited in this list, making the rarity of each item apparent, and for the purpose of listing all printers and booksellers the full imprints of the Almanacs have been copied.

Libraries which possessed copies of only a few of the more common almanacs, such as the Whig Almanac, Christian Almanac, Churchman Almanac, or Temperance Almanac, have not been credited, as almost every library had a few copies of one or the other of these series.

The total number of Almanacs listed is 2,169, not counting the second editions of the Almanacs. Of this total 475 were issued prior to 1801.

The first seven ranking collections are as follows:

ALMANACS PRIOR TO 1801		ALMANACS 1801-1850
COLLECTIONS	TOTAL	COLLECTIONS	TOTAL
The New York Historical Society	150	American Antiquarian Society	- 723
The New York Public Library	- 97	Mr. Samuel L. Munson	- - 611

Mr. Henry E. Huntington	- - 37	New York State Library*	- - 160
Historical Society of Pennsylvania	34	Western Reserve Historical Society	146

* Since this list was compiled the N. Y. State Library has acquired a large duplicate collection from Mr. Samuel L. Munson which has not been credited in this list.

The New York City Directory published under the title Longworth's American Almanac, New York Register and City Directory from 1796–1842 has not been listed as an Almanac as it is more properly classified as a Directory. Blunt's Nautical Almanac, Williams' New York State Register, The Great Metropolis and New York Almanac, and publications of similar nature also have been omitted. Exceptions, however, were made with Gaine's Register, and Mills and Hicks British and American Register — rare publications of the Revolutionary period.

The arrangement of this list is first chronological and then alphabetical by the title under each year. Bibliographical notes annotate some of the titles. A complete index will be found at the end of the list.

Almanacs reflect the spirit of their times. They were issued in great quantities and were much prized as household necessities, not only for the weather predictions but for their entertaining features and the scientific knowledge they imparted.

Much general information could be included in this preface, which would extend into a monograph on New York Almanacs, their making and makers, but I must limit these remarks to a few essential features.

Daniel Leeds who published his first Almanac in 1687, at Philadelphia, is New York's first Almanac maker. He began his series when Bradford set up his press in New York City in 1693, issuing the first New York Almanac for 1694. His last New York Almanac appeared in 1713, and the following year, 1714, his son, Titan Leeds, issued the Almanac. Daniel Leeds died September 28th, 1720, aged 68 years and 11 months. In 1727 the name Felix Leeds appeared on the New York Almanac. He was a brother of Titan Leeds, and in the preface of his first Almanac he states that "Mr. Bradford at New York and his son at Philadelphia having been always the printers both for my father and brother since they first began" and this year (1727) his "brother Titan was prevailed upon by Samuel Keimer to let him have his copy" he (Felix, out of justice to Mr. Bradford) has "ventured to publish the ensuing work for the year 1727." No copy of the 1728 New York Leeds Almanac has been found, but in 1729 we find Titan Leeds back again in New York with Bradford. The Titan Leeds Almanac for 1744 (the last of the Leeds series), bears the heading The Dead Man's Almanac.

Only two of the New York issues of the William Birkett series of Almanacs, 1728–1745, also printed by Bradford, have been found, those for 1738 and 1743.

The next group of Almanacs of unusual interest were those published from 1746 on, by Thomas, Roger, and Richard More or Moore. Ford's Hugh Gaine, Vol. I, page 106, has an interesting note concerning the authorship of the Almanacs published under the name of More or Moore, while the prefaces of these Almanacs attest their keen rivalry and perplexing dispute of priority and ability.

Webster's Calendar and Hutchins Improved Almanac were issued for the longest period of any of the series of Almanacs. Webster's Calendar published first in New York City for 1784 as Webster's New York Almanack, from 1785 or 1786 to date has been issued consecutively in Albany, N. Y. These, as well as the Farmer's Almanacs were issued in the thirties and forties with various imprints, as booksellers in many localities were supplied with them, each having their name and address on the title-page as publisher, for the imprint.

Hutchin's Almanac is first noted in 1742 and after 1759 was known as Hutchins Improved, continuing with that title, many years later than 1850. After 1800 a confusing lot of imitators of this successful Almanac made their appearance under the titles of Huching's Improved, Hutching's Almanac, Hutchings Improved Almanac, Hutchings' Revived Almanac, and Hutchins Revived, with many varying imprints.

Of Almanacs in foreign languages published in New York, the earliest Dutch Almanac noted in bibliographies is 1737, but only one copy of a Dutch Almanac has been found by the compiler, that of 1754, De Americaanse Almanak, an imperfect copy of which is in the New Jersey Historical Society. Four French Almanacs, one for 1794-5 ("3rd year of the French Republic"), 1842, 1848, and 1850; one German, 1850, and one Hebrew Almanac, 1844-1845, comprised all the Almanacs printed in foreign languages which came to light within the period covered by this list, 1694-1850.

Almanacs were first noted in places outside of New York City as follows:

Fishkill, 1781	Ballston-Spa, 1813	Geneseo, 1835
Albany, 1783	Canandaigua, 1814	Union Mills, 1836
Hudson, 1787	Bennington, 1816	Peekskill, 1837
Poughkeepsie, 1791	Auburn, 1818	Cazenovia, 1837
Kingston, 1794	Rochester, 1820	Dansville, 1839
Troy, 1798	Ithaca, 1822	Lockport, 1839
Brooklyn, 1800	Jamaica, 1823	Sag Harbor, 1840
Rome, 1801	Buffalo, 1824	Canajoharie, 1840.
Newburgh, 1801	Lewiston, 1824	Bath, 1843
Cooperstown, 1802	Carmel, 1824	Saratoga Springs, 1843
Waterford, 1802	Fredonia, 1826	Upper Aquebogue, 1844
Utica, 1804	Batavia, 1831	Syracuse, 1844
Lansingburgh, 1804	Morrisville, 1832	Stillwater, 1846
Johnstown, 1804	Sandy Hill, 1832	Sing Sing, 1848
Cambridge, 1805	Watertown, 1833	Clyde, 1848
Catskill, 1806	Montgomery, 1833	Skaneateles, 1848
Sherburne, 1806	Homer, 1834	Little Falls, 1849
Otsego, 1808		North East Centre, 1849
Herkimer, 1809		Coxsackie, 1849

In consulting this list, the index should be referred to when an Almanac does not appear under the year sought.

It is a pleasure to record the uniform courtesy which I met with at the libraries credited in this list, and the assistance rendered. My thanks are due to these libraries, as well as to the private collectors mentioned.

My especial appreciation is due The New York Public Library, and to those who administer its affairs, for making it possible to place this list before the public in printed form.

An Almanack of Celestial Motions and Aspects for...1709... By Daniel Travis. America Printed, and sold by N. Boon at the Sign of the Bible in Cornhill, Boston, 1709. 8 ll.

Copy: BPL.

This almanac is listed by Evans from 1709 - 1719 as a New York imprint by William Bradford. There is, however, a difference of opinion as to how many of these Travis almanacs were printed by Bradford. The first of the series, 1707, was printed by B. Green, Boston, and in 1709 the imprint was "America." In 1717 B. Green, Boston, was resumed as the imprint. Mr. Henry F. De Puy, who specialized in Bradford imprints, has compared the typography and cuts in this series of almanacs, and is of the opinion that only those for the years 1709 and 1710 were printed by Bradford.

UNANSWERED QUESTIONS

IT would be hard to prove whether lending books for reading at home, or providing them for study and reference within the building, is the more important duty of a public library. Few persons, after reflection, would contend that answering questions is more important than either, but no librarian will deny that it is a notable part of his work, and that the demands made upon him by inquirers are incessant, and of the most extraordinary variety. A question brought to a library, either by letter or by word of mouth, may be answered in a second, or it may require hours of research by the librarians, and weeks or months of study by the questioner.

There is no satisfactory way to count the number of questions asked, in any given time, of The New York Public Library. Whether the inquirer applies by letter, goes to the Information Desk, to any of the reading rooms of the Reference Department, in the Central Building, or to one of the numerous agencies of the Circulation Department, outside that building, his question falls into one of three classes. First, there are simple questions about the library and its books, which are answered at once, without reference to any book. Typical of these inquiries would be a question about the resources of the different parts of the library; a request for the title of a good book upon a subject which has a great body of literature, — as Napoleon, or the American Civil War. Second, there are questions to be answered not instantly, but in a moment or two, by consulting one of the obvious books of reference. Third, there are difficult problems which require research.

To count all these would show an enormous total number of questions. The first class, by far the most numerous, are perfectly legitimate questions, though, perhaps, the slightest in importance. The other two classes, fewer in number, take much more work and time to answer.

Probably the library succeeds in answering at least ninety per cent of what may be called the important and legitimate questions. Inquiries that lie within the field of rational science, of literature in its widest sense, of history, or of the known record of man's thought, may fairly expect an answer. It is the "freak" question in science, the dubious by-path of history, the stray quotation, which present difficulties. These, and the "fugitive" poem — so-called, perhaps, because it is a fugitive from the justice which it might receive from a competent critic — often go their doubtful and anonymous way, with their mystery, whatever it is, unsolved. Perhaps the sum of the world's knowledge is not seriously lessened.

A person sometimes comes to a library, writes Mr. J. C. Dana, because he "wishes to verify his impression as to the color of James Russell Lowell's hair, or the exact words Dickens once used to James T. Fields in speaking of a certain ought-to-be-forgotten poem of Browning's." This lady or gentleman is entitled to the respectful attention which is sure to follow his or her question. But if, in the end, the sources of information fail to give any aid, and the question remains unanswered, it may be that, as they sing in Ruddigore, "it really doesn't matter." For it often happens that when the story that nobody has indexed is discovered, when the authorship is traced of the quotation which no one claims, or when the full text is unearthed of the poem which the anthologists have failed to include, the quality of these things is a clear explanation why they have drifted about as strays and "fugitives."

Yet, as they have not perished utterly, as they are still the object of search, it appears that they must have a certain appealing quality. It is not unfair to seek them in a library; it is no part of a librarian's duty to criticize them, and refuse help in their discovery because they are not of the first importance, considered by literary standards. In common sense, librarians must refuse some requests; they must not devote time which belongs to the public in extensive research for any one person, they must not prepare briefs nor essays, they must not try to solve puzzles for seekers after prizes. Outside these reservations is a large field of questions, of different degrees of importance, which they may attempt to answer.

Here are a few unanswered questions, sent by letter to The New York Public Library in the early months of this year:

"Will you kindly give the name of the publication, as well as the publisher's name, of a book of diagrams and charts showing wiring systems of all cars, including 1920 models?"

"Will you kindly give me any information regarding the writer or publisher of the following poem, written from memory? I should like to have the exact words of the poem, with name and address of composer, date of publication and name of publisher, —

AMULETS

Out of the dark, your eyes
Beckoning far and fair;
Wherein whose depths there gleams
A witchery of dreams;
A phantasy of prayer
Making new hopes arise
Out of the dark ——— your eyes."

[Second stanza also given.]

"Can you give me any information — author — publisher — date — about a book on the San Domingo revolution? My customer... thinks it was published 30 or 40 years ago, and that the title may have been 'Evenings in Boston.'"

"I should be greatly obliged if you would let me know in which volume of Jerome K. Jerome his 'A Most Uncommon Patient' appears."

"Kindly advise me if you have the following work: Bibliographie de la Papeterie, by Charles Dumercy. Bruxelles: F. Larcier, 1888. If not, could you direct me to an American library where this bibliography could be found?"

"About 25 years ago there appeared in some magazine or newspaper a poem entitled 'Jonathan Jay.' It was about a poor little boy who had to wear his father's big boots to school, and the other boys made fun of him. I want to get a copy of this poem, and write to know if you can tell me where I can get it."

"One of our newspapers has been asked for the author of the line:

'Hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may.'

Can you, out of the wealth of your department, dig it up?"

"About two months ago I read, either in the New York Evening Post or some other newspaper or periodical, among the book reviews, an article reviewing a book on Parliamentary Form of Government, by a French author, member of the French Chamber of Deputies... I should like to have the accurate title of the book, with name of author and publisher... I remember that it had been translated from the French and that the English version had been published."

"In 'A Life at Its Best' by R. H. Edwards and Ethel Cutler, is the quotation:

Forty wrestlers, wrestling for Thee, O Christ!
Forty wrestlers, wrestling for Thee,
For Thee we claim the victory!
For Thee we claim the Crown.

A reader wishes to have the full translation, or if not that, is there any more of the original hymn extant?"

JOHN HILL, AQUATINTER, AND HIS "LANDSCAPE ALBUM"

THAT large and interesting field in the world of prints, covered by the term "Americana," has been combed by so sapient and industrious a band of connoisseurs and collectors, that there would seem to be little left to discover or to set straight. Yet it is only a few years ago that the question of Paul Revere's portrait of Jonathan Mayhew was settled by the finding of an impression in this Library. It had been duly listed by W. S. Baker and D. McN. Stauffer, the latter adding the comment "Reported portrait, not seen."

Our Print Room likewise contains an unrecorded variation of the title-page. The series of colored aquatints by John Hill, "Picturesque Views of American Scenery" (designs by Joshua Shaw) had a change of publishers which was duly noted by both D. McN. Stauffer ("American Engravers upon Copper and Steel") and his continuator Mantle Fielding. They record that this folio, called "Landscape Album" for some reason or another, was first published in 1820 by Carey of Philadelphia, and re-published in 1835 by Thomas T. Ash of the same city. But it has been known for some time that there exists an earlier state of the engraved title-page, with the date 1819 and the name of Moses Thomas (also of Philadelphia) in place of Carey. The set of prints is sufficiently rare. One complete set has been located; that was sold in recent years and is not available at present. The Library has two sadly incomplete sets, both bearing Carey's name on each plate, — with one exception: in one set the engraved title is the one of 1819, with the name of Thomas. Moreover, comparison of the two titles shows at once that the one for Carey was made by simply coaxing the 19 into a 20, the lower end of the 9 remaining in evidence. As the late Mr. Frederick R. Halsey put it, the transfer of publishers was made before the prints had been issued. The 1819 date was recorded by the undersigned in 1912, and no other impression of the Thomas title seems to have come to notice since. It was duly noted some years ago by I. N. Phelps Stokes, in whose "Iconography of Manhattan Island," vol. 4, it is properly catalogued for the first time.

Perhaps someone will in time unravel the sequences of numbers on the sheets of John Hill's "Hudson River Portfolio," — that noted series after water-colors by W. G. Wall. As these plates passed from one publisher to another, there took place a re-numbering which is the despair of the cataloguer, and causes him to make copious notes on the margin of Stauffer, vol. 2, page 224.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of May, 1920, the Library received as gifts a total of 2,810 volumes, 7,190 pamphlets, 33 maps, and 295 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

From Mr. M. L. Griffiths, of East Orange, N. J., came a collection of seven volumes of bound newspapers, including "The Albion," Vols. 1, 2, New York, 1839-40, the "Spirit of the Times," Vol. 9, New York, 1839-40, the "True Sun," New York, 1843-44, and others; from Mrs. Douglas Robinson, a miscellaneous collection of books and pamphlets, 21 volumes and 6 pamphlets, including "Staghunting with the 'Devon and Somerset,' 1887-1901," by Philip Evered, London, 1902; "Anton Seidel, a Memorial by his Friends," New York, 1899, and others; from Mr. William Andrews Clark, jr., of Los Angeles, came a copy (No. 14 of 50 copies printed) of the catalogue of his library of Early English Literature, 1519-1700, Vol. 1, San Francisco, 1920; from Mr. Joseph Hermsheim, six volumes of manuscripts of Commodore Homer Crane Blake, of the United States Navy, including official correspondence, letter books, orders, reports, etc., 1840-71, a scrapbook of clippings relating to Commodore Blake's services in the Navy, etc.; and from Miss E. C. Hopkins, a miscellaneous collection of books, pamphlets and periodicals, including the New York Mirror, 1827-28; Harper's Weekly, 1875-76, in all, 14 volumes, 1 pamphlet, 54 magazines, and 5 bundles of newspapers, etc.

Miss Ida Carpender, of Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., presented the original tracings and pen-and-ink sketches of many of the coats-of-arms painted for clients by Mr. Abbott, Heraldic Artist; also sketches of the pedigrees and other genealogic data, from various sources, made by the Genealogic Ms. Company, in 4 volumes and 2 portfolios; from Mr. Sam P. Avery, of Hartford, Conn., came an impression of a lithograph by Mary Cassatt, entitled "Lady in an Opera Box," one of five proofs issued, after which the stone was effaced, bearing the inscription in crayon — "To Mr. Avery with very best compliments This early and only attempt at lithography, Mary Cassatt, Paris, May, 1891"; from Mr. A. E. Gallatin came a copy (one of twenty printed on hand-made paper) of the catalogue of the Aubrey Beardsley Loan Exhibition of Original Drawings, April 12th - May 1st, 1920; Mr. Ernest D. Roth presented impressions of two of his etchings — "The Wheelwright Shop" and "Amiens, 1914"; from Mr. Robert Sneider, of Brooklyn, came a collection of 13 bookplates designed by himself; from Mrs. Algernon S. Sullivan came seven prints, including engravings by Nanteuil, Hollar, Vermeulen; and from Mr. S. J. Woolf came a lithograph of the artist's father, by S. J. Woolf.

As additions to our collection of divisional and regimental histories, 14 works came through gift during the month of May.

A LIBRARIAN'S MAIL

THE unanswered question, in a public library, seldom goes unsolved without reason. The notes printed on the subject in the Bulletin last month indicated that a query which remains unsatisfied, belongs, in a majority of instances, to one of two or three classes. Either it is a request for stray verses or quotations, whose literary value is so slight that they have never been collected and printed in any book, or else it belongs to some dubious by-path of knowledge where serious and well-informed writers do not wander. In other words, either it asks for information which for perfectly good reasons is not yet available in print, or else it is irrational. Thus, irresponsible writers in popular journals may discuss some reputed "discovery" in science, and cause a number of inquiries at public libraries. The inquiries have to go unanswered until the "discovery" wins the attention of men with a knowledge of the subject.

It must be admitted that there is a third class, — requests for queer or recondite bits of information, the subject of legitimate curiosity, but difficult and often impossible to find unless the searcher stumbles upon the answer through sheer good luck. There are no guides nor indexes, no rules nor methods by which such arcana may be brought to light. Luckily, both for readers and for librarians, these questions are rare. Examples of them are given neither in last month's Bulletin, nor in this article.

The question which, on the face of it, looks difficult, is sometimes easily answered. On the other hand, the unanswerable question often looks simple enough. Probably no one of the "Unanswered Questions," recorded in the Bulletin for June, looked especially difficult. A reference librarian soon learns that there are some matters of almost universal belief which it is indeed hard to prove. Practically every good American firmly believes that Abraham Lincoln said: "You can fool some of the people all of the time," etc., but to prove it, to find when and where he said it, is another thing. It sounds Lincolnian, just as "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb" sounds Biblical.

A librarian's mail often exhibits, in a single day, a wide variety of questions, — serious, trivial, reasonable, and excessive in their demands. Some selections are given below from the mail of a period of two or three days in this Library. These are all, with one exception, questions which were readily answered, probably with satisfaction to the inquirer. These letters came from seven or eight different states.

Here is what might almost be called a model question, — definite in its request, and indicating that the writer of the letter had some knowledge of the probable resources of a library, and the methods by which he could use them to best advantage:

DEAR SIR: —

I am preparing an article on the law of modern banking and commercial practice, with reference to the facilitation and financing of export and import shipments, specifically having to do with the documents such as trust receipts, acceptances, etc., involved in this kind of transaction. By way of introduction to the article, I would like to make some sort of historical reference to the commercial customs and practice of the ancients and during the middle ages with reference to the kind of documents exchanged, etc., in carrying on their export and import trade. You will oblige me very much if you will give me a list of reference books which I can come up some day and examine with regard to this matter.

If you desire more specific information than that which I have here indicated, you might telephone me. The number is ———.

Very truly yours,

Here is a request, not quite so definite, from the local office of a famous newspaper:

DEAR SIR: —

We are desirous of getting in touch with authorities on Folklore, Bibliography, Older Journalism and International Law (History). Are you able to inform us where we might obtain the names and addresses of such people? A stamped and addressed envelope is enclosed for your reply.

Thanking you in anticipation for your courtesy, we are,

Yours faithfully,

This is from an inquirer on more unusual topics, — he had already been furnished with several references upon the subject mentioned in the first sentence of his letter:

DEAR SIR:—

Some time ago you were kind enough to send me some information on the manufacture of peanut oil.

I will thank you to kindly advise me in the enclosed stamped envelope if you know of any publication in English that covers completely the subject of Cocoa Beans, and its manufacture into Chocolate.

Thanking you in advance, I remain,

Yours very truly,

Here are three letters which ask definite questions, which should receive their answers:

GENTLEMEN:—

I have had an inquiry as to whether there is any one magazine that accepts translations of foreign poetry more readily than others. A worker here who is proficient in French has a translation she wishes to offer — and would like to know the best magazine to which to offer it. It is short — only two or three stanzas — and is an expression of France's appreciation of America's spirit.

Can you offer any suggestions as to the likeliest magazine market? Thank you for your information last week as to Division histories. It was just what was wanted.

Very sincerely,

SIR:—

Could you furnish me with the address of a firm which manufactures bottle-making machinery?

Yours very truly,

GENTLEMEN:—

Can you inform me of the name of "Ewing," its nationality and religion.
Thanking you kindly, I am,

Yours truly,

Here is a rather extensive request from a large corporation. It is a legitimate question, however. It asks for a list of books, rather than for the books themselves, and shows that the writer understood the functions of a reference library:

DEAR SIR: —

We have recently established a Securities Department, specializing in foreign bonds of all kinds and countries.

In this department we are endeavoring to build up as complete a library as possible on the subject of foreign bonds, and we would appreciate it if you would give us a list

- a. Of the newest books on this subject
- b. A selection of the older volumes
- c. Any comparative charts, pamphlets or books which might prove valuable to us.

Might we ask that you send us this at your earliest convenience. A self addressed envelope is enclosed.

Yours very truly,

Here is a pleasing request, which nevertheless showed that the writer did not understand the easiest way to the information he wished:

GENTLEMEN: —

Will you kindly send the writer a booklet, if possible, or a list of boy's Christian names. I have just had a boy added to my family and am undecided what to name him.

Thanking you in advance, I am,

Very truly yours,

As this writer was a resident of another city, he was advised, with the congratulations and good wishes appropriate to his happy estate, to consult Webster's Dictionary, in the public library of his own town. Despite an impression to the contrary which sometimes appears to be current, public libraries are not founded for the general distribution of books to anyone, in any place and at any time. Under certain conditions, books are often lent from one town to another, as inter-library loans, but often it happens, as in this instance, that the citizens of a town can find the information in their own library and do not need to apply outside.

Here are three questions, varying in their latitude and showing different ideas of the possibilities of a library:

TO THE SECRETARY OF THE PUBLIC LIBRARY OF N. Y. C.:—

May I trouble you to send me a circular or the titles of recent novels written by the best French authors, as soon as possible at your convenience and oblige,

Yours truly,

LIBRARIAN, NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY:—

Would you be kind enough to examine your files and give me a description of Dorothy Arnold, the New York millionaire's daughter, who disappeared from home eight or ten years ago.

I would also like to know the date, and any other particulars in regard to the matter that you might give me. I presume you have the old papers in your records.

Sincerely yours,

YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY:—

The other day I heard two people discussing the topic Love. It was very interesting, but the base of the whole discussion was missing. This base is the definition.

I was informed by a friend that if I sent to you, also enclosing a return envelope, that you could answer this question. "What is the correct definition of Love."

Thanking you kindly for an early reply to the above question. I am,

Yours very truly,

To the last of these three writers was sent a photostat copy of the definition of "love" in the Standard Dictionary. He could have found it for himself in a dictionary in his own public library, which was in a Colorado city, and saved six days in time.

This is a more unusual request, but one which should receive a satisfactory answer:

DEAR SIR:—

Kindly let me know if there is a book in English about snails, as I wish to breed them for fresh-water aquariums.

Yours truly,

The last letter is an example of a request which fails to show an understanding of the proper use of a library:

_____, JUNE 26th, 1920.

MAIN PUBLIC LIBRARY, NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN: —

Since I have been unable to secure information which I desire pertaining to your City in this locality, I am taking the liberty of writing you, trusting that you will, if possible, be kind enough to supply me with same. I desire this for literary work, and in order that you may answer the questions specifically and in a simplified manner, I am attaching hereto a form for that purpose.

Thanking you very cordially in advance for giving this your attention, and trusting to have the pleasure of hearing from you at an early date, I am,

Very truly yours,

Name of the most prominent and best hotel:_____

Name of the second best:_____

Name of one of the best clubs or club houses where fraternity or sorority dances are held by the "four-hundred":_____

In all probability this would be in the suburbs: (Yes or No)_____

Name of the theatre where the very best actors and actresses are to be heard on the legitimate stage:_____

Name of a street where the middle-class reside:_____

Also the name of a very small suburban town (must be at least twenty miles from the City or not more than thirty) and which can be conveniently reached by railroad, subway, etc.; also by automobile. Same place situated in a very thickly wooded section (presumably along the Hudson or on some other body of water or small lakes.) A very remote spot (not one where the wealthier would reside or have summer homes, but the middle-class or poorer persons. A picturesque spot, and one where you think a business man residing in New York would care to visit for a week-end who is interested in doing artist's work occasionally.

Name of a small town (thickly wooded; by this I mean to convey a town with several good-sized woods, and picturesque:_____

Also whether same is on the Hudson or another large body of water, or if there is a small lake or lakes near or on the outskirts:_____

Also how far this body of water is from the most thickly wooded section:_____

The most popular kind of tree found there:_____

Distance (provided one could make the trip back and forth in half a day or less:_____

Length of time it takes one way :-----

Over what railroad or sub same could be reach :-----

Whether a railroad center or how far from the nearest station :-----

Can same be reached by automobile :-----

Are the roads in good or poor condition :-----

These questions cannot be said to apply to New York City, and any attempt to answer them would be entirely unsatisfactory. The correspondent was so informed.

AN ANSWER

ONE of the unanswered questions of last month has received an answer from the Librarian of the Hartford (Connecticut) Public Library. She writes to the editor of the Bulletin:

The "book on the San Domingo revolution," in the list of unanswered questions in your June Bulletin, is "Evenings in Boston," published anonymously by Bowles and Dearborn, 72 Washington Street, in 1827. The story referred to is the first in the book, and is called "Old Saturday," the name of a faithful slave, who saved the lives of his master's children. The book is bound in boards, with a red leather back, and a picture of Bowles and Dearborn's "Books and Stationary" (sic) Shop on the back cover.

A copy of the book was in my home when I was a child, but I had not seen one for many years until I found it with a second series published in 1828, at Goodspeed's in Park Street, Boston, and bought them both for my collection of old-fashioned children's books.

It gives me great pleasure to know that some one else remembers the book with as much interest as

Yours sincerely,

CAROLINE M. HEWINS.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN JUNE, 1920

DURING the month of June, 1920, there were received at the Library, 41,097 volumes and 6,238 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 68,673. They consulted 152,672 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 181,357.

A GIFT TO THE LIBRARY

MISS CORNELIA CRUGER, of Barrytown, Dutchess County, New York, has given the Library the little book, "Collection des Moralistes Anciens," presented to her grandmother by Thomas Jefferson. The title-page and fly-leaf, with the presentation inscription in Jefferson's handwriting, are reproduced on the opposite page.

Angelica, daughter of Philip Schuyler, born 1756, married John Church. Their daughter, Catherine Schuyler Church, married Peter Cruger. John Church Cruger, their son, married secondly Euphemia Van Rensselaer, daughter of the Patroon. Their eldest daughter, Cornelia Cruger, gives this volume to The New York Public Library. The inscription by Thomas Jefferson, 1788, was written to Mrs. Peter Cruger, then Miss Catherine Schuyler Church, grandmother of the present donor.

WASHINGTON'S NOTE BOOK

SELECTIONS FROM A NEWLY-DISCOVERED MANUSCRIPT WRITTEN BY HIM WHILE A VIRGINIA COLONEL, IN 1757

EDITED BY VICTOR HUGO PALTSITS
Keeper of Manuscripts

THIS small manuscript note book measures $7\frac{1}{2}$ by $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches, has 54 written pages and 17 blank leaves. Ten of the written pages are not in Washington's hand and consist of "A Roll of the Artificers employed on the Works at Winchester, under the Command of Capt. William Peachy, wth an Acco^t of their lost Time" (9 p.), and "A List of men draughted from the Artificers to do Garrison Duty for a Time" (1 p.). The rest of the writing in the note book is in Washington's style of handwriting employed for several years in the fifties and sixties, quite different from his earlier and youthful hand, and differing distinctly from his well-known handwriting of the period of the American Revolution and the Presidency. This note book was offered to The New York Public Library for the Virginia military roster above named and no relationship to Washington was then known or surmised. The discovery was made by me when studying certain of the written memoranda for correspondence, which showed unmistakably that they were the ideas set down by Washington before he wrote his letters to Governor Dinwiddie, the Speaker of the House of Burgesses of Virginia, Colonel Stanwix, and others.

Conclusive identification was effected by a comparison of the writing in the note book with a photographed page (1755) from Washington's early letter books in the Library of Congress and has since been confirmed de visu by Mr. Worthington C. Ford, our greatest Washington specialist.

This note book was used by Washington in 1757 when raising the two Virginia regiments during the last of the intercolonial wars with the French of Canada, and part of it contains his memoranda for correspondence while at Fort Stanwix. Several pages are filled with minute descriptions of the pedigrees, brands, and marks of his military wagon horses, named Nelly, Jolly, Ball, Jack, Rock, Woodfin, Prince, Buck, Diamond, Crab, etc. The following selections from the note book speak for themselves:

SPECIMENS OF CORRESPONDENCE NOTES IN DIARY FORM

8 June 1757. Get the Prices of all the Soldiers Cloth^s from Col^o Carlyle — with a reasonable advance; and give it to each Captain with Orders to examine his Company's necessary Roll once a Week (every Saturd^y) with^t Fail and to make stopages for every thing difficient besides punishing the Soldiers for neglect of Duty this to be done before they are paid —

Order also that each Sergeant of a Com^y have a distinct Squad to take care of & to see that they always have their Cloth^s & accoutrements in good Order —

Ditto 8th

Write the Governor [Dinwiddie] that Captⁿ Paris has got a Commission in the Maryland Force — That Gov^r Denny has sent Invitations to the Cherokees to treat with him at Fort Loudoun in his Gov^t &

That I am apprehensive the diff^t Colonies striving against each other must be bad

That I have removed Captⁿ Stewart & Gists Company to this place & give him my reasons for doing it.

To desire that he will direct me concerning receiving the Drafts.

And in what manner the Companys of Rangers are to be Cloath^d, Paid & Com^d.

Also know how far and in what points I am to pay Obedience to the Orders of Col^o Stanwix & if it should so happen that I receive Orders from himself [Gov. Dinwiddie] & Col^o Stanwix differing (which is not unlikely) whose Orders I am to Obey.

Inform that Maj^r Lewis is come in inclose a Copy of his Letter —

Also that Lieut^t Williams & Ensign Dean have resign^d their Commissions

Send down the names of all the Subaltern Officers & Seniority — and advice that the reduced Capt^{ns} who may accept of Lieut^{rs} have their Commissions antedated to give them Rank before the present Subaltern

Recom^d Sergeant Hughs for the Adjutancy

Take care also to acquaint the Gov^r [Dinwiddie] ab^t the bad Provisions at Fort Cumberland. that I apprehended M^r Walkers absence w^d occasion such Acc^{ts} — that I caus^d M^r Walker to be informd of it that he may give necessary Directⁿ concern^s it as I conceive the Loss will fall upon him — There has been foul play us^d with it —

June 13th — Draughts. Not to receive any but what is fit for the Service. reject all that are old — Subject to Fits — and otherwise infirm.

Keep Copy's of all the Receipts given for the Men. take exact lists of their Names — Countys they Come from high age complexion &c^a so soon as they are receiv^d.

Give the Officer who receives them a Copy of the Act to govern himself by Dont let him give receipts either for Arms Cloaths or anything else unless order^d so by the Act.

The Gov^r. 25th [To Dinwiddie June 25th] I have not been able to send any Men to the S^o Ward, y^e Continual Alarms on this Quarter retarded it till y^e News of y^e French march^s with Artillery and then it was judg^d quite imprudent to draw Men from a post so much expos^d.

I have wrote twice to Col^o Stanwix ab^t Arms, but he takes no notice thereof in his Letters to me from whence I imagine he is not inclin'd to furnish us with any — We shall want Arms much.

Memmorandom of Sundry things to be done in Williamsburg if I go down in November —

Get my acc^{ts} with the Governor & Commit[tee] settled —

Lay the Indian Acc^{ts} before y^e Gov^r.

Get Copies of the Laws Martial —

Take the Committees advise in regard to Hamiltons acc^{ts}.

Try to have Cloathing sent for, for y^e Regiment.

Carry down the Drafts rec^{la}.

Also Captⁿ M^cNeiles Indentures of Servants &^{ca} if it is necessary —

Most of y^e Militia have been furnishd with Provision's by y^e Regimental Com^r which has been a means of enhauncing his acc^{ta} thise matters sh^d be settled; y^e Militia w^d all have gone home had we not Supplied them their Officers hav^e no Money or Orders & y^e Country People refusing them Credit.

It appears that M^r Atkin has determind to prevent y^e Ind^{ns} from com^e to this Quarter —

Get some Tea — Hyson —

Endeavour to get some of the Stores in y^e Magazine at Williamsburg sent up here especially a Mortar & Bomb Granades — look into y^e Magazine & examine what things are there.

Is all the Parties of Ind^{ns} to be furnishd with Ammunition from y^e Publick Stores here.

Represent the Inconvenience of not keeping Goods constantly at this place to make occasional presents.

It is too late to provide Goods when there is immediate call for them —

Money also shoud be lodgd with y^e Director of these Affairs to answer y^e Exigencies accruing — No Person is fit to be intrusted with y^e Managem^t of Indⁿ Affairs who cannot be trusted with a little money

It is indispensably necessary that an Assembly shoud sit this Fall to concert Measures in time — to execute before the Season is to[o] far spent —

Unless an Assembly sits this Fall we shall not have time to prepare against the Spring — Waggons Horses &^{ca} nor shall we be able to Assemble a Body of Indians without w^{ch} Scarce any thing can be done

Unless Troops March out in y^e Spring there wont be one Inhabit. left in this County — the People hav[e] been perswaded to wait y^e Event of y^e Spring

If this County brakes y^e others will go (being much thinner settled) infinitely faster & then an Army can never be supported.

Lay Plummers Acc^t before y^e Country & Ex^e [i. e. examine] their Books & see if Plummer never was p^d thro Carlyle or Gist

Get a Blank Book for Acc^{ta} & an Almanack

Lay Lieut^t Bullets Claim for a Horse before y^e Country.

MISS KIMBALL'S ETCHINGS

THROUGH the recent gift by the artist of fifteen etchings by Miss Katherine Kimball, the Print Room has a representative showing of her work. Born in New Hampshire, she has long lived in London, where she completed art studies begun in New York. She is a member of etchers' societies in England, France, and the United States, and is represented in public collections in different countries. Her work, which is marked by simplicity and directness, shows no strong leaning toward any restricted specialty. Landscape or city view, picturesque cottage or sailing vessel, all have their appeal for her. The meadows at Stratford-on-Avon, the towers of Notre Dame, out-of-the-way corners in Kent, a bit of Finistère, all are noted with appreciation and without pose.

WALTER TITTLE'S ETCHINGS

THE acquisition of four etchings and dry-points by Walter Tittle has made another interesting addition to the fast growing collection of contemporary American prints in the Print Room. Three of the plates (portraits of Robert Henri, Caro-Delvaile and Charles Dana Gibson), illustrate this artist's emphasis of the clean-cut line, the definite statement, which is more evident still in his portraits of actresses. In the fourth one, — "The Sun Hat," — the line is used in mass, lightly, to produce tone. The artist, who studied at the old Chase School, under Chase and Henri, sketches directly on the copper from life, and does his own printing.

THE WESTERN MISCELLANY

THE Library has acquired a volume of unusual interest in Ohio history. The title-page of the work reads: The Western Miscellany. Edited by B. F. Ells. Volume I. July 1848 to July 1849. Published by B. F. Ells, Dayton, O. This title is surrounded by printer's ornaments in which are printed: Dayton. Knowledge Is Power. Ohio. 1848 to 1849.

The magazine was issued monthly and paged continuously to page 384, ending with the June number of 1849. The magazine is so scarce that Peter G. Thomson, when he issued his Bibliography of Ohio in 1880, did not include the title in his list. Thomson heard of the magazine for the first time in 1883 from Professor Charles L. Ehrenfeld of Wittenberg College.

In his preliminary notice, July 1848, Ells says "Our object in getting up this Periodical, is to furnish a course of Cheap and Useful reading, of a healthful and moral character." There are about ten illustrations in each number. The frontispiece to the volume is a picture of Washington praying at Valley Forge. Some of the stock cuts from other publications were used by Ells, but some of the illustrations are not familiar. There are printer's border ornaments throughout the volume.

One of the notable articles found in the magazine is an eleven-page history of Oregon, then a subject as well as a question of much importance. Other articles of interest were about Filippo Lippi, Captain John Franklin's first journey, Schoolcraft's account of Mt. Joliet, speech of the Indian chief, Little Turtle, Indian portrait painting, an account of the banana, a telescopic appearance of the moon (with illustration), Franklin's way to wealth, the Capitol at Washington (with cut), the return of Capt. Ross from the Arctic, Joseph's well at Cairo, and Legends of the Revolution by George Lippard; still others were "The Regrets of a Bride" — a poem by Mrs. Hemans, history of Shakerism in the West (16 pp.), early attempt at settlement at Portsmouth, Ohio, "The Steamboat" by Oliver Wendell Holmes, Kentucky revival, Chief Little Turtle's temperance law for Indians in Kentucky, maple sugar making, the raising (building) of a log house (with cut), salmon of the Columbia River, the Steamship Great Western, Wimppagno's grave, and short articles on Lady Jane Gray, Benjamin Franklin, Lord Timothy Dexter, De Soto, Pocahontas, La Fayette, Columbus in chains, Washington and General Jackson with portrait cuts.

INTERESTING RECENT ADDITIONS

HOUSING

The housing problem is pressing, both here and abroad. Titles and notes of some of the following items emphasize economy, to overcome the scarcity and high price of building materials. In this collection of designs that range from small Italian villas to Frisian peasant-houses, the architect will probably find suggestions,—some recalling forgotten facts, others offering unusual information.

Allen, Gordon. The cheap cottage and small house; a manual of economical building. London: B. T. Batsford, Ltd. [1919.] xii, 143(1) p. illus. 6. ed., rev. and enl. 8°. MRGF

"A world shortage in the supply of materials, coupled with an intense demand both in this country and on the continent, make the question of economical building difficult and urgent.... Convenience in use, beauty in appearance, economy in first outlay, minimization in subsequent repairs... receive consideration in the following pages." — Preface.

"A satisfactory solution of the question of small homes, which in Germany was a need before the war, has... become a compelling necessity.... It therefore seemed fitting to publish a selection of small homes produced by experienced architects.... The book is intended to give typical examples of tenement-like groups, house-rows and single houses for workmen." — Introduction.

"The search for economical building materials has its reason in present conditions. Especially the want of coal forces us to... show preference for building materials which are as much as possible independent of coal supply. Hence, our exhibitions which introduce houses built of new or hardly tested materials.... But there are other... circumstances which seem suited to bring about economy,—price of land, size of plot and utilization of the same, cost of street-opening... and in the building itself the utmost limitation of necessary space." — Preface.

"There is one period whose buildings have not received so ample a recognition as they merit; more particularly the houses built in the latter half of the eighteenth century and the early years of the nineteenth, which may be called the late Georgian period... In many districts these humble buildings... are rapidly passing away; and the idea of preserving some record of the more interesting led to the production of this book." — Introduction.

"The country is faced by a dilemma... It needs at once a million new houses, and has utterly inadequate stores of material... What are we to do? We must learn how to house ourselves with materials such as we have not used before. It is the object of the present book to attack part of the problem of how to build without bricks and mortar." — Introduction.

REFERENCE BOOKS

Ayres, Leonard P. An index number for state school systems. New York: Department of Education, Russell Sage Foundation, 1920. 70 p. 12°.

Comparative facts of the educational systems of the various states with index numbers showing rank during four decades ending with 1918.

First issue of what is planned as an annual publication. Editions in French and in English. On somewhat the same plan as the Statesman's year book, except that the entire volume of 1020 pages is devoted to France. Full on educational, artistic and social life, as well as the governmental and economic side of the country. Indexed. The French edition, entitled Annuaire général de la France et de l'étranger, contains, as its name implies, facts and statistics about different countries of the world.

Legrand, Émile. Bibliographie hellénique; ou description raisonnée des ouvrages publiés par des Grecs au dix-huitième siècle. Paris: Jean Maisonneuve et fils, 1918. tome I. 563 p. 8°.

Scholarly work, extensively annotated, giving description of Greek works of 18th century in European libraries. In many cases minute collation. Chronological arrangement, first volume extending to 1759. Index of names, and chronological table.

Minerva: Jahrbuch der gelehrten Welt. 1920. Berlin und Leipzig: Vereinigung Wissenschaftlicher Verleger, 1920. 1147 p. 12°.

Renewal of this important educational directory suspended since 1914. On same plan as older issues but much reduced in size due to absence of information from countries which had been at war with Germany. Indexed.

Muirhead, Findlay, editor. England. London: Macmillan, 1920. 598 p. 8°. (The Blue guides.)

The second of this series of guides intended as a competitor of the Baedeker set. On similar lines. Seventy-five maps and plans. Descriptions based on normal conditions rather than abnormal conditions due to the war. Hotels are not starred and no scale of charges in some cases. Indexed.

Spence, Lewis. An encyclopedia of occultism; a compendium of information on the occult sciences, occult personalities, psychic science, magic, demonology, spiritism and mysticism. London: Routledge, 1920. 451 p. 8°.

Compact information in articles ranging in length from 25 to 2,500 words, but mostly short. Illustrated. Select bibliography of alchemy, astrology, demonology, magic, mysticism, mysteries, spiritualism, theosophy, witchcraft.

Universitatum et eminentium scholarum index generalis; annuaire général des universités, the yearbook of the universities, publié sous la direction de R. de Montessus de Ballare, avec l'encouragement du Ministère de l'Instruction Publique. Paris: Gauthier-Villars, 1919. 768 p. 12°.

First issue of what is planned as an annual, international, educational directory, arranged first by countries, alphabetized, and then by cities also in alphabetical order. General plan same as Minerva Jahrbuch. Many omissions due, no doubt, to lack of response to requests for information, and to the fact that it is a first attempt. Name index.

Who's who among commercial organization secretaries. v. 1, 1920. New York: American City Bureau, 1920. 184 p. 12°.

Following information given concerning about seven hundred secretaries: date of assuming present position; date and place of birth; married or single; education; experience; membership in organizations. Both alphabetical and place arrangements.

JOHN HOLT—PRINTER AND POSTMASTER
SOME FACTS AND DOCUMENTS RELATING TO HIS CAREER

BY VICTOR HUGO PALTSITS
Chief of the American History Division and Keeper of Manuscripts

JOHN HOLT, born in 1721, was a native of Williamsburg, Virginia. He received a good education and became a merchant, rising also to be Mayor of Williamsburg. But he met with financial reverses and in 1754, through family influence, secured the appointment as one of the two deputy postmasters-general for America, being stationed at New Haven, Conn. It is probable that Holt learned the printing business at Williamsburg from his brother-in-law, William Hunter, the well-established public printer.¹ About 1775, Holt set up a printing business at Norfolk, Virginia, which was superintended by his son, John Hunter Holt, of which more anon. This firm published The Virginia Gazette, or the Norfolk Intelligencer, under the firm's name of John H. Holt and Company.

In 1754, James Parker, printer of New York City and Woodbridge, New Jersey, was appointed postmaster of New Haven, Connecticut, and John Holt was his deputy. Here Parker established a newspaper, the Connecticut Gazette, which was the first newspaper printed in that colony. The printing press had been set up by Benjamin Franklin on invitation of President Clap of Yale College, with the intention of having Benjamin Mecom conduct it, but Mecom declined at the time, so Franklin sold the materials to James Parker, who began the Connecticut Gazette on April 12, 1755. On December 13th of that year, the newspaper appeared with the copartnership name of James Parker and Co., and John Holt, as editor and junior partner, conducted the printing business of the firm in New Haven, as well as the post-office, whilst

Parker was busied with his printing-house in New York City. In the summer of 1760, Holt removed to New York. Parker's New-York Gazette and Weekly Post-Boy, on July 31, 1760, appeared with the imprint of James Parker and Company, Holt being again the junior partner. They also controlled the post-riders from New York to Hartford, who met the postriders from Boston.² This partnership was dissolved on May 6, 1762, when Holt became the sole publisher, he having hired the business from Parker. He continued to announce the fact in his newspaper's colophon for several years, as, for example, in no. 1125, July 26, 1764, where the colophon reads: "New-York, Broad-Street, near the Exchange: Printed by John Holt, late Partner in this Paper, and the Printing Business in New-York, with James Parker, who has resign'd that Business in this City to him." In this issue Holt gives a good look into the postal hazards of newspaper subscribers, which is interesting and bears relationship to other judgments pronounced by him on the conduct of the post office, therefore is reproduced here, viz.:

"Conclusion of the Reflections begun in our last, concerning the new Regulations in the Post Office.

"In the Business of News-Papers sent by the Post, this new Act will occasion great Revolutions, if not wholly put a Stop to it, unless the Gentlemen concern'd, and all who desire the Continuance of a Business so entertaining and useful to the Publick, will contribute their Aid in their several Stations, to its Encouragement: Those who have Papers sent them, by making punctual Payments; — The Riders, by faithfully delivering the Papers on the Road, at the Places, and to the Persons directed; the Persons, in whose Care they are left on the Road, in delivering them to the right Owners, and preventing others from meddling with them; and all honest Men in general, in exposing the Infamy of those who embezzle or open Papers that don't belong to them. — — — These Men, who are really Thieves to the Owners of the Papers, are worse to the Printers, by robbing them of what is vastly more than the Value of the Thing stolen. — That is, the future Custom of great Numbers, who stop their Papers merely because of their frequent Disappointments in getting them. If this infamous Practice is continued, the sending News Papers by the Post must cease. — For whereas the enclosing Papers in seal'd Covers was some Security, as only here and there a harden'd, shameless Pilferer would presume to open seal'd Papers that did not belong to them, and it was seldom done, even by such, but by Stealth, — and notwithstanding this Security, the Owners so often were robbed of their Papers, that great Numbers stop'd from the Discouragement. — Now therefore that that Security is taken away, and the Papers may be read without breaking the Covers, it is not likely that many of them will get to the Hands of their Owners, and consequently most People will stop, and the Business cease, unless it is prevented by the extraordinary Care of the Persons thro' whose Hands the Papers pass. This, therefore, all Gentlemen who wish the Continuance of Papers by the Post, are desired particularly to attend to, otherwise they must not long expect to receive them, nor the Printers to send them.

"Another Thing necessary to be observed is, that no Letters be sent by the Post to the Printers, relating to News Papers or Advertisements, unless the Postage be paid by the Sender; for the Profits on that Business are already so small, that it will not bear any additional Burden. The Printer of this Paper in particular desires, that none of his Customers will send him any Letters by the Post, relating to News Papers or Advertisements, without first paying the Postage. And if after this publick Notice any such unpaid Letters are sent him, the Persons who send them are desired to take Notice, that the Postage will be charged in their Accounts, or otherwise demanded of them: Also, those Persons whose Accounts are of above 12 Months standing unpaid, must expect to have the Charge of Postage to pay on the Letters that will be sent them to demand the Money."

In April, 1763, Holt announced his removal from Burling's Slip, as follows:

"The Printing Office now kept at Burling's Slip, where the Thursday's New-York Gazette is printed, will on the first of May next, Be Removed To the House where Mrs. Steel now keeps The King's Arms Tavern, near the Exchange,"³ and in the Laws of the City of New York, printed by him in 1763, he called his shop "the New Printing Office, at the lower End of Broad Street, opposite the Exchange," the present Broad and Water Streets. On April 1, 1766, the "House and Lot of Ground facing the Long-Bridge," where Holt lived, was sold at public auction,⁴ and from a notice in the Post-Boy of May 22d, we learn that Holt was "labouring under a severe Fit of Sickness, which has confined him for several Weeks past, and rendered him incapable of Business." Notwithstanding, only a week later, on Thursday, May 29, 1766, Holt issued a newspaper which he called The New-York Journal, or General Advertiser, no. 1, and printed in it the very interesting advertisement which follows, in explanation of the change. Parker had already published a notice in the New York Gazette or Weekly Post Boy on May 22d, in which he informed that "The New Printing-Office, Formerly kept in Beaver Street in this City, Is opened there again, by the Original Proprietor." Parker's advertisement appeared again in Holt's new titled paper, the Journal, on May 29th. Holt's advertisement reads: "THE Printer of this Paper, having from the Middle of July 1760, near 6 Years last past, (the 2 first, in Company; and the 4 last on his own Account) publish'd in this City, a Weekly News Paper, under the Title of The New-York Gazette or Weekly Post-Boy; And having lately deliver'd back, all the Printing Materials he had in his Hands belonging to Mr. James Parker, of whom they had been hired; and hearing that he intends to publish a News Paper in this City, when perhaps he may choose to resume the Title under which he formerly publish'd: The Printer hereof, desirous to prevent the Occasion of a Complaint that might possibly have been made, That he took Advantage of a Title, which originally belong'd to, and was brought into Credit by another, has voluntarily concluded, for the Future to publish his Paper under another Title, The New-York Journal, or General Advertiser, and unmasked, to give up (He hopes in as much Credit as he received it) the Old Title of the Paper, to Mr. Parker. A suitable Cut for the Head of the Paper, under this new Title, will be provided, as soon as convenient; and as the Printer is now completely furnish'd with Printing Materials of all Sorts, all entirely new, he proposes to carry on the Business, in a more extensive Manner than he has yet done; and hopes the Favour he has acquired as publisher of the New-York Gazette, will not be lost under the Title of The New-York Journal, or General Advertiser, which will be publish'd upon the same Principles, and with the same Spirit. As all his Readers can bear Witness, That he has never shrunk from his Duty In the worst of Times, nor deserted the Cause of Liberty and his Country, when it was most dangerous to assert them; he hopes that now, when Peace and Tranquillity, to which he has contributed to the utmost of his Abilities, are happily restored, his former Services will not be forgotten nor undistinguish'd by the favourable Notice of the Publick. When a Cause is become popular, and out of reach of Danger, Crowds are ready to offer themselves in its Favour; but it is only in Times of Difficulty and Danger, its real Friends can be certainly known. The same Writers that have given Value to the Gazette, will Contribute their kind Assistance to the New-York Journal; and as they have in dangerous Times, exerted themselves in Support of our just Rights, will be no less assiduous, now that Tranquility is restored in cultivating the Arts of Peace, and promoting the Prosperity and Happiness, both of Great Britain and her Colonies in America, who now evidently appear to be really, and truly but one People, whose Interests are united, and inseparably connected. The People of G. Britain and Ireland, the Ministry, the Parliament, King, Lords and Commons, have all approved our Cause, have stood forth in Defence of our Rights, and repeal'd the oppressive Acts, --- which appear to have been passed by Means of Surprise and Misrepresentation, and therefore ought to be ascribed wholly to a Faction, not to the People or Legislature of Great-Britain, who have deliver'd us from Oppression, and preserved us from Slavery and Ruin; and are therefore justly entitled to our most sincere and hearty Thanks, Gratitude and Love. Henceforth, may no partial Designs take Place! May the Prosperity of the whole British Empire, be the Object of every one's pursuit, equally with his own private Advantage: And may each Individual disdain to form, or be concern'd in any Scheme for private Emolument, that is in any Respect inconsistent with Justice and the publick Good."

When Holt learned that Parker would not at the time begin a newspaper in New York, he resumed the old Gazette title, on June 5, 1766, as no. 1222, continuing it in that form until no. 1240 of October 9, 1766. Then on October 16th, with no. 1241, he again changed the title to The New-York Journal, or General Advertiser, whilst Parker, likewise on October 16th and also as no. 1241, resumed the publication of his Gazette. Holt's Journal was discontinued in New York City with the issue of August 29, 1776, no. 1756, because of the occupation of the city by the British troops early in September. Holt resumed the Journal, without change of numeration, on July 7, 1777, no. 1757, at Kingston, Ulster County, New York. The last issue was no. 1771, which was in October, a few days before the British invaded and burned the town. Concerning the loss of his press and effects, we have his very important letter to the New York Assembly, on February 13, 1778 (printed infra); also the testimony of his fellow printer, Samuel Loudon, of Fishkill, in a letter to Isaac Beers, of New Haven, on November 3, 1777,⁵ in which Loudon adverts to the scarcity of paper, his own desperate need of it, and the fact that Holt "can't work for some time having lost his Press in Kingston, tho' he got his Types saved." Curiously enough, in the inventory of his estate, in 1785 (printed infra), there is an item for "Iron of a Press (burnt at Esopus)," which is Kingston. On May 11, 1778, Holt's paper was revived at Poughkeepsie.⁶ It was continued until suspended on November 6, 1780; resumed on July 30, 1781; suspended again on January 6, 1782, while he printed the New York Laws, and resumed finally in New York City at the close of the war, on November 22, 1783, with a new series of numbers and entitled, The Independent New York Gazette.

Holt died in New York City, on January 30, 1784, and his body was interred in St. Paul's churchyard.⁷ Isaiah Thomas, the Father of American Printing, summed up his character thus: "Holt was a man of ardent feelings, and a high churchman, but a firm whig, a good writer, and a warm advocate of the cause of his country."⁸

Reference has already been made to Holt's printing-office at Norfolk, Virginia, conducted by his son. In an issue of The Virginia Gazette, or the Norfolk Intelligencer, just before Dunmore ordered the seizure of the press, Holt and Company had printed some reflections on the ancestors of Dunmore, which must have angered the governor (see Pennsylvania Gazette, no. 2445, November 1, 1775, pp. 1 and 4). This seizure of the printing outfit caused one correspondent to protest to Dunmore that he must have known that by the law "the persons of the men, and property of the printer, were sacred." And he added: "How then could you dare invade the privileges of the one, or the property of the other, and thereby deprive the public of a press, by which their wrongs are made known, and through which all knowledge is conveyed. Must Genius bow the neck, and court the smiles of NERO, while fair Science fits melancholy, deploring her unhappy state!" The following items refer to the fate of the press and printer during Dunmore's war.⁹

⁹ John Murray, fourth earl of Dunmore, b. 1732; d. 1809. In 1770, he was appointed governor of New York and two years later was transferred to Virginia. He was forced to flee early in 1775 and in 1776 fired Norfolk. He was defeated by Gen. Andrew Lewis, who, in the last intercolonial war, was a major under George Washington, in 1757.

"WILLIAMSBURG, October 7 [1775].

The following extract of a letter from Norfolk will serve to shew the distressed situation that town is unhappily reduced to by the wanton, unjust, and cruel behaviour of the tools of tyranny and oppression on board the ships of war in that harbour. Various reports have been in circulation here, within a few days past, of a manœuvre of the soldiery on the 30th ult. and from the communication by water being obstructed, it is seldom we get intelligence from thence: but we are assured the letter contains an authentic account.

"Extract of a letter from Norfolk, October 1.

'Yesterday came on shore about 15 of the King's soldiers, and marched up to the printing-office, out of which they took all the types and part of the press, and carried them on board the new ship Eilbeck, in presence, I suppose, of between two and three hundred spectators, without meeting with the least molestation; and upon the drums beating up and down the town, there were only about 35 men to arms. They say they want to print a few papers themselves; and they looked upon the press not to be free, and had a mind to publish something in vindication of their own characters. But as they have only part of the press, and no ink as yet, it is out of their power to do any thing in the printing business. They have got neither of the compositors, but I understand there is a printer on board the Otter. Mr. Cumming, the book-binder, was pressed on board, but is admitted ashore at times: He says Captain Squire was very angry they did not get Mr. Holt, who happened to be in the house the whole time they were searching, but luckily made his escape, notwithstanding the office was guarded all round. Mr. Cumming also informs, that the Captain says he will return every thing in safe order to the office, after he answers his ends, which, he says, will be in about three weeks. — It was extremely melancholy to hear the cries of the women and children in the streets; most of the families are moving out of town, with the greatest expedition; the carts have been going all this day.'"¹⁰

"WILLIAMSBURG, October 13 [1775].

The following address was presented to Lord Dunmore, by the Corporation of Norfolk, in consequence of Mr. Holt, Printer of that borough, being robbed of his printing materials, and his servants carried off, by order of his Lordship.

'To his Excellency the right Hon. JOHN Earl of DUNMORE, his Majesty's Lieutenant and Governor General of the colony and dominion of Virginia, &c. &c. WE his Majesty's faithful subjects, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of the borough of Norfolk, in Common-Hall assembled, beg leave to represent to your Lordship, that on this day a party of men under the command of Captain Squire, of the Otter sloop of war, lying in this harbour, landed in the most public part of this borough, in the most daring manner, and, in open violation of the peace and good order, seized on the printing utensils belonging to an inhabitant of this town, as well as the persons of two of his family.

'We beg leave also to represent to your Lordship that this act is both illegal and riotous; and that, together with a musket ball fired into the town yesterday, from on board the Kingfisher, has greatly alarmed and incensed the inhabitants, and has occasioned a great number of the women and children to abandon this borough; and that, if these arbitrary proceedings pass unnoticed by your Lordship, as chief magistrate of this colony, that none of the inhabitants are safe from insult and abuse. We therefore, as our duty, represent this matter to your Lordship for your interposition.

'We, my Lord, as men, and as a Common-Hall, have ever preserved the peace of this town, and have never prevented the ships of war and others from being supplied with provisions, or any other necessities, and have carefully avoided offering any insult to any of his Majesty's servants. We had therefore hoped, that the inhabitants would never have been molested in their lawful business. We are sorry, however, to have it in our power to state this fact to your Lordship; which we must and do think a gross violation of all that men and freemen can hold dear.

'Allow us to observe to your Lordship, that if the inhabitants had been disposed to repel insult, that they were sufficiently able either to have cut off, or taken prisoners, the small party that came on shore; and this, we hope, is another proof of their peaceable intentions.

'We the Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council of the borough of Norfolk, do most earnestly entreat your Lordship that the Captains of the men of war may not reduce the inhabitants to the dreadful alternative of defending their persons, or tamely suffering themselves to be abused, and request that your Lordship will interpose your authority to put a final stop to such violent infringements of our rights, and to order the persons seized on by Captain Squire to be immediately put on shore, and the property to be replaced from whence it was taken.

'To the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council, of the borough of Norfolk.

'GENTLEMEN,

'I was an eye-witness to a party, belonging to the Otter sloop of war, landing at the hour and place you mention, and did see them bring off two of the servants belonging to the printer, together with his printing utensils; and I do really think they could not have rendered the borough of Norfolk, or the country adjacent to it, a more essential service, than by depriving them of the means of poisoning the minds of the people, and exciting in them the spirit of rebellion and sedition, and by that means drawing inevitable ruin and destruction on themselves and country. As to the illegality of the act, I am afraid some of you, in this very common hall assembled, ought to blush when you make use of the expression; as I know you cannot but be conscious that you have, by every means in your power, totally subverted the laws and constitution, and have been the advisers and abettors in throwing off all allegiance to that Majesty's crown and government, to whom you profess yourselves faithful subjects. As to the musket ball being fired into the town, I do believe there is not a man in it that is not satisfied it was an accident; and such a one as, I hope, will not happen again. But with regard to your having ever preserved the peace in your town, there is a recent proof of the contrary. As to your not repelling the insult, as you call it, or taking prisoners the small party that was on shore, I impute it to some other reasons (from your drums beating to arms during greatest part of the time that the party was on shore) than to your peaceable intentions. As to your last requisition, I do assure you that every means in my power shall be employed, both with the navy and army, to preserve the peace, good order, and happiness of the inhabitants of the borough of Norfolk, so long as they behave themselves as faithful subjects to his Majesty. I expect at the same time, that if any individual shall behave himself as your printer has done, by aspersing the characters of his Majesty's servants, and others, in the most scurrilous, false, and scandalous manner, and by being the instigator of treason and rebellion against his Majesty's crown and government, and you not take such steps as the law directs to restrain such offenders, I do then expect you will not be surprised if the military power interposes to prevent the total dissolution of all decency, order and good government. But I promise the printer, on my honour, if he will put himself and servants under my protection, that they shall not meet with the least insult, and shall be permitted to print every occurrence that happens during these unhappy disputes between the Mother Country and her Colonies, he only confining himself to truth, and representing matters in a fair, candid, impartial manner on both sides.

'This, I hope, will convince you that I had nothing more in view, when I requested Captain Squire to seize the types, than that the unhappy deluded public might no longer remain in the dark concerning the present contest, but that they should be furnished with a fair representation of facts, which I know never can happen whilst the press remains under the controul of its present dictators.

HOLT TO SAMUEL ADAMS

New York 29th Jan^{ry} 1776

Sir

Happening lately to be in Company of a Worker in Metals and speaking of the Cannon lately spiked up at King's Bridge; I asked him if he knew how to clear the Cannon that Carleton had endeavoured to render useless by ramming them with Balls, at Montreal. He supposed that I had been applied to, to procure a Person who would undertake the Jobb, and last Night came to tell me he knew one who understood the Business & would do it on reasonable Terms; also that he understood repairing and putting old or damaged Muskets in Order, and would either buy them or make them fit for Service, and desired to know how much would be allowed on each piece of Cannon for clearing. I told him I had no Commission to do any thing in the Affair, but that as the Man he described, might be necessary to the Public Service, I would give Notice of him, and if it was thought proper to employ him, would let him know; In Consequence of which, I now give you this Intelligence. I could not know of my Informer, the Price expected on each Gun, but understood it would not exceed 20/ if the Number was considerable. The same Man also informed me of a Matter I had before heard of, and communicated to a Member of our Provincial Congress, viz. That the Emissaries of the British Ministry, particularly Governor Tryon, have for many Months past, been doing their utmost to engage all the Gunsmiths in America, in every Branch of the Business, to go for England, where they are promised high Wages and constant Employment for Life. That many of these in this Town, have actually enter'd into pay, & while they stay here are paid high Wages for not Working, nor instructing any Person in the Business; that a Number of these Workmen & many from this City, were sent home in the last packet, and every one who has any Skill in the Business here, has been tampered with — That even Convicts have been promised Pardons, 50 Guineas given for the Freedom of one in Maryland, & his Expences paid by Tryon to this City, from whence he was sent home. Two Convicts who lately were in Philadelphia, both Skilful Gunsmiths, enter'd into Contract with a Man here who fitted up a Shop for them, when they with some others, among whom were Servants went on board the Man of War, One of the Masters got Notice of it, sent his Principal Workman, (a Man in whom he confided, & who had a Wife here) to Governor Tryon, desireing his Assistance to get the Men back again. The Governor gave the Man a Letter to the Cap^t of the Man of War, who thereupon caused the Men all to leave the Ship, but before they reached the Shore, another Boat was sent after them, which carried them all on board the packet & they immediately sailed for England; the Man's Wife was sent after him by one of the last Ships. I believe you may depend upon the Truth of this Intelligence.

We still continue to be insulted by the two Ships of War close to our Docks, who not only seize all our Vessels that they can lay Hands on, and have put a stop to all our Navigation down the Sound between this & Hell-gate, which is the nearest place to this City, that they now dare venture to, but on every Occasion Menace the Town with a Canonade. And if we do not improve the Time before the Spring, or the arrival of Troops and Ships of War from England, I have not the least doubt but they will take possession of the Shores below and adjacent to Hell Gate, fill the Sound with their small Ships of War, & of Course stop all our Navigation in it, keep possession of long Island & make Excursions at pleasure upon the Mainland in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut & Rhode Island.

All this might be effectually prevented by our immediately erecting one or more strong Forts at & near Hell Gate and others on each Side below at the Narrows, with some Floats near them to obstruct the quick passing of Ships. Some floating Batteries would also be of the utmost importance. These Matters are absolutely necessary, & no Time ought to be lost. Whether or not our Provincial Congress are busied about other Affairs, so that they cannot attend to this, or that they expect Directions about it from the Continental Congress, I know not, but the Thing is not done, & the important golden Opportunity is hasting away — The Treasures of the Continent are in your Hands, all its Force under your Direction. If these Forts were only begun, with Vigour, in all probability the men of War would immediately decamp — if not should soon be able to secure them; I shall only add upon this Subject, now, that the Floats might be conveniently made in New Jersey, that I have seen a Scheme of the Form of them that I believe might be easily executed, and that Floating Batteries might be made either up the Sound, the North River, or in the Jerseys.

I am not a little solicitous for the Completion of our important Design at Quebec, in which some of my most intimate Friends & near Connections are engaged and among their Inducements to it, had all that my Influence could give — particularly my worthy Friend Cap^t Lamb, and my Son in Law M^r Eleazer Oswald, who tho' a Cap^t in the Expedition to Tyconderoga, Crown Point & taking the Vessels on the Lakes, went, thro' Friendship to Col^o Arnold & Zeal for the Service, with him a Volunteer, in his Expedition, without any Commission — The mortification I felt on hearing of our Repulse at Quebec, (tho' it cost some noble Blood, and caused a temporary Suspension of the Service of many valuable Men, by their Captivity, in which, I suppose, was included my Oswald, & M^r Lamb,) was abundantly compensated by hearing that they behaved bravely, becoming the Cause for which they fought, which, considering all Circumstances, I think the most important that was ever proposed to Mankind — Freedom and Justice, chased from every other Part of the Globe, also, where will they fly to, if driven from America? They must quit our wretched Globe and soar to Heaven. When I saw the Account of the gallant Behaviour of our Men, I was comforted for our Loss, when I saw the Names of my particular Friends among them, especially of my Boy Oswald, my mourning was turned into Joy, tho' he & they, as I suppose, are Prisoners. I was the more interested in the Conduct of this youth, because I had some Share in forming his political Principles. He came young from Falmouth, in England, where his Mother still lives, his Father, who sailed from that port Cap^t of a Ship, in the Jamaica Trade, has not been heard of for some Years. He served an Apprenticeship in this Town, where he behaved well & became connected with my Family. He was, like most Englishmen, prejudiced in Favour of the Ministerial Claims of Superiority and coercive Authority over the Americans, but was easily convinced of his Mistake, and ever since has been a hearty, zealous & active Friend to the great Cause in which we are now engaged. He is a very complete Master of the Military Exercise, which he learned from the Fagall Man^{11a} of Col. Bernards Regiment, who was the most remarkably expert of any Man in the English Army. And I have been told there is no Man in our Army that is a better Master of the Manual Exercise than M^r Oswald. On the News of the Battle of Lexington, he was one of the Foremost Volunteers who set out from New Haven with Col. Arnold (of whom he has a high Opinion) to Boston, from whence they went on the Tyconderoga Expedition. In the Course of that Service, he went as a Courier, entrusted with the Care of the Business on which he went, two or more very long Journeys; in one of which, to the Continental Congress, he carried Col. Arnold's Proposals of an Expedition to Canada, on which he asked my Advice & Assistance. He was, in every Affair in which he was engaged, remarkably diligent assiduous & active. In one Day on this Journey he rode 95 and in another 115 Miles, and if every Advantage had been improved that was then in our Power, we should long since have been in quiet Possession of all Canada. I do not know by what Means the Canada Expedition was retarded, but it was retarded so long that it is almost Miraculous that it was attended with any Success at all. Col. Arnold it seems had been traduced, and had many Prejudices to encounter before he could receive his Commission, and then could not obtain such Offices for his Friends as were Necessary to induce them to follow him. M^r Oswald was very necessary to him, but he could obtain no Commission for him that was worth his Acceptance. However, personal Friendship for Col^o Arnold, and Zeal for the Cause, prompted M^r Oswald to go without any Commission, and with Joy I understand his Behaviour as a Soldier has done him Honour. The Wisdom and Dignity that has been conspicuous in all the Proceedings of the Continental Congress, leaves me no Room to doubt their favourable Notice of all who have distinguished themselves in the Public Service of America, especially in this Arduous Enterprise for the Reduction of Canada to join the general Interest. I have been thus particular, respecting M^r Oswald, that you may judge what Service he is most fit for, and that the Talents and Qualifications he possesses may be usefully employed in his Country's Service. He has Youth, Health, Hardiness, Activity, Courage & Perseverance. He is sober, diligent in Business & faithful to his Trust. He is skilful in the Manual Exercise, a very good Penman Accomptant & Arithmetician, with some Knowledge of Navigation, above all his Honour & Integrity may be safely relied on. If such a Person can be rendered useful to America, I doubt not the Continental Congress will cause his Talents to be properly applied, especially as the encouragement of those who have done well is a powerful Inducement to a laudable Emulation in others, to follow and improve upon the Example. Pray excuse my Prolixity. One Thing more I would mention.

The Post Office. Under the British Administration, the Primary End of it was, the augmentation of the Revenue, the public Conveniency, was but a secondary Consideration. With us, at present, and I hope it will always be so, the Case is reversed; the public Conveniency, is the first Object. In comparison of this, the Revenue it produces, is hardly worth the least Notice, and in Order to give it all the Usefulness that might reasonably be expected from it, the Post Masters, from the highest to the Lowest should be indispensably enjoined to oblige all the Riders to carry and deliver at the proper places on their Respective Roads, all the Newspapers that should be brought to the post Offices for that purpose. In what I shall say upon this Subject, I am not in the least influenced by my own private Interest as the Printer of a Newspaper, but solely by a Regard to the publick good. I propose in a few Weeks, perhaps in one Week more, to discontinue the printing of a News paper, one great Reason of which Intention is, that I cannot get my Papers carried with any Regularity by the Posts, who consider the Carriage and Delivery of News papers, not as a matter of Duty, but Courtesy, and for this they are quite arbitrary in their Demands, as Caprice, or Avarice moves them; and often refuse to do the Business at all; many also sell or give away the papers they Carry, to any person that desires them. These Obstructions to the Regular Conveyance of News papers, is a very great Hindrance to their Circulation, and give infinite Vexation to those who send, and to those who ought to receive them, and greatly injure both in their Property, especially the Printer, who there by loses I suppose more than one half of the Country Customers he would otherwise have. But I mean now only to consider the Matter as it affects the Publick. As a mere Conveniency, the Carriage of News papers is of Importance to more than twenty Times as Many Persons as the Carriage of Letters is, and there are very few persons but who are much more solicitous to receive their News papers, than Letters, by the Post. But the great Use of News papers is that they form the best opportunities of Intelligence, that could be divised, of every publick Matter that concerns us, besides communicating many Useful Discoveries in Arts and Manufactories & many moral & religious Truths &c. It was by the means of News papers, that we receiv'd & spread the Notice of the tyrannical Designs formed against America, and kindled a Spirit that has been sufficient to repel them. But I need not to enumerate the advantages & Importance of a general Circulation of News papers, which I think are greater than of all the Letters carried by the Post — But it has been objected, that the Quantity of News papers is so great, as to overburden the Post Horses, and fill the Mail, so as not to have Room for or admit the Carriage of Letters & Dispatches — I answer that the mails should be enlarged or other Mails & Horses provided; and to defray the Expence, a reasonable, small allowance might be made, upon every Paper; by these means every one would get their Papers at an equal and easy Expence, which would give general Satisfaction, and remove every just Cause of Complaint. If two Horses were necessary, the smallest Boy, under the Care of a Man, might suffice for one of them, or the Horse might be led. The Experience I have had, both as the Printer of a News Paper, and as a Post Master, which I was for Many Years, convinces me that what I have now mentioned to you concerning News Papers, is just, and a Matter of very great Importance; The Government in England has been long verging towards Tyranny, the Increase of the Revenue, instead of increasing the National Strength & Happiness, has been applied to increase the Power and Influence of the Crown, which has at last almost swallowed up all the Rights & Liberty of the People. When an Imposition is granted upon any Article for Raising a Revenue for National Service, it is in Effect little different from giving so much to the King & his Ministers, to apply as they please. When a Tax was granted upon Letters, we may reasonably suppose it was intended News papers should be sent by the same Conveyance, since the Grant of a Tax was a Favour from the People to the Crown, for which they might have claimed the privilege of sending their News papers at an easy Expence. But we find the Ministry have instructed or permitted their Servants to discourage the sending of News papers by the Posts, either by a total Prohibition, or by exacting a high price for the Service, or at best granting it as a great Favour. It is the Continental Congress alone who can put this matter upon a proper Footing, it is not to be expected from a Post Master. Nor, in forming a Constitution ought any such power to be left in the Hands of a Single Person. Since a Post Office has been erected in Canada, I have heard several Complaints of the high postage, which the Soldiers & their Friends cannot well afford to pay — I believe it would be for the good of the Service if all Letters to and From Soldiers on Duty might go free of postage. I hope you will excuse this unconnected Epistle, being written in a Hurry at different Times, as I could get a Little Leasure. I am S^r

HOLT TO NEW YORK ASSEMBLY

State of New York

Poughkeepsey 13th Feb^r 1778

Gentlemen

Having after great Expence and Loss by the Enemy (at Danbury, on the Way) removed, with my Family, from New Haven to Kingston, on an Offer, by Letter, from a Committee of the Convention, to do the Printing Business of this State, in which I was engaged, at that Place, when, on Intelligence of the Enemy's Approach, the Assembly precipitantly broke up, having first in Order to transact publick Business, during their Recess, appointed a Council of Safety. These Gentlemen, offered and promised, in Case the Enemy should attempt landing at Kingston, to assist me with Waggons, not only for the Removal of the Printing Materials, part of which belonged to the State, but of my Family and private Effects. However several Circumstances concurring to render it improbable that the Enemy would attempt any Act of Hostility upon Kingston, or be able to hurt it if they should, the Inhabitants in general were unprepared for it, and when the Enemy landed, were destitute of the Means of Removal. Amongst the rest I shared the common Calamity — No Carriages were to be had, except four Waggons, when the Enemy were just at Hand, sent me by the President of the Council, which enabled me to remove about a Sixth part of my Effects, Viz One wearing apparel, three Beds, my Account Books, most of my Paper and the two best Fonts of printing Letter belonging to the State, which I preserved in preference to my own, the whole of which, together with my Press, all my printed Books, parchment &c. all my Household & Kitchen Furniture &c were totally destroyed or plundered by the Enemy, and my Family and Workmen obliged to take Refuge among the Neighbouring Inhabitants. In this Situation, on applying to the Council of Safety, I found it their Sense, that I should be supported as Printer to the State, that I should endeavour to keep my people together, & to collect materials for the commencement of Business again. To enable me to do this, they advanced me £200. amount Money of the State, which Sum, in several long Journeys, the purchase of sundry Necessaries, and my Removal to this place, has been long since all expended, together with some I have been obliged to borrow from a Friend. And yet, finding a considerable Deficiency of the sum requisite to the Recommencement of Business, and Subsistence of my Family, I am constrained to make this application to the Honourable Assembly of this State, requesting a further Supply of Money to enable me to do their Business, &c. I am

P. S. I have since my arrival here, been long retarded from beginning Business, by the extreme Difficulty of procuring a few Necessaries — I am at last ready to begin composing, if the Assembly will please to furnish me with Copy of the Work first wanted. But I am still unable to do my Press Work, for Want of a Blanket, which I have, without Effect, used my utmost Endeavours to obtain.

HOLT TO GERARD BANCKER

Sir

I understand the Assembly have ordered me £200, to be paid by you out of the State Treasury. I have not seen the Order or Act so that I cannot tell the Tenor of it, only that it is for printing the Laws and Votes at this their last Meeting, which cannot go on without the Money, and are I suppose wanted with all possible Expedition. I shall therefore take it as a Favour if you will send an Order to the County Treasurer, who is my near Neighbour, if he has any money in his Hands, that he is to remit to you, that he will pay it to me, so far as to discharge the Order aforesaid or such part of it as the Balance amounts to — As soon as I see the Order, or Act, I shall acquaint you with the Contents of it, which you may also know, I suppose, by inquiring of M^r Lansing or any of the Albany Members and you'll much oblige

GIFTS

DURING the month of August, 1920, the Library received as gifts a total of 3,064 volumes, 3,041 pamphlets, 7 maps, and 18 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following: From the Evening Telegram, New York City, came 391 bound volumes of newspapers and magazines, including the "New York Recorder," "Galignani's Messenger," "Le Figaro"; from the Museum of French Art, New York City, came copies of the privately-printed catalogues of their First and Second Official Loan Exhibitions of French Art; from Mrs. David H. Miller came a copy of "The Gallery of Masterpieces, a collection of reproductions in Photo-Mezzotint from the finest works of the most famous painters down to the year 1800," and the two volumes of the "Poetical Works of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow," illustrated, Boston, 1879; the University of California gave the Library 43 volumes of its Semicentennial Publications, and the Musée Océanographique de Monaco, 6 volumes of its publication, "Resultats des Campagnes Scientifiques accomplies sur son yacht par Albert I^{er}, Prince Souverain de Monaco, publiés sous sa direction avec le concours de M. Jules Rechart," Monaco, 1916-1920.

Arthur William Heintzelman has presented to the Print Room of the Library seven of his latest etchings, including "Three Score and Ten," which won five prizes and other honors in exhibitions of the present year.

From Mme. V^{re} C. Pissarro and her children, Stamford, Conn., has come a collection of ten etchings by Camille Pissarro (one of four sets reserved for museums).

Mr. Rockwell Kent, of Sunderland, Vermont, gave the Library one of his lithographs; and from Mr. Walter Tittle, of Springfield, Ohio, came four of his etchings (described in the Bulletin of August, 1920).

Miscellaneous collections of books and pamphlets were received from the following: Mr. Oscar Aurelius Morgner (79 volumes of Chinese books, including text-books for high schools); Mr. C. K. Edmonds (16 volumes of the "Youth's Companion," etc.); Mr. Edward Bossing (80 volumes, including the "Scientific American Supplement," Hardwicke's "Science Gossip," 1866-1880).

From the Army and Navy Journal, New York, came a collection of 161 volumes and 22 pamphlets, mainly relating to the World War. Other additions by gift to the Library's collection of divisional and regimental histories numbered 11 volumes, 7 pamphlets, and 1 chart.

Trelles, Carlos M. Biblioteca geográfica cubana. Matanzas: Oliver, 1920. 340 p. 8°. HO

One of a new series by this author of which Biblioteca científica cubana has already been published and of which Historica (2 volumes), Literaria (1 volume) and Prensa (2 volumes) are yet to appear. The first series entitled Bibliografía cubana in 12 volumes covered the period 1600-1916. The latest volume, Biblioteca geográfica, includes titles in different languages, although most are in Spanish. Classified arrangement with index.

Webster, F. B., editor. Shipbuilding cyclopedia; a reference book covering definitions of shipbuilding terms, basic design, hull specifications, planning and estimating, ships' rigging and cargo handling gear, tables of displacement of commodities, arrangement and working drawings of modern vessels. New York: Simmons-Boardman Co., 1920. 1119 p. 4°. †VXH

In part a reference, in part a text book. First 149 pages contain an excellent glossary of shipbuilding terms. Remainder of work largely tables and designs for the ship builder.

Who was who; a companion to "Who's who" containing the biographies of those who died during the period 1897-1916. London: Black, 1920. 789 p. sq. 12°.

Information Desk

Contains reprints from the annual Who's who, of all biographies of distinguished Englishmen who have died during the period 1897-1916, with the date of death added. Obviates the need of keeping a complete file of past volumes available, and saves time by making a search in only one place necessary. It may be hoped that this volume will serve as a useful example to the publishers of Who's who in America.

ORIENTAL ART

Brown, Percy. Indian painting. Calcutta: The Assoc. Press [1918,] ii p., 41., (1)6-115 p., 16 pl. 12°. (The heritage of India series.) MAF

Part 1. History of Indian painting. Part 2. Description of Indian painting.

"The West had settled down to the comfortable feeling that there was no such art as painting in India... But the sympathetic appreciation of Indian art, especially painting, has been gaining ground. Fundamentally, no true comparisons can be instituted between the art of the Orient and that of the Occident... The aim of the Buddhist artist was to visualize the ideals of his creed... Of the Indian painter, as an individual, little is known."—Introduction.

The preface, after stating that the art of savage peoples has been dealt with mainly by ethnographers, for whom it was an incident, continues: "As in the Middle Ages, the religious spirit of the race has inspired each artist and has thus constituted an art collective rather than individual... If ethnography is a young science, the discovery and study of savage art are more recent still."

"The art of China is interesting to students of other countries in proportion as it is entirely national and expresses the ideals and spirit of this ancient people... China has a civilization and an art the fountains of which bubble forth from her own territory... The only accurate viewpoint for the study of the art of China is from the centre of its own cultural development. In China art is the expression of culture."—Introduction.

Foucher, Alfred Charles Auguste. The beginnings of Buddhist art, and other essays in Indian and Central-Asian archaeology. Revised by the author and translated by L. A. Thomas and F. W. Thomas, with a preface by the latter. Paris: P. Geuthner, 1917. xvi, 316 p., 51 pl. 4°. MAF

"Buddhism is a subject of vast extent. The study of it is still at the stage of discovery. We cannot touch it in any part without evoking responses from distant and unexpected quarters. We... fix upon the Græco-Buddhist school of Gandhara, and promptly some analogy or connection transports us to the Central Asia, China or Japan of many centuries later... The reader will find in these pages abundant examples of such transitions... Where religious art and archaeology are the theme, literature cannot be far away. M. Foucher has commented upon the predominantly narrative character of the bas-reliefs with which he is dealing... The great bulk of them are illustrations of scenes from the life of the Buddha... In M. Foucher's work the reader will remark... the emergence of principles fitted to serve as a guide for future discovery and criticism in this field of study."—Translator's preface.

Preface. Chronology of Chinese dynasties. Part 1. Chinese porcelain and pottery [described by John Getz]. Part 2. Sculpture, painting and minor arts.

"The culture of the Far East is linked with our own by ties of the most vital importance... The various national schools of art of the Orient can no longer be regarded as isolated phenomena, interesting only in a retrospective sense. They are active processes, destined to exert a growing influence upon the esthetic ideals of Occidental lands."—Preface.

"In the foreground stand the works themselves; only the art-historical problems, which follow from the interrelations of the works, are to be more closely illuminated. The basis of this examination is less what the works signify, than what they express."

THE PHOTOSTAT IN REFERENCE WORK

BY CHARLES F. McCOMBS
Readers' Division, The New York Public Library

THE photostat is a specially-constructed copying camera which makes the photographic reproduction directly on sensitized paper. A roll of paper is fastened in a magazine at the back of the camera box, and is unrolled as needed. The sheets, cut off in the proper length, are dropped into the developing box as fast as the exposures are made. Books, prints, or objects to be copied are placed under glass on an adjustable frame, which may be raised or lowered if enlargement or reduction of the original is desired. The print is a negative, corrected as to position, but with the black and white of the original reversed.

If a positive print — a facsimile with black letters on a white ground — is desired, the negative, when developed, is placed on the frame and photographed again. Each additional positive copy of a print is obtained by repeating this process of photographing the negative, and not, as in the case of a glass negative, printing from it. The prints may be developed in the developing box, or more conveniently in the dark room. When washed, the prints are dried on racks or between blotters.

Negative prints — white on black — are clear, easy to read and for ordinary printed matter, almost as satisfactory as the positives. A bromide or mat finished paper is ordinarily used, but if sharper detail is desired a gelatine or glossy paper is needed. The gelatine paper is slower, slightly more difficult to manipulate, and more expensive, but is always used if the prints are for reproduction.

For the convenience of readers, The New York Public Library installed a photostat in December, 1912. Reproductions are made only of books or other material in the Library's collections. No outside commercial work is done. In 1913, the first year of its operation, 511 orders were handled. This machine makes prints up to 11½ by 14 inches in size. The work developed so rapidly that in 1917 a second machine, making prints 14 by 18 inches — used for newspapers, maps, etc. — was purchased. The order book records 4,150 separate orders for 1919, and the number handled during the present year will probably reach 5,600. In other words, in one month the Library now handles as many orders as were placed during the twelve months of 1913.

The number of orders placed merely indicates the number of separate transactions recorded. A single order may be for only one page of a book, requiring but one print, or it may be for the entire book which might require several hundred prints. Usually one order sheet contains items from several books. Large orders requiring hundreds of prints are of frequent occurrence.

Why should a library maintain such a photographic service? After all it is merely an important auxiliary to our reference service. The increasing use of photostat reproductions is due to a growing realization of its unlimited possibilities in reference work, in making the resources of a great library more accessible in convenient and usable form, and at comparatively small cost.

In university or reference libraries photography has long been employed for copying manuscripts, early printed books, or other material of which facsimiles and not transcripts or tracings are required for study. It is also used for reproducing pictures or portraits for book or periodical illustration. Libraries, however, have seldom maintained photographic departments, but have entrusted the work to reliable commercial photographers. Photographs made from plate negatives are expensive, and the process, as compared with the photostat, slow. They are, of course, better reproductions — sharper in detail and finer in finish — than the photostat print, although a skilful operator, using a gelatine paper, can make prints with the photostat that compare favorably with good plate work. The Library is doing more and more of this kind of work for book and magazine illustration.

The chief advantages of the photostat, or of similar copying devices, are the simplicity of operation, the rapidity with which prints can be turned out, and the small cost in comparison with other photographic processes. The use of the photostat is by no means limited to reproducing the things previously mentioned. In fact, this material forms a relatively small, though important, part of the work now done by the Library.

The portable typewriting machine is a great aid to the writer whose daily work requires the use of a public library. Note-taking in longhand — even dictation to a stenographer — is slow and fatiguing work. If one is gathering material for an article, one is apt to make a rough digest or summary of the essential sources consulted, or painfully to copy important paragraphs in full. Either method is tedious, and when some time later — often far away from books and libraries — notes are finally arranged, and the actual writing begun, there is constant worry and uncertainty as to the accuracy and completeness of the notes. Errors of fact occur, due to bad handwriting, and errors in reasoning, due to serious omissions. The use of the typewriter by many professional writers has lessened the drudgery to some degree and has saved much time.

Perhaps the photostat will change all that when the advantages of an absolutely accurate copy of a printed page are fully realized. A modern library finds it necessary to provide places — apart from readers who desire quiet — where typewriting machines may be used, and it is glad to grant such requests as far as space permits. Is it any less important that a great reference library should provide at cost a photographic copying service?

Such a service could be maintained by the joint effort of libraries of various types — university and special libraries, museums, or other educational institutions in a place where the returns would not justify any one of them in installing such a service, or where the initial cost of equipment and the operating expenses could not be borne.

It is a safe prediction that within the next few years the photostat will change many of the present methods of reference work in research libraries. Few people have any idea of the vital if inconspicuous part which the printed book plays in furthering progress in science, in government, and in all departments of human activity. No real advance would be possible in any field, without an appalling waste of time and energy, if we did not know what had been accomplished in the past, or is now being done in other parts of the world, and that knowledge can only be gained from printed books and other records.

There are three services which a library can perform which make its books accessible to scholars everywhere, and which extend its usefulness far beyond its own community. First, the preparation of printed catalogues of notable special collections, or bibliographies on important subjects such as are published in this Bulletin. Second, the further development of inter-library loans of books needed for research, and finally, provision for a rapid and inexpensive photographic copying service.

When a library is asked for a book which it does not possess, one which is badly needed for important study, a resourceful reference librarian will endeavor, by means of printed catalogues or special bibliographies, to find a copy in some other library. He will try to borrow it, or if that cannot be done, to obtain photostat reproductions of the pages needed.

An examination of our photostat order blanks for any month is illuminating and instructive. Each affords concrete evidence of the practical use made of a reference library. In the main, requests fall into the following groups:

(1) Printed matter — whether books, periodicals or newspapers — of which merely a copy is wanted. A transcript in longhand, or a typewritten copy would serve just as well, but the photostat is quicker, and usually cheaper in the long run. A photographic copy is also free from errors and omissions to which the most careful copyist or typist is at times liable, and the record is more permanent.

Orders for prints come from engineers, chemists, makers of everything from explosive powder to paint. The special libraries and laboratories of industrial and manufacturing corporations call upon us for articles in scientific and technical journals needed to carry on their own investigations. Banks and social workers want statistical tables and government reports. Musicians, composers, even orchestra conductors, are using photostat copies of music which is out of print, or which can not be easily obtained outside of library collections. For no other two classes of printed matter is the use of the photostat more important than for tables of statistics, and music. A wrong figure or a false note may produce disastrous consequences. Family trees and coats of arms are copied for genealogists, professional and amateur.

American, British and foreign patents are photographed for patent lawyers, or for patent departments of large industrial corporations. Probably more than half the prints we make are copies of the specifications and drawings of patents.

The names of writers, critics, editors, journalists — especially the special feature writer, — scholars, university professors, graduate students, government officials and diplomats, may be found in our index to orders received.

(2) In the second group are included the following classes of material: maps, diagrams, architectural plans, and all forms of graphic or pictorial art, whether original prints or illustrations found in books. Were it not for the inexpensive photostat such material would be photographed by the slower plate process if desired for book, magazine or newspaper illustration. If copies are wanted for study only, or for use in designing, tracings (if permitted) or sketches might be used.

Artists, architects, landscape gardeners, designers of furniture, textiles, rugs, jewelry, actors, stage managers, and moving picture managers (for details as to costumes, stage settings, makeup of historical characters), and advertising men are among the many classes of people who wish reproductions of all sorts of pictures. Newspapers and magazines make frequent requests for portraits of persons who have suddenly achieved celebrity, or for views — scenes or buildings — from some part of the world brought to public attention by current events.

EXTRA:

Passed unanimously at 1.15 o'clock, P. M. December 20th, 1860.

AN ORDINANCE

To dissolve the Union between the State of South Carolina and other States united with her under the compact entitled "The Constitution of the United States of America."

We, the People of the State of South Carolina, in Convention assembled, do hereby declare and ordain, and it is hereby declared and ordained,

That the Ordinance adopted by us in Convention, on the twenty-third day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-eight, whereby the Constitution of the United States of America was ratified, and also, all Acts and parts of Acts of the General Assembly of this State, ratifying amendments of the said Constitution, are hereby repealed; and that the union now subsisting between South Carolina and other States, under the name of "The United States of America," is hereby dissolved.

REPRODUCED FROM PHOTOSTAT

COPY OF STATISTICAL TABLE

(3) The third and last group of this rough classification comprises manuscripts, incunabula, first editions, rarities of all sorts, of which photographic copies are almost a necessity for satisfactory study or collation, if access cannot be had to the originals. Furthermore, the originals, which are frequently of great value, and practically irreplaceable (manuscripts, of course, are unique), are saved the wear and tear to which even the most careful handling subjects them, if they are frequently consulted. The average person is not apt to think that books of this class are of much use except in museums. They have a certain interest on account of their beauty or value or rarity, and he enjoys seeing them on exhibition, but he does not know that they are necessary for studies in history, or literature, or the development of the art of printing.

A large reference library, as was shown in "A Librarian's Mail," which appeared in the July issue of the Bulletin, receives many letters which can not be satisfactorily answered, because of the time which the search, collection of material and copying would require of the reference staff, already unable to meet the more legitimate demands of readers in this Library. The photostat is frequently mentioned, and in many cases where the books suggested can not be obtained in libraries nearer the writer's home, a request is received for a photostat copy of the picture or page or chapter. The use of the photostat in handling a reference library's correspondence has not begun to be developed.

A properly organized photostat service involves far more than a machine, a dark room, and an operator. The actual process of photographing and developing is after all a small part of the job. The greater part of the orders received are placed directly by readers at the Library. An increasing number are received by letter, or formal written order, and many — chiefly for patents — are telephoned. The service is at present organized as a section of the Readers' Division, its headquarters at the delivery desk in the Main Reading Room, with a reference assistant in immediate charge. There is also at the delivery desk a clerical assistant, and a page is regularly assigned for messenger duty. In the photographing room the force consists of a skilled photographer, an assistant operator and a page.

All correspondence, save routine notices, is handled through the Director's office. The service must be supervised by an assistant with reference experience, familiar with library methods, having some knowledge of bibliography and reference books. Orders are frequently vague and inexact in describing the material to be photographed, and the same problems that occur in reference work constantly arise — the books must be collected from all over the Library, the pages or plates to be photographed carefully marked, and explicit directions given on the order sheet. The prints when made and assembled in the photographing room, must then be checked with the order, omissions noted and filled in, and the completed work filed for delivery or prepared for mailing. In 1913 the orders were handled through the Director's office and the work done by one of the stack assistants who spent a few hours each week in the photographing room.

CITY DIRECTORIES

THE Library is making an effort to build up its collection of directories of other cities. Letters asking assistance and proposing exchange relations have been sent to many libraries and chambers of commerce, with encouraging results. The Library appreciates deeply any help that is given towards the further development of this important Reference Department collection.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of September, 1920, the Library received as gifts a total of 1,813 volumes, 6,068 pamphlets, 33 maps, and 40 prints.

Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following: From Miss Grace Bigelow came a large collection of books and pamphlets relating to American History before the Civil War, American International Relations, 1873-1908, and also a collection of American addresses, 1836-1870 — in all, 29 volumes, 342 pamphlets, and 13 sheets. The American Kennel Club, New York, gave 19 bound volumes of "The Field," London, 1846, 1853-57, 1859-65. From the Manufacturers Aircraft Association, Inc., came 45 copies of the "Aircraft Year Book, 1920."

Mr. George F. Kurzman, of New York, gave the Library a miscellaneous collection of fiction, textbooks, guide books, poetry, dictionaries, etc., comprising 185 volumes and 17 pamphlets. From Dr. Hermann Escher, Director of the Zentralbibliothek, Zurich, Switzerland, came two volumes and one pamphlet, as follows: "Fünfhundert und sechzig Jahre aus der Geschichte der Familie Escher Vom Glas, 1320-1885," in two parts; and "Die Glaubensparteien in der Eidgenossenschaft und ihre Beziehungen zum Ausland, vornehmlich zum Hause Habsburg und zu den deutschen Protestanten, 1527-1531," by Dr. Hermann Escher, Frauenfeld, 1882.

Fifteen additions were made by gift to the Library's collection of divisional and regimental histories.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN SEPTEMBER, 1920

DURING the month of September, 1920, there were received at the Library 15,814 volumes and 6,331 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 74,293. They consulted 170,966 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 197,134.

A HISTORY OF
THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

BY HARRY MILLER LYDENBERG
Chief Reference Librarian

Previous chapters of this history have appeared in the Bulletin as follows:

- I. The Astor Library, July – August, 1916
- II. The Lenox Library, September, 1916
- III. The Tilden Trust, February, 1917
- IV. The New York Free Circulating Library, April, 1917

The later chapters were delayed because certain documents and other sources needed were inaccessible at the time. It is not unfitting that they should now be printed in this year which finishes the first quarter century of the life of The New York Public Library.

It had been planned to take up first the three constituent libraries of the original foundation; then to follow with the libraries that came in as a result of the Carnegie gift, arranged in the order of their organization; then the negotiations that led to the consolidation of 1895, followed by a narrative of the events between 1895 and 1920, the establishment of the circulation department, and the development of the plans and the structure of the new building. The story of the New York Free Circulating Library was printed out of its chronological order, but with that exception the scheme outlined above will be followed.

CHAPTER V

The Harlem Library

The history of the Harlem Library takes us far afield, back to the days of that brave, bigoted, energetic, industrious sailor, then known as the Duke of York, who later lost three kingdoms as James the Second of Great Britain. It was while Richard Nicolls served His Royal Highness as governor of the newly-acquired province of New York that two patents were granted to the freeholders and inhabitants of Harlem in May, 1666, and October 11, 1667, granting and confirming their rights to the Harlem Commons.*

To the present generation of urban dwellers "commons" probably requires elaborate explanation. Boston still jealously guards its "Common," but on Manhattan common lands have had to give way to progress and improvement. We still have parks, to be sure, but "commons" exist only in tradition and in some of the suburbs.

These commons that lay between the thriving city at the south end of the island and the sleepy little village to the northeast were very real. Productive doubtless of joy to the children who played on them, or to the farmer whose cattle, pigs or goats grazed thereon, they were nevertheless a fruitful source of trouble to the elders who ruled the city. Just about a century after Nicolls had confirmed the rights of the freeholders the provincial legislature had to step in and settle disputes about these commons.

The "Act to settle and establish the Line or Lines of Division between the City of New-York, and the Township of Harlem, so far as concerns the Right of Soil in Controversy," passed March 24, 1772, gives a more moving picture of the troubles and vexations caused by these commons than is usual in legislative enactments. The preamble recites how "Disputes and Controversies have long subsisted between the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the City of New-York, and divers Persons claiming under the Township of Harlem, in the Outward of said City, respecting the Division Line between the Lands granted to said Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the City of New-York, and the said Township of Harlem, which are productive of great Trouble, Expence, and Vexation to both Parties," and the act authorizes three commissioners to fix the line of division.

After half a century this same "trouble, expence, and vexation" brought the commons to the front again. By 1820 they had become — as the "Act relative to the common lands of the freeholders and inhabitants of Harlaem"† recited in its preamble — "at present waste and unproductive, and liable to be sold under assessments of the corporation of the city of New-York, for opening the avenues to the said city." This act authorized their sale and directed the trustees appointed for the purpose to distribute and pay out of the moneys received from the sale $3,000 "to the trustees of the Harlaem library for the benefit of the said library," $4,000 "to the trustees of such school as may be established in the village of Harlaem," and other sums to churches and to other schools in Harlem. The records of the trustees (Riker papers in the Manuscripts division) show in detail how their money was received and spent. The only part of interest to us here concerns the payments to the Harlem Library and the Harlem School, both of which were duly made. A facsimile of the check to the Library and the acquittance or receipt of the trustees is shown herewith.

Harlem at that time "was a village with few people, a single church, and a little school house." It lay between the Harlem river, the East river, and the line of hills running from Hell Gate to Manhattanville. It had three roads to the city: the first zigzagged, as a country road should, approximately along the line of the present 3d Avenue; the second (the Bloomingdale road) followed the lines of our present Broadway, and the third (the middle road) ran through what is now Central Park. The Harlem Railroad was yet to come. Stages carried people to the city by land and steam boats plied on the East river. Third Avenue had been opened and was then being graded and macadamized. The scattered houses were of wood, mostly on small holdings. A score or so of farms, some as large as 90 acres, lay around them. Paved streets were few and sidewalks fewer.*

For some time before this act of 1820 there had been in Harlem a voluntary association of thirty-two life members for support of a library, but this association was unincorporated.† On September 13, 1825, twelve of these persons, with others, held the first meeting of the members of the Harlem Library. The manuscript minutes make no mention of the place of meeting, or of the number present. They do record that Dr. Samuel Watkins was chosen President, Mr. James Phillips, Secretary, and Dr. Watkins was "authorized to procure an act of Incorporation, that the association may be legally entitled to receive the appropriation made by the legislature from the proceeds of the Harlem Commons." The following men were elected from the members as trustees: Rev. C. C. Ver Meule, Dr. Samuel Watkins, D. P. Ingraham, John Randel, Michl. Dyckman, Valentine Nutter, Andrew McGown, John S. Adriance, John Higham, James Phillips.

Apparently no officers were chosen until January 20, 1826, when the trustees met at the home of Mr. Bradshaw and chose Valentine Nutter as chairman, Andrew McGown as treasurer, and James Phillips librarian and secretary. At this meeting Dr. Watkins, Dr. Ver Meule, and Messrs. Ingraham, McGown, and Phillips were appointed a committee to frame a constitution, laws and regulations; to procure a seal; to secure a room; and to learn whether a lot suitable for the library was available as a gift or by purchase. The President and Treasurer were authorized to receive the appropriation from the trustees of the sale of the common lands and to invest it in real estate mortgages of not less than three nor more than seven years.

At a subsequent meeting of the trustees in February, 1826, a form of certificate of membership was adopted and Messrs. Ingraham and Phillips were appointed a committee to spend $100 on books. It was determined to open the library on March 1.

The "laws and ordinances" adopted March 26, 1826, provided that the members of the association should choose from their number a chairman, treasurer, and librarian at the annual election to be held at the library on the first Tuesday of September. The trustees were to meet on the first Monday in September, December, March, and June at 4 p. m. in June and September, and 2 p. m. in December and March. At the next stated meeting after each annual meeting a library committee was to be appointed for general supervision of the library. The membership dues were fixed at ten dollars.

The librarian was "to take the charge of the Library; to register the names of those who take out books; to keep an account of the number of shares each man owns; to label the books with the title of the Library; to keep a catalogue of all the books; to collect all the dues and fines and pay them to the Treasurer; to report delinquents to the Trustees; to give written notices of every meeting to each Trustee; to keep regular minutes of the transactions of the institution, and to lay them before the Trustees at each meeting; to affix upon the outer door of the Library a notice of every election of Trustees; to enter all the by-laws and ordinances of the association in a book to be provided for that purpose; and to attend to the Library at such times as the Trustees may direct, for which duties he shall receive an annual salary of Fifty Dollars."

The Treasurer was to perform the usual duties of a finance officer.

Article 6 treated "Of loaning Books" and provided that shareholders were entitled to keep a duodecimo volume one week, an octavo two weeks, a quarto three, and a folio four. Longer retention entailed a fine of three cents per day for folios and two for volumes of less size. But one volume per share was to be withdrawn at one time. Damage or loss was to be made good and if the injured volume belonged to a set the entire set was to be replaced before another book could be taken.

A majority of the trustees was to consist of residents of Harlem. The library was to be open on Saturdays from two to six p. m. A borrower who lent a book out of his dwelling house was fined twenty-five cents. New members might borrow books by depositing with the librarian the purchase price and paying 12½ cents per week for octavos or larger volumes and 8 cents for smaller sizes. Annual dues for shareholders were fixed at one dollar.

At the same meeting at which the "laws and ordinances" were adopted Dr. Watkins and Andrew McGown were appointed "a committee to enquire into the expenses of building a Library Room and the best mode of building the same and report at the next meeting."

The Library Committee was chosen at the same time, being made up of Rev. Cornelius C. Ver Meule, Daniel P. Ingraham, Andrew McGown, John Higham, James Phillips.

The building committee was not ready to report at the next meeting as it had been instructed, but it was evidently busy; it asked on Monday, May 1, 1826, at the next meeting, that John Higham be added as a member. This meeting was adjourned to the first Monday in June next at four o'clock p. m. The next entry in the minutes shows the result of their deliberations.* It was then "RESOLVED, that the Lot selected by the Building Committee, situated on the West side of the avenue† now belonging to the Dutch Reformed Church at Harlaem be purchased for the use of the Harlaem Library at the stipulated price of $150." The building was to be 22 feet by 28, with a brick front and "two stacks of chimnies." The committee was instructed to secure estimates of the cost of a building and the treasurer was authorized to pay $150 for the lot.

The next few months probably saw the building begun and finished, but the official records are silent for nearly a year until they note that at the meeting in March, 1827, "the building committee reported that they were satisfied with the library building as delivered to them." The Board accepted the building, authorized payment of $28.52 for extra work, ordered a fence and outbuilding, requested Mr. Mott to lease from the consistory of the Harlem Church a gore of ground in the rear of the Library lot, and "Resolved, that Mr. T. Boyle be Librarian at a compensation of 40 dollars per annum, provided a tenant who would act as Librarian cannot be procured." The rent of the building was fixed at $140; the librarian's compensation at $80 if he served as tenant; $40 was to be allowed for the room if the librarian did not reside in the building.

D. P. Ingraham, Dr. Ver Meule and Dr. Smith were authorized to buy books with the balance in the treasury, over $500, and these three, with Messrs. Mott, McGown, and Adriance were "requested to attend to all the requisites for putting the institution in operation in the new building."

The records are silent as to the date the library was opened for use. The meeting next after that of March, 1827, was held "at the Library Room on

* The manuscript minutes give the date as "Monday the 11th May," but in May, 1826, the Mondays came on the 1st, 8th, 15th, 22nd, 29th.

† Known to-day as Third Avenue; between 121st and 122nd streets. Later the Library bought from the Reformed Dutch Church, by deeds dated November 6, 1828, and December 12, 1855, enough land, to the rear of the original plot, to give it a full city lot of about 25 by 100 feet.

Monday the 4th of June." At that time the Librarian was authorized to buy "green base sufficient for lining the shelves and the tables"; he was granted 10 per cent. on all dues collected and "5 per cent for obtaining share subscribers for the Library."

The "T. Doyle" appointed Librarian in March was probably the same as the Henry T. Boyle who was authorized in June to have, with the advice of Mr. Vermeule, the ground in front of the library filled in and levelled. H. T. Boyle, with Mr. Vermeule, was authorized to have the building let until May on the most advantageous terms. The Librarian was instructed at this June meeting to "write the Law respecting the Library into the Minute Book"; and two years later, June 1, 1829, the trustees voted to allow Henry T. Boyle "two dollars as a compensation for making a catalogue of the Books belonging to the Library and writing the Law of the State respecting Library Associations into the Minute Book."*

The function of librarian seemed combined with that of a composite tenant-caretaker-janitor of the library building and the post changed hands frequently, causing constant action by the trustees. Mr. Boyle continued to serve as a trustee until his death in 1832, but ceased to be librarian some time between 1827 and 1829.

On March 2 of the latter year the trustees ordered "that a catalogue of the Books be made immediately" and resolved "That E. H. Pennoyer be the Librarian for the ensuing year commencing 1st of May, 1829, at the Annual Salary of $25.00 and the said Pennoyer to keep the Library open to Subscribers 'daily' (Sunday excepted)."

Mr. Pennoyer was energetic enough to make improvements in the garret and prudent enough to ask the trustees in December to allow him $40 for these improvements. The trustees gave the matter due consideration and decided to offer him $30.00, which he accepted as reported at the meeting of January 18, 1830. But it was not long before trouble arose. By May 23, 1830, Mr. Pennoyer was reported to be indebted to the association for rent and moneys received to the amount of $58 and it was decided to take legal measures to collect this balance. Mr. Hardenbrook was appointed to succeed Mr. Pennoyer with $25.00 as salary. He was ordered to "Keep the Library open on every Wednesday afternoon and be ready through the course of the week to accommodate subscribers by [sic] calling on him." Mr. Pennoyer escaped the ignominy of the law suit by promising to pay. His note of $53.75, due April 1, 1832, was carried as an asset in the statement of resources made in September of that year, and within the next five years this somewhat dubious asset grew to $62.50, that being the sum for which he made a new note in full as reported at the meeting of March 10, 1837.

* The Act of April 1, 1796, is carefully transcribed on the last leaves of the Ms. minutes, and initialed at the end "H. T. B. 1829." The minutes show that Boyle died between June 4 and October 25, 1832.

After three men had been tried as librarian the trustees wisely decided to give the task to a woman. The minutes of February 24, 1832, record that "An application was presented by Wm. Molenoar from the Miss Crum's, stating that they would hire the premises at $60 per Annum and act as Librarian from the next of May next," which was duly accepted. Thereafter Miss M. Crumb or Crumm or Martha Crumme appears as librarian until 1848, after which date the name of the librarian goes without mention for a score of years.

Preparation of a printed catalogue of the library (400 copies) was ordered in May, 1830, and in June the printing was reported in progress. At this time the books were estimated at 700 in number and their value $500 (minutes of March 24, 1830). They had increased to 900 volumes in September, 1832, and their value to $650. The "terms of loaning books" were ordered to be printed in March, 1834, for circulation among the subscribers.

For one reason or another the original constitution and by-laws were not satisfactory and at the meeting on March 2, 1829, it was "Resolved, That Dr. A. Smith & Wm. Hardenbrook be a committee to revise the present Laws of the Institution and report at the next meeting such amendments as they shall think fit for the Interests of this Association. Resolved, that the Committee appointed to revise the Laws do also make a Statistical acc't of Stock, Stockholders, Subscribers and the general concerns of the Association." One month, however, proved too short a time and it was not until March 24, 1830, that the committee was able to report.

It found 38 shareholders, assets amounting to $3,006.62, and a form of government so inadequate that a totally new constitution and set of by-laws was suggested rather than a revision of the old. The trustees approved the new form and recommended it to the shareholders, an extra meeting to be called on April 11 for considering it. On the appointed date action failed for lack of a quorum, and at the following meeting on May 23, consideration was postponed.

Another committee, consisting of D. P. Ingraham, Wm. Hardenbrook, Jr., and Dr. Wm. Molenoar, was appointed to revise the constitution and by-laws on October 29, 1832. Their report on the by-laws was adopted June 6 following, but apparently the constitution was left unchanged.

The new by-laws called for an election of seven trustees on the first Tuesday in September; quarterly meetings of the trustees on the first Monday of December, March, June, and September. A library committee was to be appointed at the first stated meeting after each annual election "to inspect the state of the Library from time to time, purchase books for the Library, sell and dispose of or repair such as are injured and take the general care of the library; they shall audit the accounts of the treasurer and make reports to the Trustees." The price of members' shares remained at ten dollars. The Librarian was to hold office during the pleasure of the board, to keep the library open at the hours fixed by the library committee, to "enter in a book to be kept for that purpose the name of every book taken out and person taking the same and the time at which it was taken out & returned." He was also to "keep a catalogue of all books belonging to the library and collect the fines and subscriptions." Members, with shares paid up and no fines charged, had the privilege of withdrawing one book, or a set; octavos or larger to be kept two weeks, twelvemos or smaller one week, fines for octavos being two cents per day and for smaller volumes one cent. Non-members might borrow books by depositing their value. Any person, member or not, lending a library book for use outside his dwelling was subject to a fine of twenty-five cents.

Notwithstanding these by-laws within a year, March 3, 1834, the trustees decided that "in future the subscription shall be $2 for 1 year, $1.50 for six months, $1 for three months, and that no subscriptions be recd. for less than six months."

For the next four decades life moved tranquilly as a whole. The minutes record the annual elections and regular meetings, the names of Major Andrew McGown, D. P. Ingraham, and Dr. W. G. Wood recurring with greatest frequency. Miss Crum was reelected librarian year after year and apparently gave satisfaction. There were times when she fell behind in her rent and the trustees had to fix a date for a settlement. Once (May 13, 1844) the Library Committee was asked to "ascertain if any better arrangement can be made with the library than exists at present," but if the committee succeeded it failed to record its report. Once (January 26, 1846) Miss Crum presented a bill for repairs amounting to $60.00, which the trustees agreed to pay if she in turn would pay for arrears in rent and agree to pay rent in future quarterly when due. Two years later the librarian gave notice of intention to move to the City and the Board authorized Dr. Wood to receive applications for the position, rent of the building being fixed at $100 per annum, together with the care of the library. Apparently both sides contented themselves with presenting ultimatums with no further hostilities.

The official records cast little light on the library itself in this period. Occasionally they tell us that the regulations for lending books have been printed and pasted in each volume or that the books are all covered and the catalogue is soon to be issued. Sometimes we learn of new additions, as when the receipt of the Natural History of New York is noted the set was, by vote of the board, reserved from circulation privileges (January 15, 1846); sometimes the Library Committee reports it has spent $100 for books and secures approval of its purchases. The building was raised three feet and the basement finished at a cost of some $275 (April, 1843); painting was authorized every now and then, and new shelving added from time to time indicates growth in number of volumes.

In 1858 the trustees of the Harlem School adopted the following resolution (October 23):

WHEREAS this corporation has four lots of ground and a house thereon in 120th Street and the Harlem Library has a house and lot on the 3d Avenue, and the two institutions have property worth in all about $10,000. And whereas in the opinion of this board two lots of ground and one building would accommodate both institutions in a superior manner and there might be added under the same roof a lecture room, and any additional funds that might be necessary could be procured in this place, and an act of the Legislature obtained to consolidate the two corporations and effect the whole object. Therefore Resolved that in the judgment of this board such an arrangement would be wise and useful, and that a committee of three be appointed to confer with the Harlem Library thereon.

A special meeting of the Harlem Library Association was called at the Library on Tuesday, February 22, 1859, at which the communication from the Harlem School was read. It was, however, deemed inexpedient to consolidate, and the secretary was instructed so to inform the School.

For the next ten years the same tranquil routine seems to have prevailed. The civil war shook the nation, but the minutes for this period show no effect on the library. The city was growing, however, times were changing, and even the Harlem Library had to face changed conditions. At the meeting held on Thursday, January 21, 1869, it was "On motion, Resolved that it be referred to Judge Ingraham and N. Jarvis, Jr., to inquire into the expediency of disposing of the present Library Building." As a result of this authorization Judge Ingraham held various conferences with the trustees of the Harlem School, which led finally to the consolidation of the two institutions under the name of the Harlem Library. The act of incorporation of the new Harlem Library was passed March 29, 1871, as chapter 217 of the Laws of 1871.

The Harlem School trustees had a special meeting on June 7, 1872, at which the report of a committee on consolidation was adopted. This report is worth quoting in full, as follows:

TO THE TRUSTEES OF HARLEM SCHOOL:

The undersigned Edgar Ketchum and Isaac Lockwood who were appointed a committee to confer with Judge Danl. P. Ingraham, President of the Harlem Library association in reference to the act of March 29, 1871, authorizing a union of this corporation with that one

Respectfully Report

That since their appointment they have at various times met Judge Ingraham as they have heretofore reported to this board, but that only very lately they have obtained such authentic information as seemed necessary for intelligent action on the part of this board. A communication from Judge Ingraham was reported at the recent meeting of June 1. Since then a later interview has brought another and the information thus obtained with recent events known to the board leads your committee in this report to review the whole subject which the present occasion brings before us. And this may be considered under the following heads:

I. The Harlem Commons act of March 28, 1820, and its origin.

II. The institutions provided for in that act to be benefited by the funds produced by the sale of the lands, with something of their constitutions and subsequent history and action.

III. A review of our own corporation, its past course and present condition.

IV. A consideration of the question which the act of March 29, 1871, requires us on our part to decide.

I. The Harlem Commons Act, and its origin

In December, 1819, certain freeholders and inhabitants of Harlem, 91 in number, made petition to the Legislature setting forth the patents of Harlem and the common lands given thereby at the boundary between Harlem and New York, and the possession and use thereof, and the trespasses and encroachments thereon, and the taxes and assessments accumulating thereon, and the liability to pay largely for their defence, and the want of power to sell for reimbursement, and asking for a law vesting the title to the lands in trustees to hold for the benefit of the petitioners and their successors, with power to sell, and out of the proceeds to pay all claims and to apply the residue to purposes of education and learning and such other purposes as the freeholders and inhabitants of Harlem shall from time to time in their town meeting determine, and also to authorize the said freeholders and inhabitants to appoint three persons annually to act as trustees in the premises.

Accordingly the Legislature passed the act of March 28, 1820 (Chap. CXV of that year) entitled "An act relative to the common Lands of the Freeholders and inhabitants of Harlem."

This act recites the substance of the petition and then appoints four trustees to be seized in fee of the lands in trust, and to sell and convey the same, and out of the proceeds to pay certain expenses and charges. "And after such deductions and payments" the said trustees are authorized to distribute and pay out of the residue of the said moneys as follows:

The sum of $3,000 to the trustees of the Harlem Library, for the benefit of the said Library.

The sum of $3,500 to the trustees of the Hamilton School, for the benefit of that school.

The sum of $4,000 to the trustees of such school as may be established in the village of Harlem.

The sum of $2,500 to the trustees of such school as may be established in the village of Manhattanville.

The sum of $2,000 to the trustees of such school as may be established on the said common lands (This became the Yorkville School).

The same to be applied by the respective trustees to the benefit of the said last mentioned schools.

And the surplus moneys shall be distributed among the several religious congregations of the said freeholders and inhabitants in proportion to the number of church members in each, their respective proportions to be paid to their respective trustees to be by them placed out at interest and the yearly interest to be applied to their respective religious establishments.

II. The institutions receiving the proceeds

It so happened that the Dutch Reformed Church was the only "religious congregation of the said freeholders and inhabitants" except a little congregation of colored people called "Zion Church" which took a small sum. Its house of worship is in 117th street near 2d Avenue. Between $6,000 and $5,000 was given to the Reformed Dutch Church, and the balance to the other.

The Dutch church did not put the money out at interest, but expended the capital.

The Harlem Library had been before that time incorporated under the general act entitled "An act to incorporate such persons as may associate for the purpose of procuring and erecting public libraries in this State" passed April 1, 1796, and the several acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto. (2. R. s. 5. ed. pp. 636-646.)

Hamilton school seems to have been in existence at the time the act of 1820 was passed, and is referred to by a late act as "The trustees of Hamilton Free School." (Chap. 330, acts 1860.)

By an act for the incorporation of the Dyckman Library of the City of New York passed April 12, 1860 (Chap. 330 above mentioned), five persons therein named are declared a body corporate by the name of "The trustees of the Dyckman Library" by which name they and their successors shall be known, and the control and disposal of the property and funds are vested in them. And the term of the trustees is unlimited, and vacancies by death or otherwise are to be filled by the trustees remaining. And they are empowered to receive from "The trustees of Hamilton Free School" the sum of $1,000 or whatever they may have after paying their debts.

The Yorkville School was incorporated by an act of the Legislature passed in 1827. It was long in operation, but was superseded by ward schools, and its present condition cannot here be stated. This was the school "on the common lands."

It is evident from inspection of the history that the original idea of the petitioning freeholders and inhabitants of Harlem of having town meetings and there appointing three trustees "to act in the premises" was abandoned when the law was passed for which they had applied, for no such provision appears in it and all the appropriations made of the proceeds indicate the purpose to commit finally to each of the recipients so much of the fund as is given to it. And in each of the school charters, in that of the Harlem School, in that of Yorkville School, and in that of the Manhattanville Free School (all passed in the year 1827), a special clause is inserted directing the Trustees of the Harlem Commons under the act of April, 1820, to pay over to the corporation named the sum of money in that act appropriated for it, and this without any qualification whatever. But those charters differed in one important particular. In the Manhattanville charter the voters are to be "the freeholders and inhabitants within the school district." In the Yorkville charter the voters are to be the persons paying ten dollars and becoming with the consent of the trustees associate members. In the Harlem charter the voters are to be as at Manhattanville "the freeholders and inhabitants within the school district." But this last was amended in 1834 by the act which required as a qualification for voting, a membership with the consent of the trustees on the payment of five dollars. It is a tradition that this enactment was procured by the good people of Harlem at that period to hinder the success of a movement which had then begun to bring in crowds of people under certain leadership and by this means to obtain control of the school and its little property. And as some are now living and are members of the school, who knew the facts at the time, it is well to record them here. The will of some of those good people was expressed in a resolution of this Board which is to be found in the minutes of Dec. 14, 1833, on page 52 of this minute book [confining membership to freeholders or housekeepers in Harlem who had paid five dollars per year, by and with the consent of the trustees for the time being and confining voting privileges to residents of Harlem who should have become members at least three months previous to the election].

It is apparent therefore that "the freeholders and inhabitants of Harlem" ceased many years ago to have any ownership, possession or control of the funds proceeding from the sale of Harlem Commons. The funds for the churches and Hamilton School and Harlem Library went absolutely with the act in 1820. That to Yorkville School went likewise forty-five years ago. That to Manhattanville School went to the freeholders and inhabitants of Manhattanville and passed away forever under the act of 1850. That to Harlem School passed thirty-eight years ago to the members of that corporation now believed to be 24 in number.

III. Review of Harlem School

From 1827 to 1849 inclusive when ward school no. 24 was built in 125th Street near 2d Avenue (twenty-three years), we kept the common school for Harlem. Then for a number of years we devoted our house and part of our funds to the use and encouragement of select and classical schools. Then we yielded to the application of the ward school authorities and leased our house to them for a primary school. Those authorities quitted our house before the expiration of their lease and left it to be broken and ruined by vagrant boys of the streets. Then we proposed the sale of our property and last fall sold for $15,000 the lots that cost us in 1827 $400.

An act has recently been passed prohibiting trustees of benevolent and charitable societies from receiving compensation for their services in any capacity whatever.

But in all the years of our history no trustee of ours has been paid for his services but all have at various times been contributors, rather, when pecuniary aid was required.

IV. The Question before us

We are now authorized and empowered to unite with the Harlem Library association in the new corporation created by the act of March 29, 1871.

That act has been read before our Board and is engrossed in our minutes at page 207.

As early as October, 1858, this Board invited the Harlem Library Association to unite with it under act of the Legislature in properties and objects (see minutes, page 174) and at various times since it has renewed the invitation.

The act of March 29, 1871, authorizes the union of the corporations and their estates and properties under the name of The Harlem Library, with the two boards of Trustees combined the first year, and with trustees not more than nine nor less than five afterwards, and the number is to be fixed by the combined board in the first year.

Judge Ingraham of the present Harlem Library association has informed us that their number of shareholders is 16, and that their property is about $20,000, giving the items, and that they have no debts. He has since stated that no shareholder has more than one share.

We, desiring full and frank conference with him as to the future and proposing distinctly the inquiry whether we should not have with our larger property the larger proportion of trustees have received answer from him in the affirmative, and that if the whole number should be made seven, we should have four.

The present trustees of the Library association are D. P. and Geo. L. Ingraham, Robert Belloni, Henry Patterson, and Nathaniel Jarvis, Jr.

Charles H. Randell and Joseph O. Brown, 1868.

Jonathan Hanson, 1862.

Isaac Lockwood, 1859.

William G. Wood, 1858.

William H. Colwell, 1853.

Edgar Ketchum, 1842.

These seven with seventeen other persons are the surviving members of this corporation. Four of the seventeen are not now inhabitants of Harlem but under the provisions of the new law they would be entitled to vote.

Your committee believe that under present circumstances it would be wise to accept the act of March, 1871, and to enter upon a new course of usefulness in a field hitherto scarcely occupied, and in the present advanced condition of our part of the City opening wide for occupancy. These two corporations are it is believed the only ones of all the original beneficiaries which are capable of the work now contemplated.

Our own after all its work through 45 years can show to-day nearly seven-fold the capital with which it began, and a larger sum than the gross proceeds of the whole commons which were $25,500.

The other can show at the same time an amount available equal to the sum total of net proceeds distributed under the act, which was about $20,000.

And in the preliminary resolution to be passed we would declare that we act under the assurance as to shares and membership we have received from our sister association.

Dated Harlem, June 7, 1872.

Respectfully submitted,

Edgar Ketchum }
Isaac Lockwood } Committee.

At a meeting of the trustees of the Harlem Library held at the library building on July 16, 1872, a certified copy of the resolution of the trustees of the Harlem School agreeing to the authorized consolidation was read and spread on the minutes. Thereupon the Harlem Library trustees made formal acceptance of the act of March 29, 1871, and formal acknowledgment of consolidation. Certified copies of their resolutions were filed with the Secretary of State by The Trustees of the Harlem School on June 12, 1872, and by the Harlem Library Association on August 12, 1872.

The first meeting of the new board was held at the house of Edgar Ketchum, 128th Street and Second Avenue, on Monday evening, September 30, 1872. The board organized with Daniel P. Ingraham as President, William H. Colwell, Vice-President, Edgar Ketchum, Secretary, and Dr. William G. Wood, Treasurer. The trustees of the Harlem Library were Daniel P. Ingraham, Henry Patterson, George L. Ingraham, Nathaniel Jarvis, jr., and Robert Belloni; of the Harlem School, William H. Colwell, Edgar Ketchum, William G. Wood, Isaac Lockwood, Charles H. Randell, and Jonathan Hanson. A committee on by-laws was appointed and a committee to consider a new library building.

At the next meeting on Tuesday, October 15, the by-laws submitted by the committee were adopted. The price of shares was fixed at $100, shareholders to be voted by the board. Shares were transferable and dues of shareholders were fixed at $2.00 per year. Subscribing members were to pay $3.00 per year, $2.00 for six months, $1.25 for three months.

Opposition to the consolidation, or at least a feeling of antagonism or unfriendly scrutiny, was present in Harlem. At this October meeting the Secretary presented the following communication from Mr. Charles Ruston, chairman of a committee of the Citizens' and Taxpayers' Protective Union, dated October 14, 1872:

To the Trustees of the Harlem Library:

Gentlemen: At a recent meeting of the Citizens' and Taxpayers' Protective Union of the Twelfth Ward, the undersigned were appointed a committee to ascertain how far the citizens of Harlem are interested in the "Harlem Library" and "Harlem School" now united by the act of 1871 in one corporation under the name of "The Harlem Library": whether said Library was a public institution, and if so what steps are being taken by the trustees to make it of some practical use and benefit to the inhabitants of Harlem: and to report the result of their investigation to the association. One of the members of the Committee having called upon Edgar Ketchum, Esq., the Secretary of your board, requesting the above information, and he having undertaken to present to the board such communication as the Committee might desire to make.

We therefore respectfully request you to give the information above specified; and also referring to the 5th section of the act of March 29, 1871, to ask whether it was not the intention of the Legislature to make the Harlem Library a public institution. And we also ask whether any respectable citizen of Harlem can on the payment of a specific sum, and what sum, become a member of said Library, and be entitled to a vote in the future elections of trustees thereof.

An early reply will greatly oblige

Yours respectfully,

Chas. Ruston,	} Committee.
James Manchester,
Chas. B. Tooker,

As a matter of defence, record, justification, Judge Ingraham on behalf of the shareholders in the former Harlem Library read the following

To the Shareholders of the Harlem Library Association

The trustees of this corporation having surrendered their powers and transferred the property of this corporation to "The Harlem Library" under the law of 1871 incorporating that institution deem it proper to state to the shareholders the conditions of its affairs and the history of this corporation. It is more necessary and proper at this time when it is known that there are individuals who have no interest in or right to any property of the corporation, who have never paid one cent towards its funds, nor devoted one hour to its interests, but are striving for purposes which it is not necessary here to state, to obtain possession of the property.

In the early part of the year 1825 a number of gentlemen then residents of Harlem associated themselves together in forming a library. The Society was not incorporated. Each member had a share therein for life, and none but members had any rights therein. Books were collected and a room procured for the purpose and other measures adopted for its success. But after some months it became apparent that it would be more permanent and eventually more successful if a charter should be procured for it, and in September, 1825, the same persons and other residents exceeding thirty in number united together and became incorporated under the act of 1796.

To do this it was necessary that they should subscribe and pay in to the funds of the Library at least two hundred dollars. This was done by the members and they became incorporated as The Harlem Library Association.

By the provisions of the act of 1796 no one but share-holders could have any privilege in the library or any vote for its trustees. The shares were declared to be transferable and an annual payment was provided for at the discretion of the trustees. The trustees by their by-laws adopted at the first meeting provided a form of certificate for shares, and afterwards directed a transfer book to be prepared which has been in use since that time.

When the Harlem Commons were sold the proceeds were ordered by the act providing for the sale to be distributed among schools existing and to be formed, and among the churches in the upper part of the island, and the sum of $3,000 was directed to be paid to the trustees of the Harlem Library for the benefit of the Library.

The money so received was applied in part to the purchase of books, in part to pay debts of the corporation, and in part on account of moneys owing for the erection of their building.

Since that time the library has been increased so as to contain more than 1,000 volumes, but owing to the want of means sufficient to increase it advantageously it was thought best to reserve what money could be obtained from the property of the corporation for the purpose of collecting a fund sufficient to erect a building on some other location.

The property of the library has been carefully preserved and it is now transferred to the new corporation with a sum in securities larger than was received from the State, and its library house and library entirely free from debt.

The object of the trustees throughout all that period of nearly fifty years has been to preserve the property from loss with the hope that the time would arrive when, with the property they owned and assistance from other sources, and by the addition of new shareholders the corporation would be able to erect a building that would be an ornament to the place, and lay the foundation for a library for future generations.

In order to do this it has often been necessary that individual trustees should advance their own money to pay debts or assessments upon the library property, and the same has been so managed that there is now no debt owing by the association.

The claim that has been made that the property of the Library is public property is without foundation. It always has been the intent and object of the trustees to apply all they had to the purposes of a library, and to that purpose it is devoted. The money from the State was given for the benefit of the library. If the trustees were to take the fund and invest it to be repaid by the State with interest, it is difficult to see how such a loan could benefit the library, and it is equally difficult to see how a gift to a private corporation to aid the objects of the corporation could be used afterwards to found a claim to its entire property.

Had the money given by the State been used or expended as it has by all the institutions to which it was given except the Library and School, there would have been nothing to excite the cupidity of others, and no fault would have been found in such results. The preservation of the fund by these corporations has led to a contrary course of conduct.

There is no possible ground for any such claim as that above mentioned, and no person who is not a shareholder has any right or authority to intermeddle with the property.

The union with the School if not interfered with will afford the means of purchasing a larger piece of land and erecting such a building as will be needed in the future for a public library and reading room, as well as make provision for a regular increase of books for the library.

If however the attempt to prevent that law from being carried out shall succeed, the share-holders of the Harlem Library Association can maintain their Library against the attacks of all their enemies, and preserve their rights and property under the constitution and laws that created them.

Dated 30th Sept. 1872

By order of the Trustees: D. P. Ingraham, President.

At the next meeting, October 22, the Secretary read his reply to the queries of the Citizens' and Taxpayers' Protective Union which was duly approved. It ran as follows:

Answer

To Charles Ruston, Esq., and others, a committee of the Citizens' and Taxpayers' Protective Union:

Gentlemen:

I am instructed by the Board of Trustees of The Harlem Library to say that it is favored with your communication dated October 14, 1872, asking in substance:

How far the citizens of Harlem were interested in the Harlem Library and Harlem School now united under the act of 1871 in one corporation called The Harlem Library: —

Whether the Library was a public institution, and if so what steps are being taken by the trustees to make it beneficial to the inhabitants: —

And whether any respectable citizen of Harlem can on the payment of a specific sum become a member of the Library, and be entitled to a vote in the election of trustees: —

And I am instructed to answer: That the interest thus manifested by the Protective Union is gratifying to the Trustees: —

Some of them labored for one or the other of the two corporations named, through many years, with small means and smaller sympathy or aid from the people at large, but cheered by the fellowship and coöperation of excellent men, now passed away, whose names were synonymous with integrity and public spirit. No such application as the present was ever made to them in all that time, nor any proposition of any plan whatever for promoting the public welfare except as made by one of them to the other.

What could be effected by their small means was done, with few to praise and none to blame them; and now, when self denial and patience, and perseverance in watchfulness and labor, with the growth of this part of the city, have brought an increase both of their opportunities and their ability to improve them, they are impressed by the interest manifested by portions of the people in the matters which they have in charge.

Of the six objects for whose benefit sums of money were appropriated by the act of March 28, 1820, only two seem to have awakened this interest — Harlem School and Harlem Library. Whether this is because the appropriations to all the others have disappeared, and these two agencies by their diligence and care have not only fulfilled the purposes expressed in the statutes without loss of capital, but have brought considerable additions to those original appropriations and are devising new plans for the public advantage, or whether it is from some other cause the trustees know not; but they have never doubted that their plans would meet with the approval of good citizens as soon as they should be understood.

These plans are what may be inferred from the provisions of the general acts of 1796 and 1853 for the incorporation of Public Libraries, and from the act of March 29, 1871, for the incorporation of The Harlem Library. They are not for the acquisition of pecuniary profit for the corporators, nor for their special advantage in any way, but they are for the common advantage by means of a Public Library of all persons who desire to profit by them, in conformity with the regulations of the board of trustees contemplated and authorized by the acts of the Legislature.

In the year 1827 the Harlem Library association received under the act of 1820 from the proceeds of the sale of Harlem Commons $3,000 "for the benefit of said library"; and the Trustees of Harlem School received from those proceeds $4,000 "for the benefit of said school." Those corporations obtained other moneys, partly from their corporators, and partly from other sources, and acquired property much exceeding those particular appropriations, and all that each possessed was used by it exclusively for the objects for which it was incorporated.

From the origin of the Library association in 1825 none other than that corporation had any title to the property and effects which it held in its possession; and only its shareholders could vote for its trustees; and its shares were always transferable.

From the origin of the Trustees of Harlem School in 1827 none other than that corporation had any title to the property and effects which it held in its possession. And from the time of the amendment of its charter in 1834 only its members, accepting and contributing as therein prescribed, could vote for its trustees.

From the beginning the trustees and officers of each have served it without any compensation, but have on the other hand from time to time contributed toward its wants. From the beginning the corporators have neither sought nor received any pecuniary profit or return whatever. And from the beginning no application for membership was ever rejected by either.

The property now held by the Harlem Library is devoted to the uses of a Public Library forever. Neither the trustees nor the shareholders can legally divert any part of it to any other object than is provided in the acts of the Legislature. Any attempt to do so would be a violation of law which any shareholder could appeal to the courts to hinder, and which the State, of its own motion could interpose before the courts to prevent.

The trustees of the consolidated corporation have taken pleasure in contemplating a plan for erecting a new building upon some eligible site where a Public Library can be established which will be of solid advantage to this part of the city, and they are now engaged in seeking a proper place. Their means it is hoped will prove sufficient to execute such a plan without incurring any debt, and their next effort will be to obtain a supply of books and periodicals for a library and reading room.

The trustees are authorized by the original act of 1796 to fix the price of shares and the annual payments on them for the support of the Library, and to admit members of the corporation as in that act provided. And by that original enactment shares were made transferable.

Under such authority the trustees have fixed the sum to be paid for a share by any person that may be so admitted as a member at one hundred dollars, and have provided that for three dollars annually any one may have the use of books and of the reading room.

I am instructed by the board of trustees to say, gentlemen, that it is pleased thus to answer your inquiries, and to add that it hopes, that in the future as its work advances, and becomes visible to all and useful to many, it will be recognized as not unwise, and will be welcomed as an honest and a beneficial work.

And now, Gentlemen, I am to say further that a class of persons who must be strangers both to the legislation and history connected with the present subject are said to be much excited against the former, and especially the act of March 29, 1871, of which they are demanding the repeal. They show themselves to have no more knowledge of the history or laws than they have title to the property of this corporation which they are loudly calling their own.

The charters of 1825 and 1827-34 were under the constitution of the United States and that of this State, beyond the power of legislation to alter or repeal them without the consent of the corporations themselves. Therefore it was that the act of 1871 was made subject to their acceptance. If that act should be repealed, the effect would be simply to revive the former charters and place them as far as ever beyond the reach of unacceptable legislation.

Very respectfully, Gentlemen,

Your obedt. Servt.

Edgar Ketchum,

Secretary of the Harlem Library.

Dated New York, October 22d, 1872.

The letter was printed in the Harlem Local newspaper and with the Address of Judge Ingraham and the report of Harlem School was printed in a pamphlet of 2,000 copies, being distributed from door to door. The opposition arose, of course, from ignorance. It is probable that there would have been less had the trustees taken their fellow citizens more freely into their confidence, but their fellow citizens very probably cared not at all about either library or school until some unusual step caused them to wake up, rub their eyes in bewilderment, and forthwith begin to enquire in busybody fashion what it was all about. It is possible, too, that the civic conscience was more than usually alert and inquisitive because of the Tweed affair then on the tongue of every one.

A bill was sent to Charles Crary, assemblyman for the district, amending the act of incorporation by prescribing $25 as the limit for membership fees. The Citizens Association was probably its sponsor. The Secretary reported at the meeting of trustees on January 31, 1873, that he had attended a meeting of the Citizens Association the previous evening and had argued against the bill. At a subsequent meeting of the Taxpayers Protective Union, held February 13, the law committee reported against the bill and the report was adopted by a vote of twenty-seven to nine. Mr. Crary reported on February 20 that "The Harlem Library bill was not presented by me to the Legislature and though received from a responsible party I did not think proper to present it without obtaining the opinions of the people in the locality." The board, however, thought it best to make concessions and on February 14 reduced the price of shares from $100 to $50.

The building committee had been hard at work, looking for a site to the northwest. Third Avenue was a business thoroughfare and less suitable for a library site than the residential streets, but the association owned its lot on the Avenue and found the prices asked for proper sites in other localities higher than it ought to pay. They decided therefore on January 31, 1873, to erect a new building about 25 feet wide by 80 deep on their present plot (West side of Third Avenue near 122nd Street), the ground floor for a store, second story for the library and reading room, third floor for the residence of the librarian. At a later date they hoped to sell and buy in a more fitting location.

Mr. B. Walther was engaged as architect. Plans and specifications for a building to cost between twelve and fifteen thousand dollars were approved at the meeting of February 14, and the library committee was authorized to pack and store the books and furniture and to call for bids for the new building. It took thirty-four shoe boxes to hold the books.

At the meeting on March 11, 1873, the bids of Dye & Wilson for mason work at $7,973 and J. & A. Shipman for carpenter work at $5,924 were accepted. B. Walther was hired as supervising architect. The old building was sold to the Reformed Church for $200. Work on the new building progressed with the delays inevitable to all such projects and it was not until June, 1874, that the trustees could advertise the library as open and ready for use. On June 8 the building was open for reception of visitors from 3 to 10 p. m.

The minutes make no mention of the precise date of opening for use of books, but they include advertisements clipped from the Harlem local newspapers of June 20, reading as follows:

The Harlem Library is now open at its new building, No. 2238 Third Avenue, near 122d street, from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., and is well supplied with books and periodicals, at the cost to subscribers of $3 per year. Its reading room and ample supply of books, to be constantly increased, are provided for general use, with no view to profit, but wholly for the public advantage. The library is for circulation, while visitors are invited to use the reading room throughout the day and evening.

THOMAS WALLACE, Librarian.

The librarian had been appointed at the meeting of trustees held November 11, 1873, at a salary of $500 per year (raised to $600 on July 7, 1874), with living quarters on the third floor of the building. The ground floor was rented as a dry goods shop. The annual report of the trustees submitted in June, 1874, records expenditures on the building up to that time amounting to $17,037.23; reckons on total assets of $48,943.27, of which $32,000 was credited to the building and fixtures, $2,880.76 to books lately purchased, and the remainder to cash on hand or invested in bond and mortgage. It adds that "beside this we have the stock of books of the former Library association, some of which are in very good preservation, and a good proportion of which are of standard character. So that of books old and new we have more than 4,000 volumes for readers."

Judge Ingraham declined reelection as president and at the meeting on June 3, 1874, William H. Colwell was chosen in his place, with Isaac Lockwood, vice-president, Dr. William G. Wood, treasurer, and Edgar Ketchum, secretary.

Efforts were made to interest the public by means of advertisements in the city papers as well as the local Harlem press, by handbills, by notices read from church pulpits, and at one time the trustees considered stretching a banner across the avenue.

In May, 1875, the librarian reported 6,493 volumes on hand, of which 5,338 had been added since May, 1874. There were 10 weekly papers on file and one monthly. The number of subscribers was 167, and 4,580 volumes were circulated during the year just past. The annual report in June announced the purchase within the year of "valuable works of the highest character in medicine and surgery which before could be found only in libraries in the City, south of us, but which may now be examined by our physicians and surgeons much to their advantage and that of the community.

A catalogue* was reported printed in November, 1873, 64 pages with covers, in an edition of 300 copies at a cost of $184.56. It was sold at 25 cents. Additions came so fast that a supplement was authorized in October, 1875. By June, 1876, the librarian was able to report 7,953 volumes on hand, 8,300 circulated, 231 subscribers, and 19 periodicals on file.

Wallace resigned as librarian between December 5 and 22, 1876, and on the latter date Charles H. Botsford was appointed his successor from January 1, 1877, under the same business arrangements as were effective with Wallace.

In October, 1877, the librarian was "instructed to prepare for publication a catalogue on the plan of the Chicago Public Library with advertisements to cover the expense of printing." He reported in January, 1878, that John Polhemus, the printer, had delivered 1,552 copies of the catalogue, with bill for $460.60; from advertisements $60.00 had been collected, and a further charge for binding must be faced at the rate of $3.50 per 100 in paper and 25 cents per piece in cloth. It was a classed catalogue† in two parts, the second including prose fiction and juveniles and the first all other classes. It followed in the main the classification devised by Jacob Schwartz, jr., at the Apprentices' Library.

The new librarian lasted but three years and from the minutes, cold and impersonal as such records are, comes the impression that the resignation was viewed with relief on both sides. He had not been in office long before he required an assistant and A. C. Botsford was appointed at $25 per month. Later this sum was reduced to $12.50 and the board voiced its disapproval of the librarian's residing outside the building, which necessitated his having an assistant to relieve him at meal times. They objected to his habit of making purchases for small amounts and by formal resolution relieved him from making any purchases, all payments for books and supplies being made by the library committee. In May, 1879, he presented a transfer of the share of James F. Henry made by Angelina Henry, his wife. The matter was referred "to the Secretary to ascertain and report upon its sufficiency." On June 3 following it was "Resolved that the services of Charles H. Botsford be dispensed with, to take effect at the expiration of thirty days after notice from the Secretary," and at the special meeting held on June 6 his written resignation was accepted effective July 1. A. C. Botsford and Stansbury Norse applied for the vacant position, and the latter was appointed to assume office July 1.

* The manuscript minutes report, on January 6, 1831, progress in the printing of a catalogue, but I have been unable to learn whether the work ever came from the press.

It is probable that the tendering by Mr. Botsford of the transfer of the share of James F. Henry was the occasion for the appointment of a special committee on June 6, 1879, to report at the next meeting of the board "as to the validity of the certificates of shares, issued by the late Harlem Library Association and the Trustees of the late Harlem School, to persons who departed this life previous to the acceptance of the Charter under the act incorporating the Harlem Library passed March 29, 1871."

The committee submitted a long report on July 1 to the effect that Harlem School certificates issued to members who died before the act of 1871 took effect are of no force or validity, and that no person could secure title, to a share in the Harlem Library by virtue of being an heir or representative of any such deceased member; the heirs and representatives of shareholders in the late Harlem Library are entitled to a share except where rights have lapsed by non-payment of dues.

The board adopted the report. It ordered a certificate to be issued — on payment of dues — to Charles H. Botsford who held an assignment of the heirs of the late James Henry in the Harlem Library. The late librarian was requested to furnish the Board with a full statement of receipts and expenditures incurred in connection with the printed catalogue of 1878, and consideration of the bill for expenses incurred by the late librarian was deferred until the full statement had been considered. It was not until November 4 that the auditing committee reported settlement and satisfactory explanation of various discrepancies that appeared on his books.

Mr. Norse, the new librarian, began well, making, at the meeting of July 1, 1879, "a statement to the Board in reference to having a juvenile department in the Library." His recommendation was referred to the Library Committee — where it slumbered indefinitely.

For the next decade the history of the library is quiet, placid, almost somnolent. The neighborhood became more commercial, the elevated railroad reached 125th Street in December, 1878, and the residential centre of Harlem moved westward, making it increasingly difficult to attract members. The recorded reports of the librarian show a circulation of 800 to 1,000 volumes per month, of which about 80 per cent. was fiction. The minutes cover routine matters of election of trustees, reports of the treasurer, notes of transfer of shares and indicate, on the surface, a life of little excitement. They note changes of tables, chairs, and desks; occasional shifting of books. In the summer vacation of 1880 the librarian not only moved between 7,500 and 8,000 volumes, but "he varnished also all the wood-work of the alcoves and the front doors and oiled the rail and bannisters in the hall and Library." He was enough of a business man to secure a bright new carpet in exchange for an advertisement in the new catalogue that was just being distributed.

He painted pictures too, as we learn when the trustees, at their meeting of December 9, 1884, were compelled to refuse him "the privilege of the library rooms to give a private view of his paintings."

He seems to have been energetic and resourceful, reporting with no little satisfaction how successful a revenue producer had been the "installment tickets" he had devised, and how he "issued 'Bulletins' from time to time which are gladly received by the subscribers" and which proved self supporting by means of their advertisements. About 1,200 were distributed and the advertising brought in numerous subscriptions. In September, 1884, the suggestion was made that expenses could be curtailed by engaging "a competent lady to act as Librarian," but the trustees decided at the December meeting to notify Mr. Norse he might continue if he would assent to salary reduction to $600 with the use of the upper story as a dwelling.

The trustees tried to stem the tide by advertising in the local papers, but the trend to the westward was too strong. A special meeting was held June 25, 1887, and a motion was adopted "that the Librarian be requested to furnish a comparative statement covering a period of three years at least, showing the names of subscribers to the Library, the amount subscribed, and more especially the place of residence of such subscribers, the object being to ascertain whether there has been any decrease in receipts, owing to the fact of the change of residence of many people from the east to the west side." Edgar Ketchum and C. B. Tooker were appointed a committee to consider the possibility of buying land near 125th Street and Sixth (Lenox) Avenue.

On May 1, 1888, the Board formally went on record "that it is the opinion of the Board that it would be conducive to the interests of the Library, to change the location of the building to some position on 125th St. between 5th & 6th Avenues" and the President, E. F. Brown, and Treasurer, Dr. W. G. Wood, were appointed a committee to locate the new building.

As a result of negotiations covering several years the board decided in 1891 to buy from the Harlem Club for $15,000 the lot at 32 West 123rd Street, to the east of the Club, a plot 34 feet wide and 90 feet deep. The contract of purchase was authorized at the meeting held April 18, 1891, and the President appointed C. B. Tooker, Charles H. Randell, and Edgar Ketchum a building committee. Edgar K. Bourne was chosen architect. The deed is dated May 21, 1891. The new building was opened for use on August 15, 1892. In it the same principle of revenue production was followed as in the Third Avenue building. The first floor was devoted to library purposes and the upper floors to bachelor apartments which, it was hoped, would be in demand by members of the club next door. The Third Avenue plot was sold for $50,000 in 1892.

The home of the library remained at 32 West 123rd Street for about seventeen years. After consolidation with The New York Public Library the City of New York bought a plot at 9-11 West 124th Street in August, 1906, on which a new building was erected from Carnegie funds, and here the "Harlem Library" branch was opened for public use on January 11, 1909. The plot on 123rd Street was sold on January 16 following for $34,500.

Mr. Norse did not go into the new building as librarian. The minutes indicate increasing friction: the librarian's assistant, Miss Monroe, resigned in September, 1887, and the board recorded its regret and its dissent from "the suggestion of the Librarian contained in his communication to the President, in which he refers to his plan for conducting the Library hereafter."

Three years later the Board granted his request for an increase in salary (November 12, 1890), giving him $900 per annum in addition to the rooms he occupied, "it being understood that the Librarian or a competent assistant, (or assistants) to be provided by the Librarian, and satisfactory to the Board shall devote their entire time to the Library during Library hours." It was further resolved that such a competent assistant was recognized in Mrs. Norse. The Board also felt called on to record its regret "at the tenor and tone of the communication received from the Librarian under date of October 31, 1890," and expressed its dissent from what was said therein about the Treasurer. It decided also that thereafter the Librarian was to be elected at the annual meeting.

Mr. Norse did not acquiesce gracefully and on November 14 wrote to Mr. Tooker, Treasurer, that he had "a legal right to increase of salary dating back from the date of the granting of such increase to the beginning of current year." The Board disagreed and instructed the Secretary to demand of Mr. Norse the sums "so improperly and unlawfully retained by him." At the next annual meeting, June 2, 1891, Mr. George M. Perry was elected librarian, his services to begin after Mr. Norse had finished his vacation in August.

Mr. Norse, however, refused to vacate and brought forward a claim against the library amounting to $1,445.39. This served as basis for a suit and on March 16, 1893, Mr. E. K. Brown, as counsel for the library, was authorized to compromise the suit for $150 or less, whereupon Mr. Norse ceases his litigious connection with the library. Curiously enough just as his predecessor was granted a share after he had broken with the trustees, so Mr. Norse was granted share No. 42 in October, 1891, after his successor had been chosen.

The history of the next ten years is a record of struggle against the current. The spirit of the times did not favor subscription libraries. In its new building the Harlem Library took a new lease on life and began with much in its favor. The building was well adapted to its purpose, the location was good, the removal had given the Library much needed advertising; a new catalogue and a new librarian served well to interpret its resources. But the form of its organization, its traditions and history pointed inevitably to the impossibility of meeting conditions that surrounded it without radical change.

The trustees made brave efforts to develop the library and to fit it to the community. Very few meetings are recorded without an effort at advertising, placing cards in the street cars — cable cars, in those days — raising more money, attracting more readers. The rooms were free to all for reference purposes, circulation privileges only being confined to subscribers. A delivery station was opened in Tremont in May, 1894, but it was not sufficiently popular to last more than a year or so. Negotiations towards consolidation were conducted with the Harlem Medical Association and the Harlem Bar Association, but they bore no fruit.

Just about the time the new building was opened the New York Free Circulating Library established a distributing station (July 7, 1892) near the corner of Lexington Avenue and 125th Street, from which developed what later became the Harlem or 125th Street branch of the free library system. The annual report for 1895/6 first makes mention of the newcomer by stating that "The growth of the membership of this library has probably been somewhat retarded by the presence of a free library in the vicinity; but recent experience would seem to show that The Harlem Library is holding its own, and that a subscription library may expect steady patronage if the wants of its members are studied and an effort made to supply them."

It was a fight against the inevitable. Just about the same time the Washington Heights Library had become free to all. Assistance from city and state was impossible so long as a subscription fee was charged and aid from both was probable if the library opened its shelves to the public. The Board decided on July 20, 1897, to make the library free on September 1 following, and from that date the public used the books without charge.

The printed catalogue of 1893* was supplemented in 1902 by the "Harlem Library Bulletin," a monthly that ran from September to October of 1903.

Mr. Perry served as librarian from June, 1891, until February 1, 1897, at which date Miss Lucinda Boyd was appointed his successor. Miss Boyd's official life ran but four months. During the summer Mr. Perry was recalled for a month and on the 15th of August, 1897, Miss Bessie Sargeant Smith took up the work, serving until she resigned in February, 1901. Miss Carolyn Gaines Thorne was thereupon appointed acting librarian; in June following she was made librarian and served as such until on consolidation with The New York Public Library she became librarian in charge of the Harlem Library Branch.

The announcement of the Carnegie gift in March, 1901, and the gathering of the New York Free Circulating Library and other circulating libraries within the fold of The New York Public Library led to various conferences between trustees of the latter institution and Harlem Library trustees. At a special meeting the shareholders, at the library building on October 6, 1903, voted their approval of consolidation. The deed of transfer is dated November 19, 1903. The Regents of the University of the State of New York voted their approval on January 6, 1904, and accepted surrender of the charter on April 26, 1904.

The agreement provided in substance that the property of the Harlem Library was to go to The New York Public Library and to be used for the free circulation of books and maintenance of a free public library and reading room in the general locality of Harlem; the former institution was to be remembered by a tablet in any building erected for this purpose, reading somewhat as follows:

“NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY,
HARLEM LIBRARY BRANCH

HARLEM LIBRARY FOUNDATION
INCORPORATED 1825”

At the end of its career the library had on its shelves 24,333 volumes, and its circulation for the last year of separate existence amounted to 152,324 volumes.

The list of trustees and officers includes many well-known Harlem names. The number of shareholders in library or school was never large and the same names occur year after year as the minutes record the meetings. Andrew McGown served as President from 1825 till 1855, when he was succeeded by Judge D. P. Ingraham who presided until after the reorganization of 1872, declining reelection in 1874. His successors in the office were as follows: William H. Colwell, formerly a Harlem School trustee, 1874–1880. Henry Patterson, 1883 (the minutes for 1880 and 1881 being indefinite). Erastus F. Brown, 1884–1891. C. B. Tooker, 1892–1901. D. Phoenix Ingraham, 1902–1903.

William H. Colwell was Vice-President in 1872–73. Isaac Lockwood, 1874–1875. No record for 1876. Henry Patterson, 1877–1880. Erastus F. Brown, 1883. C. H. Randell, 1884–1891. C. B. Tooker, 1892. D. Phoenix Ingraham, 1893–1900. John Bottomley, 1901, 1903.

The Secretaryship of the first corporation passed through various hands until N. Jarvis, Junior, was elected in 1855 and he served until the reorganization in 1872. The first Secretary in the new board was Edgar Ketchum, long secretary of the School. He served until 1875, and was followed by George L. Ingraham, 1876-1877; Erastus F. Brown, 1878-1880; C. B. Tooker, 1883-1888; E. K. Bourne, 1890-1898; G. W. Debevoise, 1899-1901; Charles N. Morgan, 1902; George E. Morgan, 1903.

During the later years of the first organization Judge Ingraham served both as President and Treasurer. With the new board came Dr. W. G. Wood as Treasurer. He had been a trustee of the Library as well as of the School, and he held the office of treasurer from 1872 until 1888. C. B. Tooker served in 1890 and 1891. Edgar Ketchum from 1892-1896. Cyrus L. Sulzberger, 1897-1901. William R. Beal in 1902. Thomas Crawford in 1903.

APPENDIX

Mr. Henry C. Strippel, Chief of the Division of Genealogy and Local History, has kindly furnished the following notes about some of the names that appear in the foregoing pages.

ADRIANCE, JOHN S., born March 29, 1792; died Oct. 6, 1856; married Elizabeth Cashmere. He was the son of John Adriance who settled in Harlem just after the Revolutionary War.
— (The Ryerson Genealogy, by A. W. Ryerson. Chicago, 1916. p. 280.)

John S. Sickles built the house... on 123d St., north side, just west of Second Ave. This property descended in 1804 from Sickles to his grandson, John S. Adriance, who sold it, June 7, 1820, to Christopher Heiser.

KALBFLEISCH, MARTIN, was born in Flushing, in the Netherlands, on Feb. 8, 1804. Studied chemistry in the public schools. Came to New York in 1826, and in 1835 he was able to establish a color factory in Harlem. After many vicissitudes he finally settled in Greenpoint, where he organized a school. Was supervisor of the town of Bushwick for three years. He was health warden in 1832, and school trustee in 1836; served three years as president of the Board of Aldermen in Brooklyn; and in 1861–1863 and 1868–1871 was mayor of Brooklyn. Was Democratic Representative in 38th Congress, and was a delegate to the National Union Convention of 1866. He was distinguished for a knowledge of languages, for a wide acquaintance with literature and for a devotion to the cause of education. He died on Feb. 12, 1873. He was a book collector of acumen and good judgment. After his death some of his rarest treasures were bought from his son through J. O. Wright by Alexander Maitland who gave them to the Library. KETCHUM, EDGAR (born in New York City, in August, 1811; died there, March 3, 1882), studied law in the office of Daniel P. Ingraham, for many years a judge of the Supreme Court of the state, and was at different times associated with the late James W. Gerard

(the elder) and the late Isaac Adriance. He practiced in all the state courts, and those of the United States — including the Supreme Court, — conducting many important and celebrated litigations therein.

He preferred, however, real estate law and conveyancing, and devoted himself largely to this branch of practice. He was very familiar with titles, especially in the upper part of Manhattan island, and was often consulted as an expert by other lawyers upon questions of title to property in that part of the city. He was frequently chosen as referee by opposing counsel in cases involving complicated legal questions, and where large interests were represented. In the forties he was public administrator, and later he was appointed loan commissioner of the City and County of New York, serving for twelve years, when he was appointed by President Lincoln internal revenue collector for the 9th district of New York City. In 1867 Chief-Justice Chase made him a register in bankruptcy, which position he held until his death. He gave warm support to the anti-slavery cause, devoted much attention to the public schools of New York City, and was earnestly interested in various benevolent and religious enterprises.

— (History of the Bench and Bar of New York. 1897. v. 1. p. 387-388.)

MCGOWN, ANDREW. Styled Major Andrew, or Andrew, jr., born in 1786 and died March 2, 1870. He was the son of Andrew McGown, sr., who with his mother maintained McGown's Pass Tavern, a favorite resort in what is now the northeastern part of Central Park.

— (Hall, E. H., McGown's Pass and Vicinity. 1905. p. 14-15.)

— (Revised History of Harlem, by James Riker, 1904. p. 608.)

NUTTER, VALENTINE. The "Half-Way House" stood on the west side of Harlem Lane, at the foot of the hill about 109th Street. A little above this site, Valentine Nutter, on getting possession of the Kortright farm, after the Revolution, built a new residence, which remained till swept away by the opening of the avenue on which it stood, its north corner touching 110th Street. p. 390-391.

He lived here till 90 years of age (1831), when he went to pass his remaining days with his grandson, Gouverneur M. Wilkins, Esq., at Westchester, where he died in 1836, aged 95 years. p. 568.

— (Revised History of Harlem, by James Riker, 1904.)

SULZBERGER, CYRUS L. Merchant, philanthropist; born in Philadelphia, Pa., 1858; son of Leopold and Sophia (Lindauer) Sulzberger. Came to New York City when 19 years of age; started as bookkeeper in the dry goods firm of J. N. Erlanger, Blumgart & Co., of which he is now president. Most prominently known in connection with work in Jewish religious organizations.

— (Tilton, Rev. Edgar, jr., The Reformed Low Dutch Church of Harlem, 1910. p. 64-67.)

— (Corwin, E. T., Manual of the Reformed Church in America. 4. ed. 1902. p. 881.)

WATKINS, Dr. SAMUEL, born about 1771 or 1772 on Long Island; died in 1851. Removed from Harlem to Watkins, Schuyler county, N. Y., in 1828, where he remained until he died in 1851. He laid out and mapped out the village of Watkins, built the Jefferson House, which was completed in 1834; also several stores, dwellings, flour- and saw-mills. The doctor was a successful druggist in New York, where he accumulated a handsome fortune. He married Cynthia Ann Case.

Agricultural and Family Almanac... For... 1848... [New-York: Published by Dr. William B. Moffat.] 24 ll.

Copies: NYHS; WSHS; BA; M.

This almanac, as well as those for 1849 and 1850, bear no imprint, but were published by Dr. Moffat to advertise his Medical Compounds; he having published previous almanacs with varying titles with the imprint bracketed above. On the title of each of these three years is a blank space after the words "For Sale by" apparently left to be filled in with the name of a dealer to whom these almanacs might be sent "for Gratuitous Distribution" who would sell the "Life Pills," etc. of Dr. Moffat. The almanacs contain many letters commending the Medicine "Cure alls."

THE WAR AND AFTER

(CONTINUATION OF THE EUROPEAN WAR)

Should "The War and After" be continued as a separate department of the Bulletin, after December, 1920, or will it be satisfactory to have a selection of the books on this subject listed, as a class by themselves, in the department, "Interesting Recent Additions"? Will any reader who is interested in the matter give us the benefit of his advice? Please address: Editor of Publications, The New York Public Library, 476 Fifth Avenue.

REFERENCE BOOKS

Athena, a year book of the learned world; the English speaking races; edited by C. A. Ealand. London: A. & C. Black, 1920. 392 p. 8°. Pub. Cat. Div.

The second attempt since the war to supplant the German educational directory, the Minerva Jahrbuch. The first was the French Index Generalis. Athena, as the title indicates, includes only the English speaking states of the British Empire, and the United States. Like all first editions of this character, its inclusions are uneven and sometimes misleading. Liberal space is given colleges and universities, but it is difficult to discover the basis for inclusion or rejection of learned societies. Public libraries not included. Arranged alphabetically by name of city, with index of names. List of abbreviations included.

Clarke, Sidney W., and ADOLPHE BLIND. Biography of conjuring and kindred deceptions. London: George Johnson, 1920. 84 p. 8°. MZC

Includes separately printed books and brochures that deal with tricks and illusions; automata, chapeau-graphy, chemical and electrical tricks, escaping from fetters, fire handling, gamblers' tricks, hand-shadows, juggling, lightning sketches, optical illusions, pseudo-spiritualistic manifestations, second sight, thought reading, thought transference and ventriloquism. Particulars of 2,000 works.

Cross, Tom Peete, compiler. A list of books and articles, chiefly bibliographical, designed to serve as an introduction to the bibliography and methods of English literary history (with an index). Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1920. 55 p. 2. ed. 12°. NCB

A useful handbook for the systematic student of English literature and bibliography, containing the most useful reference books in convenient form. Chief value lies in the judgment exercised in selection and in the arrangement. Important subdivisions are: universal bibliographies; periodical publications containing reviews; dissertations.

Highways green book, 1920; first annual edition. Washington: American Automobile Association, 1920. 525 p. 8°. VDG

Intended chiefly for engineers, contractors and automobile tourists, but useful to all who are interested in road making. Contains brief history of

American highways; highway legislation in each of the states, with special reference to appropriations of past year (the most important feature of the book); road building in the national forests and parks; many lengthy articles on different phases of road making; statistics, bibliography, and list of contractors.

Kelly, Howard A., and WALTER L. BURRAGE. American medical biographies. Baltimore: The Norman, Remington Company, 1920. 1320 p. 8°. WAC

A cyclopedia of American and Canadian medical biography covering a period of 300 years. Articles signed and bibliographies appended. No living physicians included. Brings up to date Kelly's Cyclopaedia of American medical biography published in 1912, and corrects errors in that volume. Present book contains 1,948 biographies. List of books consulted, 9 pages, constitutes fair bibliography of American and Canadian medical biography. Indexed.

Morley, Linda H., and ADELAIDE C. KNIGHT. 2400 business books and guide to business literature; previous editions were called 1600 business books. New York: H. W. Wilson Co., 1920. 456 p. 8°. TM

Really more than a third edition of 1600 business books, since the present edition includes 7,000 more entries and uses 700 new subjects. Increased number of analyticals makes it more of an index to business literature than preceding editions. Special features are its list of trade directories, associations and periodicals, and maps for business use. Strong on material relating to prices.

Ralli, Augustus. Guide to Carlyle. London: George Allen and Unwin, 1920. 2 v. 8°. NCC

A critical biography of Carlyle with complete analysis of his works. Reference value consists in the interpretation of his work by contemporary letters and events. Chronology, list of his works, biographical authorities, and index. Takes exception to many of Froude's strictures on Carlyle.

Temperley, H. W. V. A history of the Peace Conference of Paris; published under the auspices of the Institute of International Affairs. London: Henry Frowde, Hodder and Stoughton, 1920. 3 v. 8°. BTZQ

The first of the publications of the Institute of International Affairs founded at Paris, 1919. To be complete in five volumes. The Institute plans to publish an annual register of international affairs.

The work above listed is probably the most thorough and scholarly so far published regarding the Peace Conference. Military and economic aspects as well as political considered. Maps and texts of important documents included, official index to treaty of peace, new German constitution, chronological summary of the Peace Conference. German treaties with Russia, and extracts from important speeches, etc., included.

Who's who in engineering; edited by John Ed. Sears. 1920-1921 (annual). London: Compendium Publishing Co. [1920.] 426 p. large 8°. VD

This first issue is a well-prepared reference book for the engineering profession of England. Does not include engineers of any other country. Contents include: recognized affixes, additional abbreviations, engineering institutions and societies, centers of technical engineering training, who's who in engineering, personal and professional; classified list of engineers; who's who in engineering and allied trades, index to manufacturers, trading and research associations, associations of employers, associations of employees, engineering journals, preparation of notices, etc.

CHAPTER VI

The Washington Heights Library

The origin of the Washington Heights Library is best set forth in the manuscript minutes, which begin as follows:

At a meeting organized for the purpose of establishing a Public Library and Reading Room at Washington Heights April 21st, 1868, Present, Messrs. William H. Smith, Frederick C. Withers, Jacob R. Telfair, James Monteith, Rufus D. Case, William B. Harison, Richard Vose.

The subject of a Public Library and Reading Room at Washington Heights, and the urgent necessity for an institution of this character having been a topic of discussion at a casual meeting of the above named gentlemen at this date, at the residence of William H. Smith, Esq., 152nd Street between 10th & 11th Avenues it was resolved to organize for the purpose of making an effort to accomplish the object, Mr. Rufus D. Case was thereupon called to the chair, and William B. Harison was appointed Secretary.

After remarks from the various parties present upon the subject, it was resolved — that Messrs. Case, Smith and Harison, be appointed a Committee to examine the subject, and report a plan of action at the next meeting of the Association.

On motion of Mr. W. H. Smith. Resolved, that when this meeting adjourns it adjourns to meet at this place on the 27th inst. at 8 o'clock p. m.

On motion of Mr. Harison, Resolved, that Mr. John Mac Mullen who has had large experience in the organization and management of Libraries, be invited to attend the next meeting of the Association.

At the next meeting, on April 27, the Committee on organization recommended incorporation under the general provisions of the revised statutes of the State, and Harison was appointed to draft the articles of incorporation to be presented at the next meeting. Mac Mullen was added to the list of "originators," and Case, Smith and Harison were to select names for incorporators, to print notices, and to call a meeting at Smith's house.

This meeting was held on May 6 in response to notices sent out on the 1st. A form of articles of incorporation was adopted, and a committee of nine appointed to draft a constitution and a set of by-laws, Mac Mullen, Elliott, Nash, Monteith, Withers, Smith, Rev. J. Howard Smith, Mead and Harison being so named. It was decided to fix the shares at 1,000, at $25 each. The articles of incorporation were signed by those present, and W. H. Smith, Case, and Harison were appointed a committee to obtain additional names as incorporators.

At the next meeting, on May 12, John Mac Mullen, Shepard Knapp, Rufus D. Case, John L. Tonnelé, Thomas Faye, David L. Baker, Wm. H. Smith, Wm. B. Harison, James Monteith were chosen trustees. The articles of incorporation, dated May 6, were signed by 47. Subscriptions of $25 were made by 43, of $10 by 1, of $5 by 3, giving a total of $1,100. Organization was effected under the provisions of the Act of April 1, 1796 (Chapter 43 of the Laws of that year). The certificate of incorporation, dated May 12, was filed with the county clerk on June 3, 1868.

The trustees met on June 5 at the residence of Rufus D. Case, "5 Washington.*" William H. Smith was elected President, Thomas Faye, Vice Chairman, William B. Harison, Secretary, John L. Tonnelé, Treasurer, and John Mac Mullen, Librarian. Of these trustees Tonnelé served throughout the life of the Library, and was its first and only treasurer. Baker and Monteith were reelected year after year until their deaths in 1887 and 1890. Mac Mullen, then about 50, had served as librarian of the New York Society Library some ten years before; he was the first of the two librarians the Washington Heights Library knew. As trustee his term extended to 1894 when he resigned because of ill health; he had been succeeded as librarian by Edward P. Griffin in 1887. He died September 12, 1896. Edward S. Whitman was chosen a trustee in 1869 and served until 1901, holding the office of president for the last twenty years of his term.

The constitution of the association as printed in 1868, divided membership into the three classes of founders, life-members, and share-holders, distinguished by the payment of one thousand, one hundred, or twenty-five dollars; share-holders paid also annual dues of four dollars. A subscription of five dollars gave the ordinary privileges of the library and reading room for one year; of three dollars the privileges of the library; of two dollars the privilege of the reading room. The number of trustees was fixed at not more than five nor less than twelve, but in practice it remained at nine until 1883.

* Query: 5 Fort Washington Road Drive?

The by-laws of 1868 provide that the library was to be open on week days from 7.30 a. m. to 9 p. m. and the reading room until 10 p. m., except on New Year's day, Washington's birthday, Independence day, Thanksgiving day, and Christmas; from November through February the opening hour was 8 a. m.

Members were allowed to withdraw one folio or quarto for four weeks, one octavo for three weeks, one twelvemo or smaller work for two weeks; three octavos, or smaller, in a set might be taken as one work.

On July 7 the trustees decided to rent a building on Tenth Avenue near 159th Street for $500 per year, and here the library was opened on September 19, 1868. On Mac Mullen's recommendation a "boys and girls library" was established on February 7, 1869, with subscriptions at 5 cents per week for those under 16 years old, the suggestion coming from Monteith.

The first annual report stated that the library had been open every week day except holidays, since September 19, 1868, from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m. "There were at the opening 282 volumes on the shelves. Of these 134 were purchased and 148 donated. There are now 592 volumes, showing an increase of 310, or more than double. Of these 342 were given, leaving 250 obtained by purchase. 360 pamphlets, periodicals and magazines have also been presented to the Library, as well as three maps mounted on rollers. The book-cases were made by the assistant librarian, Mr. Richard Wareham, who has also saved us all expense in binding, by the very neat way in which he has managed to repair all the books that needed it, while his constant civility and pleasant manners have aided very much indeed in the success of the Library." Circulation during the first 30 weeks amounted to 1,232 volumes of which 1,093 were fiction. Reading room attendance was noted as four persons a day.

At the annual meeting on May 8, 1869, Telfair stated that Thomas Faye had promised $1,000 towards a suitable building, and Tonnelé, Shepard Knapp, and Whitman (Telfair added on May 29) were appointed a committee to consider the project of a building, but nothing came of the hope for almost thirty years.

Throughout its history the library had a hard struggle for existence. The expenses were small, but the income was less. Occasionally an assessment was levied; sometimes the trustees determined that each should seek subscriptions in the places that to him seemed most likely; the rooms were rented for dancing classes or debating clubs; concerts, lectures, wax works, and mock trials were given by members and their friends. Without the loyal help of the women of the neighborhood it is doubtful if life could have been prolonged. By means of a fair on Washington's Birthday, 1872, they added the net sum of $1,964.35 to the resources, and a strawberry festival in the summer brought in $208.49, and these aids were repeated from time to time.

When the local base ball club disbanded, the lease of their hall was offered as new quarters for the library at an annual rent of $250 from February 1, 1870, to May 1, 1871. The minutes are not clear as to when the removal was made, nor do they indicate what happened when the lease expired.

On February 15, 1873, Monteith and Stillings were appointed a committee to learn whether a grant of the funds in the hands of the trustees of the Dyckman Library* for the Washington Heights Library was possible. They reported progress on April 19, but the minutes are silent thereafter.

The business depression of 1873 added to the difficulties of the trustees and forced them to omit printing the sixth annual report (May, 1874).

The institution struggled on, very limpingly at times, but in May, 1883, J. Hood Wright began to give $100 each month for current expenses. For the first two years the gift was anonymous, the vice-president, James Monteith, serving as the medium of the unknown friend. The sum was advanced on condition that the library be made free to all residents of Washington Heights and that it be opened for a part of each Sunday.

Acceptance of these conditions by the trustees necessitated revision of the constitution and by-laws, which was done this same year (1883). The library was made free to all residents of the Heights over twelve years of age. The hours of opening were fixed at from 8 a. m. to 9.30 p. m. except on Sundays when they were from 4 to 9 p. m. and on legal holidays, when they were from 9 a. m. to noon. To the first three classes of membership was added that of "annual members" who paid ten dollars. The number of trustees was increased from nine to twelve. Withdrawals of books were limited to one volume for two weeks, with privilege of renewal for an additional two weeks. Non-residents introduced by members had the privilege of the reading room for one month.

Further to accord with Mr. Wright's wishes and to emphasize the change of policy the name of the library was changed by addition of the word "free" to its title, though formal authorization of the change was not secured until Hon. Roger A. Pryor, Justice of the Supreme Court of the State, issued an order for the change from "The Washington Heights Library" to "Washington Heights Free Library" on August 24, 1896.

* The Dyckman Library was incorporated April 12, 1860 (Chapter 330 of the laws of that year), to receive from "The Trustees of Hamilton Free School" the sum of $1,000 and with this, or any other funds, to establish a library near Tubby Hook. The Hamilton Free School was to receive $3,500 from the sale of the Harlem Commons, as told in the chapter relating to the Harlem Library.

By his will, dated May 25, 1892, Mr. Wright left the Library the sum of $100,000 without condition except that not more than one-quarter of it was to be used for a building fund, the remainder to serve as endowment, and the whole bequest subject to a life interest held by his sister, Elizabeth J. Wright.* He died November 12, 1894, and after his death the monthly contribution of $100 was continued by his widow.

At first there was some question as to whether Mrs. Wright would continue the contribution. Soon after her husband's death she asked that the proposed purchases be submitted each month for her approval. A second letter from her was read at a special meeting of the trustees on February 19, 1895, "expressing dissatisfaction with the use that had been made of the money given us for the past year by her husband, the late J. Hood Wright, in that so large a part of the money had been used for current expenses, and intimating that she did not feel bound to continue the gift of $100 per month unless the money was all used for the purchase of books." The problem was solved by first electing Col. Josiah C. Reiff a trustee as a representative of Mrs. Wright and then appointing Whitman, Wellington and Jackson as a committee of conference with him. At the meeting on March 5 the trustees decided to use the Wright money solely for purchase of books, as both Mr. Wright and Mrs. Wright had wished, and thereafter the gift was continued without question until consolidation with The New York Public Library in 1901.

In 1875 the library was moved to the corner of 155th Street and Amsterdam Avenue and in 1883 to the corner of 156th Street, one block north, where it remained until it went to its own home at 922 St. Nicholas Avenue in 1900.

The need of a permanent home had been felt at an early date, the fifth annual report containing a suggestion by the librarian urging the necessity of placing the institution upon a more secure foundation. He proposed selling a thousand shares at $25 per share, which would provide $15,000 for a per-

* Miss Wright died June 11, 1913. On September 5 following, the Trustees began an action in the Supreme Court of New York County to settle the accounts of the estate. The case was referred to Phoenix Ingraham, Esq., as Referee, and he reported in favor of giving the legacy of $100,000 to The New York Public Library, as the successor of the Washington Heights Free Library. Judgment in favor of the Library was entered on the referee's report, on July 28, 1915.

On the ground that the Washington Heights Free Library ceased to exist when it surrendered its charter and became a part of The New York Public Library in 1901, the Knickerbocker Hospital which was the successor to the Manhattan Dispensary, named also as a residuary legatee in the will of Mr. Wright, appealed to the Appellate Division in August, 1915. The judgment of the lower court was confirmed in May, 1916, whereupon the Knickerbocker Hospital appealed to the Court of Appeals in June, 1916. The Court of Appeals in January, 1919, affirmed the judgment on the ground that the Knickerbocker Hospital which alone had appealed was not entitled in any event to the legacy given to the Washington Heights Free Library. That court, in its opinion, which is reported in 225, New York, page 329, said that the legacy in question lapsed because the legatee had ceased to exist, and that the money belonged to the next of kin of the testator, but as those next of kin had not appealed, the judgment must be affirmed.

As a result of negotiations begun by counsel of Trustees of the Hospital and The New York Public Library, the following adjustment was made. As the aggregate amount of the legacy and interest was about $136,000, one-fourth of this sum was to be paid to the children of a deceased half-brother; the remaining $102,000 was to be divided, one-half going to the Public Library, one-third to the testator's widow, and one-sixth to the estate of the deceased sister.

On April 12, 1919, the Library received $50,362.50, as the amount due under the terms of this settlement, which was apportioned by the Trustees, $37,500 to principal and $12,862.50 to income.

manent home and leave $10,000 as endowment to yield an annual income of $750 to be added to the $250 then received from subscribers, etc.

The financial troubles of 1873 rendered any such scheme impossible; the library could not spare even the money for printing the sixth annual report, and the seventh report noted a total income of but $933.10 as against $1,983.08 recorded in the fifth report (for 1872/3). "In spite of the hard times, our Library has continued its course of usefulness in this community, and our worthy Treasurer has shown the same care and assiduity in the management of little as when he had much" — so runs the introductory paragraph in the seventh report (for 1874/5). Incidentally it may be remarked that many of the earlier reports were printed at the expense of the President, B. W. Van Voorhis.

Though the Mac Mullen scheme was not carried through, the hope and intention of owning its own home were not allowed to die. Seven years later the twelfth annual report (1879/80) records that "Mrs. M. E. Baker, Treasurer of the Ladies Ex. Committee of the W. H. Library Building Fund, reports that she has the sum of three hundred and seventy-five dollars ($375) belonging to the W. H. Library Building Fund, now on deposit in the Seamen's Savings Bank."

This fund seems to have been drawn on for current expenses, for the next report of the Treasurer records among the receipts for 1880/81 "Cash paid Treasurer by Ladies' Building Committee $97.25," and further on gives the amount in the hands of the "Ladies Executive and Building Committee" as $300. The next year he records receipt of $125 from this committee and gives the amount in hands of the "Ladies Executive Committee" as $181.42. In 1882/3 there are no receipts credited to this source, the cash in its hands has a place in his record of assets but the amount is left blank; and in 1883/4 the statement of receipts credits this source with $199.02 for current expenses and omits mention of the committee in the statement of assets.

In 1883, as stated above, the Library moved to the corner of 156th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, the annual gift from J. Hood Wright allowing indulgence in larger and more comfortable quarters. Long before 1896 these rooms had been outgrown, but about this time the necessity of better housing was forced upon the trustees. Various plans were considered in the next two years and in their report for 1897/8 the trustees were able to state that a gift of $10,000 had been offered them for a building conditional on their raising a second $10,000, the two sums to go towards acquiring property and erecting a building to cost about $40,000, the remaining $20,000 to be secured by mortgage.

By the end of 1898 the trustees had raised $8,300, to which was added $1,700 from Andrew Carnegie, and the second $10,000 was received in January, 1899, from Miss Elizabeth J. Wright. This permitted the purchase of a lot on St. Nicholas Avenue, between 155th and 156th Streets, and the beginning of work on the building. The cornerstone was laid on October 24, 1899, and the building was completed in 1900. The land cost $21,000, and the structure about $30,000. Circulation from the old quarters was stopped on April 1, 1900, and began again on May 15 following, the new home being opened on the evening of the 14th.*

Several catalogues of the collection were printed. The first is dated 1871, an octavo pamphlet of 21 pages, divided into three parts. The general works are listed first, by authors; then follow "novels, tales and romances," arranged alphabetically by title; then "fiction" arranged by author. The catalogue of 1883 is a classed catalogue of 28 pages. In May, 1887, the third catalogue was issued. This contained 99 pages. Miscellaneous books were listed first by title; then followed biographies, guides, histories, medical, New York reports, scientific and educational, and United States public documents, each alphabetized by title; the third part consisted of a list of authors and their works. A supplement was printed in 1888. The catalogue of 1887 listed 5,722 volumes.

The consolidation of the New York Free Circulating Library with The New York Public Library was made in January, 1901, and the Carnegie gift of five millions was announced in March. At the meeting of the Washington Heights trustees on April 2 a committee of three (Col. J. C. Reiff, Newell Martin, A. H. Wellington) was appointed to consider and report as to appropriate action in this connection. As a result of their report a resolution authorizing consolidation was adopted at the annual meeting of the members on May 7. The deed of transfer was signed on October 9, with two stipulations, (1) that The New York Public Library was to maintain a free public library and reading room on Washington Heights and to carry on and promote the general purposes and objects declared in the charter of the Washington Heights Free Library; and (2) that the property of the Washington Heights Free Library was to be used for the maintenance and support of the existing library and such other branches as might be deemed advisable for the Washington Heights region.

The Library having members other than its trustees this conveyance and transfer was ratified at a meeting of the members held on November 26, 1901.

At the time of transfer it owned books and furniture estimated to be worth about $13,500, land worth $30,000, building worth $30,000, and the J. Hood Wright legacy. It owed a mortgage of $30,000 held at 4½ per cent. The volumes on its shelves numbered 18,664, and its circulation in 1900-1901 had been 84,151 volumes.

* Twelve years later, in 1912, a new site for the Washington Heights branch was furnished by the city on the southwest corner of 160th Street and St. Nicholas Avenue, on which a building was erected from Carnegie funds. The formal opening of the new building took place on February 26, 1914, the circulation of books from the old building ceasing on the 21st preceding. The old building was leased to the city for the use of the Board of Education for five years from July 1, 1916.

CHAPTER VII

Aguilar Free Library

The Aguilar Free Library Society was born in 1886, the occasion being the feeling, as set forth in the final report of its first and only president, Judge Samuel Greenbaum, held by "those who were then actively interested in Jewish communal affairs" that there was need of a library "for the free circulation of carefully selected literature, in the homes of the people of this City, with distributing branches in localities where the Jewish population was dense."

Organization was effected in October, 1886, under the provisions of Chapter 343 of the laws of 1875; the Library was incorporated on November 15 following, the certificate of incorporation dated December 3, 1886, being filed in the County Clerk's office in New York City on the 6th of that month and in the office of the Secretary of State at Albany on the 10th of the same month.

This certificate stated that "the business and object of such Society shall be to found, continue and perpetuate a free public library"; the number of directors was fixed at fifteen, and the following gentlemen were named as directors for the first year: Mark Ash, Morris W. Benjamin, Jacob H. Fleisch, William A. Gans, Samuel Greenbaum, Daniel P. Hays, Nathan Herrmann, Isaac S. Isaacs, Manuel A. Kursheedt, Henry M. Leipziger, M. Warley Platzeck, V. Henry Rothschild, Adolph L. Sanger, Louis B. Schram, De Witt J. Seligman.

These fifteen members of the board had power to fill vacancies in their number. At their first meeting they grouped themselves into three classes of five each, to serve one, two, and three years respectively, the term of service after the first year to be three years. The officers were a president, first and second vice-presidents, secretary, treasurer; three standing committees were appointed on house, on library, and on ways and means.

The library hoped to provide reading matter for a portion of the city and for classes of its population unreached by any of the existing libraries. The Bond Street and Ottendorfer branches of the New York Free Circulating Library were on the far outskirts of that world bounded on the north by Fourteenth Street and on the west by the Bowery. Besides the Washington Heights library, but recently become a free library, these two libraries were the only ones in this city of a million and a quarter devoted solely to the circulation of books. The Young Men's Christian Association and the Apprentices library furnished admirable collections of books, but their influence was felt but slightly among the large groups of people of foreign birth or parentage. The Young Men's Hebrew Association at 721 Lexington Avenue and the Hebrew Free School Association at 624 East Fifth Street and 206 East Broadway had been conducting free circulating libraries, but neither was able adequately to maintain its library.

59TH STREET BRANCH (AND HEADQUARTERS) OF THE AGUILAR FREE LIBRARY

The law authorizing city aid for free circulating libraries was passed in 1886 as Chapter 666 of the laws of that year. As conditions precedent to public aid it required applicants to own at least 10,000 volumes, real estate worth $20,000, and to have maintained a circulation of at least 75,000 volumes per annum. To bring the Aguilar Library into this class the Young Men's Hebrew Association and the Hebrew Free School Association transferred to it their stocks of books, the total of the combined collections amounting to about 10,000 volumes. To secure the necessary real estate Jacob H. Schiff gave $10,000 conditional on a like amount being raised from other contributors. By individual subscriptions $9,505.50 was secured for this purpose during 1887; the two sums permitted the purchase on November 22 of that year of the premises at No. 206 East Broadway from the Hebrew Free School Association at a price of $27,500.

This stock of books and permanent home allowed the library to ask for city money, which it received in 1888 to the amount of $5,000. A concert at the Metropolitan Opera House on November 20, 1888, netted over $2,000, which sum was set aside for the purchase of books. Circulation was begun in November, 1886, at 721 Lexington Avenue and 206 East Broadway with about 10,000 volumes in the two branches. For the first year the records showed a home use of over 80,000 volumes, and during the second year it rose to over 110,000. On January 1, 1887, a small branch was opened at 624 East Fifth Street in the building occupied by the Hebrew Free School Association.

On June 14, 1889, the Hebrew Free School Association, the Young Men's Hebrew Association, and the Aguilar Free Library Society made an agreement for the purpose of raising money by a fair to be given during the following winter for purchase of land and erection of a building to be occupied jointly by the three. This agreement provided that a society should be incorporated as the Educational Alliance, to which should be turned over the proceeds of this fair, to be held in trust for the purchase of the land and the erection of the building, title to be taken in the name of the Hebrew Free School Association or partly in the name of the Association and partly in the name of the Aguilar Free Library Society. The premises were then to be leased for 21 years to the Educational Alliance, which was to pay interest, taxes, repairs, and other similar charges, and to apportion space in the building to the organizations occupying it; these organizations were to pay as rent sums equivalent to their proportional share of the expenses of maintenance.

The Educational Alliance was incorporated in accordance with this plan on December 16, 1889, under Chapter 319 of the laws of 1848. Its seven trustees were Jacob H. Schiff, Samuel M. Schafer, Myer S. Isaacs, Manuel A. Kursheedt, Samuel Greenbaum, Henry Rice, and James H. Hoffman.

On December 31, 1890 the Aguilar Free Library Society purchased the south-east corner of East Broadway and Jefferson Street, No. 197 East Broadway, from Myer S. Isaacs. These premises it leased for a nominal consideration to the Educational Alliance on September 1, 1890 for a term of 42 years, on condition that the Alliance erect thereon the building contemplated in its articles of incorporation. The new building — known as the Hebrew Institute, or as the Educational Alliance building — was completed in September, 1891, erected on this land owned by the Aguilar and on the adjoining plot leased from the Hebrew Free School Association, and was occupied by the various societies according to their mutual agreements. Into this building on completion was moved the East Broadway branch of the Aguilar library, thus securing welcome release from cramped and inadequate quarters. The reading room in the building was managed by the Young Men's Hebrew Association.

Two years' experience, however, convinced the Young Men's Hebrew Association of the necessity of its withdrawal from this arrangement. The Educational Alliance was therefore reorganized on May 4, 1893, by agreement between the Alliance, the Aguilar Free Library Society, and the Hebrew Free School Association. The Alliance became a membership society governed by twenty-one directors; the work of the Institute was to be directed by it except in so far as concerned the internal administration of the Free School and the Aguilar Library, the trustees of each of which were to have full control. The reading room was given to the charge of the Aguilar. Neither the School nor the Library was to make public appeal for subscriptions or financial assistance, thus binding up the interests of each with the prosperity of the Alliance.

This arrangement continued until December 29, 1902, when in anticipation of consolidation with The New York Public Library, and in pursuance of an order from the Supreme Court authorizing the disposition by sale to the Educational Alliance of the interest of the Aguilar in this property, a deed was given to the Alliance for the sum of $15,000, the appraised value.

The Lexington Avenue branch of the Aguilar was moved from the corner of 57th Street to 113 East 59th Street on May 1, 1895. The introduction here of the two-book system and of the practice of circulating the leading current periodicals raised its circulation to such a degree that it was found necessary just two years later to open a reading room by leasing the adjoining building. The branch continued its work here after consolidation until it moved to the new building at 121-127 East 58th Street, opened May 10, 1907, as the twenty-first of the libraries erected from the Carnegie gift.

The Fifth Street branch was moved from 624 to 616 East Fifth Street on May 1, 1896; it remained here four years, going on March 7, 1901 to the corner of Avenue C and 7th Street, a building formerly used for a bank. Here it was able to reserve the first floor for adults, the second for children, holding the third for a reading room to be fitted up as soon as funds permitted.

This remained the home of the branch until December 1, 1904, when 331-333 East 10th Street was opened for it as the Tompkins Square branch of The New York Public Library, the fifth of the branches opened under the Carnegie gift.

On May 1, 1896, a branch was opened at 176 East 110th Street in rented quarters. Two years later the Society purchased the lot at 174 East 110th Street on which it erected from its own funds a building designed for the purpose by Herts & Tallant; this new building was opened June 19, 1899. After consolidation the lot adjoining at 172 was purchased in 1904, an addition to the original building erected, and the reconstructed building opened on November 29, 1905, as the thirteenth on the Carnegie foundation.

At the date of transfer to The New York Public Library on February 24, 1903, the Aguilar Free Library Society was conducting four branches: at 197 East Broadway in the Hebrew Institute Building, at 106 Avenue C, at 111-113 East 59th Street, and at 174 East 110th Street. Its original stock of 10,000 volumes had increased to 87,790, and the circulation of 81,861 in its first full year to 757,217 in 1901-1902.

CHAPTER VIII

The Cathedral Library

The "Final Report of the Director" to the Trustees of the Cathedral Free Circulating Library dated December 31, 1904, and section 1 of "The Cathedral Library Catalogue" dated March, 1894, contain historical summaries from which the following account is condensed.

Soon after the Rev. M. J. Lavelle was appointed rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral he determined to open a general library. Various societies in the parish turned over their libraries as a nucleus of about 400 volumes. The Rev. Dr. Joseph H. McMahon was appointed Director in November, 1887, headquarters were established in the Cathedral School Hall, 111 East 50th Street, and with the help of volunteer workers the library was opened for use with about 800 volumes on January 3, 1888. As the hall was used as a meeting place for various societies the library was open but three times a week.

The library rapidly outgrew its quarters and moved to 123 East 50th Street in February, 1892, next door to the Cathedral School. Here it was open five times a week: on Sundays from 10 a. m. to noon; Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7.30 to 9 p. m.; Wednesdays and Saturdays, 2 to 5 p. m.

At first membership was confined to parishioners of the Cathedral parish or to members of societies belonging to the parish. In 1893 these restrictions were removed and membership granted to any resident of the city who could give satisfactory reference.

At first the Library was supported by voluntary subscriptions. These were insufficient and in 1889 the Cathedral Library Association was organized "for the following objects: 1st — To provide funds for the support of the Cathedral Library, a Circulating Library, free to residents of New York City, and to non-resident members of the Cathedral Library Association; 2d — To publish and circulate as widely as means would allow leaflets treating of the salient points of Christian doctrine; 3d — To distribute among the poor, and in hospitals, reformatories, etc., Catholic periodicals, magazines, etc.

"Any one can become a member of the Cathedral Library Association by paying an annual subscription of one dollar. There are also associate members, Patrons, and Founders who contribute larger sums.

"Besides the blessing of aiding in an undeniably good work, the members of the Association are offered the following advantages: They receive a copy gratis of the minor publications of the Association; a liberal discount is allowed them on all purchases of these publications; they may order the books of any publisher through the Association, at considerable saving to themselves; they receive a special memento in all the Masses of the Director, and are specially prayed for every month by the League of the Sacred Heart. This effort to support the library has been distinctly unsuccessful. The membership is so small that it is not considered as a factor in meeting expenses."*

It was evident that municipal support offered the only solution of the financial problem. To secure this it was necessary first to obtain a charter from the University of the State of New York, which was done on October 15, 1896. Registration with the University and inspection by its officers brought state aid to the amount of $200 in 1898, and the next year, supported by a certificate of approved circulation given by the State University the Library was able to go to the Board of Estimate with an application for city money. In 1899 the city granted $8,800, based on the usual provision of ten cents per volume of approved circulation, and thereafter the grant was continued during the life of the library.

Books were purchased by the Director on his own responsibility. From the estate of John R. G. Hassard, long the musical critic of the "Tribune," was bought his working library of about 1,100 volumes. English Catholic literature and ecclesiastical history were carefully developed. "Special attention was given to the Fiction list of the library, which contains a large number of the unobjectionable novels in the English language, and a fair proportion of French novels. Owing to its importance, the Juvenile list received unusual care, as the library aimed to cultivate in children a taste for the best books. With this end in view, our Juvenile list has not been confined exclusively to Catholic authors, but we have tried, within the limits of our purchasing resources, to secure every healthy book we could find."*

Growth was rapid. From the 800 volumes with which it opened in 1888, by September 26, 1893, there were 14,064 reported. By the time of consolidation, December 31, 1904, it had grown to 49,812 volumes. Circulation in 1888 was 8,393; in 1904 it was 343,962. In 1902 headquarters were moved to 536 Amsterdam Avenue, near 86th Street, and at the time of consolidation there were five large branches and seven smaller branches or stations. Until the last three years of its separate life all the work of the library, administration, cataloguing, service with the public, was done by volunteers who gave their time without charge, a most unusual record; to which, as worthy of note, should be added the fact that the first and only Director the library had, saw it open in January, 1888, saw it transfer its property to The New York Public Library on December 31, 1904, and served thereafter continuously as a member of the circulation committee of the larger institution.

Two catalogues of the library were published. The first appeared in four parts between March, 1894, and November, 1897; it followed the classification devised by Jacob Schwartz, Jr., for the Apprentices' Library, which, with the modifications necessary for the Cathedral Library, made it "the simplest and most practical method available for Catholic Libraries." Prefixed was a history of the library written for "The Seminary" by Father McMahon, illustrated with four views of the work rooms.

The second, an "Author and title catalogue," which appeared in October, 1889, as a volume of 534 pages, disregarded the classifications of the previous issues and relied upon a simple alphabetical arrangement of authors and titles supplemented by a few subject groups inserted in their proper alphabetical position.

The catalogue of 1894 explained that "As some readers in a Public Circulating Library oftentimes lack discrimination, it has been deemed advisable to exercise a strict supervision over the circulation of many books which, though on the shelves of the library, require the exercise of a certain amount of judgment to be read with profit. To that end a special department has been instituted, which is designated by the letters 'LL,' and in which are to be found all books which should not be read by young persons except under direction. These books are given out only on personal application to the Director, or by his special permission. In this way the difficulties that would arise, either from the absence of these books, or from their indiscriminate distribution are, it is believed, completely avoided. The books in this department will be found throughout the catalogue under their proper headings, but attention is called to the fact that their circulation is restricted as above.*

"The library pays special attention to supplying clergymen with necessary books of instruction, controversial works, etc., for converts. Special lists of books have been prepared dealing with the different phases of religious belief, and the library is ready and willing at all times to co-operate with clergymen and religions in the great work of instructing neophytes in the faith. It has been the aim of the library likewise to be of assistance to Catholics living in distant portions of the country, and away from Catholic influences, by sending, under proper guarantees, books which might help them to increase their own fund of information in matters pertaining to religion, and possibly to spread a knowledge of the same among their neighbors. We are happy to say that many persons living at a great distance from New York have been benefited by the liberality of the management in this particular. At present we number among our readers Catholics out on the western plains and in the savannas of the distant South who are far removed from any religious, much less Catholic influences."

The Library offered, in some respects, an interesting contrast to the administrative methods of some of the other local libraries, a contrast in methods, however, rather than ideals. At the Webster library the tendency might be stated in exaggerated form as an abrogation of all rules that stood in the way of circulation, an emphasis of freedom from supervision. At the Cathedral library the firm control of the church was constant. "Supervision is exercised over the reading of children who come to the library, parents being required to sign the application blanks of their children, and to certify their willingness that their children should be members. The librarians exercise also considerable discretion in giving out books to children, suggesting those that they think the more fitting, and prudently withholding at times those that are asked for."†

Close cooperation was maintained with the parochial schools; pupils were encouraged to follow systematic courses of reading. "Teachers, it would appear to us, can exercise an immense power in influencing the reading of these children, whether boys or girls, and we would respectfully suggest the advisability of their doing so" (ibid. p. x). Boys, in this library at least, read better books than girls, showing "more discrimination, more solid judgment."

* Among the books in English so classed were Bellamy's "Looking Backward"; Black's "Sunrise"; Cable's "Strange True Stories of Louisiana"; Crawford's "Don Orsino," "Pietro Ghisleri," "To Leeward"; Dickens' "Pictures from Italy"; Meredith's "Evan Harrington," "Sandra Belloni," "Vittoria"; Phelps' "Doctor Gay"; Story's "Roba di Roma"; Stevenson's "New Arabian Nights"; Fielding and Smollett.

The French list included works by Th. Bentzon, Biart, Feuillet, G  rald, Hugo's "Notre-Dame de Paris," Lamartine, Ohnet, Rabelais, George Sand, Mme. de Sta  l and Tinsseau.

CHAPTER IX

The University Settlement Library

The University Settlement was organized in 1887 under the name of the Neighborhood Guild, by Dr. Stanton Coit, the Guild being the outgrowth of a club of six boys formed by Dr. Coit the year before in his rooms at 146 Forsyth Street and called the "Lily Pleasure Club." To the boys' club were added a girls' club, a kindergarten, a penny provident bank, and other instruments of social reform.

Within two years the work grew to such an extent that larger quarters were needed, and to provide relief, the old-fashioned three-story dwelling across the way at 147 Forsyth Street was rented in 1889. A few hundred volumes were brought together in a hall bedroom and offered to members for home reading. Through the reminiscent haze of ten years this library was described in the annual report of the University Settlement for 1899 as follows:

"There its collection of four hundred volumes hid a woebegone appearance behind sleazy, green cambric curtains, and the first ingenious urchin who arrived on library afternoons before the unwary librarian, had the pleasure of shuffling the charging cards out of all semblance of alphabetical order. A deal table, drawn across an open doorway, was the charging desk, the contents of which, there being no key, was participated in with fine communistic spirit by the humblest as well as the highest.

"The library was opened once a week, and it shared the freezing atmosphere of that damp, old house, with an uproarious boys' club, whose members when they had no ball or game to play with, shouted to keep themselves active. Quiet was unknown, and that afternoon was considered pleasant in which no child had fallen into a passion of tears at delay in getting a book. This delay was overcome by the agile, who dove underneath the table, appearing with an irresistible smile of superiority within the sacred precincts of the green curtains. Longfellow's poems, Lamb's 'Tales from Shakespeare,' and Bible stories were not to be had for the mere asking, and it behooved the alert to take the adage of the early bird to heart."*

The Neighborhood Guild took part in various schemes for betterment put on foot in the immediate vicinity, but soon deemed it best to concentrate its work for economy of effort and for best use of its limited funds. Consequently the University Settlement Society was incorporated on March 1, 1892, "to bring men and women of education into closer relations with the laboring classes in this city for their mutual benefit." In 1893 it moved from Forsyth Street to a four-story tenement, remodelled for its needs, at 26 Delancey Street. Here the library was opened daily, its stock of books having grown to between one and two thousand and its annual circulation to over twenty thousand volumes. Miss Helen Moore, the first paid librarian, had then just been appointed. The work was mainly with the children, who were charged five cents a year for membership dues. There was a charge of twenty-five cents for adults, but at that time the feeling prevailed that work with the elders was hopeless in the absence of Russian, Polish, and German books. For this work funds were lacking, as well as teachers.

In November, 1894, the circulation for the month was reported as 2,185; there were then not quite 2,000 volumes on the shelves and new readers were pleading for registration at the rate of 141 a month. The nationalities reported were mainly Russian and Polish Jews, with a few Italians.

On Friday, December 23, 1898, the Settlement moved into its own home, on its own land, a five-story brick building, sixty-seven feet in front by eighty feet deep, at 184 Eldridge Street, replacing a row of old-fashioned dwellings with pillared fronts that dated back to a time when the region was a section of homes and comfort. Here adequate quarters were given to the library on the second floor of the building, and here it remained until after it had been turned over to The New York Public Library.

The large room with its soft green coloring, open fireplace, spaciousness, light, well-adapted furnishings, was in marked contrast to the dingy quarters of 26 Delancey Street. "Apparently the change from the hot and crowded quarters in Delancey Street to those wherein light and air abound created no special enthusiasm among its young readers. They accepted the change, as children do, with remarkable celerity of adjustment. When one of the little girls saw the boxes of books being loaded on the truck, she cried out, 'Oh, Delancey Street is moving!'" But the fact that the Library had left its old habitation made very little difference to her. She followed the truckman the two blocks to see where he was going with Delancey Street, and in the afternoon she came to change her book. The things she cared for, the books and the people who gave them out, were the same. It was remarkable to notice how little the change affected the orderliness of the children's conduct. There was no unusual excitement, no rush, no outward expressions of joyousness. These children take their pleasures soberly, as they bear their griefs patiently.

"The boys betrayed their consciousness of the larger space in a singular way. Many of them forgot to take off their hats, an illustration of the suspension of an acquired habit through the emotion of surprise. One of them, reminded of his transgression and comically overcome with the enormity of it, said, 'Oh, please excuse me; I didn't think I was in a room. It seemed like outdoors.'

"The subtle influence of environment has had its effect. The boys who, last year, played fox and geese around the old table, might have reaped a harvest of mischievous delight in denuding the window boxes of their flowers during the summer, but nothing was disturbed. And the children, on a snowy Saturday afternoon, sitting dreamily in a circle of kindergarten chairs before a blazing wood fire in the reading room, show the restful spell of this same environment. Singularly enough, the open fires have an educational as well as an esthetic value. Many of the older girls in the grammar grades, who have never before seen a fireplace, have asked if this was the kind the early colonists had, the pictures of which are to be seen in the histories, and thus the stories of the Pilgrims have got a bit of local color."

The Library was, of course, primarily a department of the Settlement, and found its field among Settlement frequenters, and expended its energy in Settlement ideals. Its readers were largely children, its stock of books was suited most closely to their needs and demands, the hard working parents lacking time, desire, ability to read books in English. Material in greatest demand was text books, Bible stories, dictionaries, American literature, if we except the constant and universal demand for fairy tales. When new quarters in the new building made room for a wider selection and the possibilities of the institution became more widely known, older readers increased in numbers. Exact figures of use are not available, but it is probable that the young children furnished over half the total number of readers, the remainder consisting of the younger working men and girls employed by day and reading at night for help in their work or in preparation for the regents or other school examinations, with a sprinkling to be classed as miscellaneous.

With the carelessness and thoughtlessness of youth wear and tear were severe, the annual increase of new accessions providing but a slender margin of growth when offset by the number of volumes read to pieces. To the credit of the children be it said that in these early years the librarian reported but little wanton destruction except when fanaticism led to the tearing or cutting out of the word "Christ" or the picture of a cross or some other symbol antagonistic to the devout Hebrew.

Though readers came, in the main, from the immediate vicinity, four blocks in either direction marking the usual limits of readers' residence, the Library did not confine its work solely to this region. When the West Side branch of the Settlement was opened at 38 King Street the parent centre was able to furnish some five hundred volumes for the branch library in January, 1901. And Eldridge Street, in the heart of New York's "East Side" discovered villages in up-state counties where reading facilities were less than its own, where children walked four miles to a district school devoid of books, where a member of one of its clubs met with a boy of thirteen who had never heard of Robinson Crusoe, Cinderella, or Abraham Lincoln; and to these communities such of the Settlement books as could be spared were forwarded with messages of good will (Year book, 1899, page 43).

In the early spring of 1897 was begun the experiment of circulating books in the boys' prison in the Tombs, where the Public Education Association maintained a school in charge of David Willard. After two years' experience the Librarian reported:

"It was believed that the boys would enjoy stirring stories of a literary character and would not deface them if the volumes were fair and new when first received. This proved to be the case, and though there have been one or two acts of wanton injury, no book has been lost or stolen. Stories of obvious humor, adventure, and historical incident please the boys best. Besides two bound volumes of Puck and Judge, the following thirteen books were selected: Conway's 'Called Back,' Mark Twain's 'Tom Sawyer' and 'Huckleberry Finn,' Kieffer's 'Recollections of a Drummer Boy,' Goss's 'Recollections of a Private,' Brooks's 'Story of Our War with Spain,' Spears's 'Our Navy in the War with Spain,' Vivian's 'With Dewey at Manila,' Fiske's 'History of the United States,' 'David Copperfield,' 'Baron Munchausen,' 'Black Beauty,' and Rolfe's edition of 'King Lear.' These thirteen books during the two summer months of July and August, had a circulation of 339, an average turn over of twenty-six. Most of them had been literally read to pieces, but they had not been wantonly torn, and with the exception of two, which had lost their endings, were all in a condition to be rebound. While some of these stories have since been withdrawn and shorter and easier ones substituted, and while it must be recognized that a boy confined in a cell in enforced idleness, will read out of sheer ennui, the eagerness to get the books and the care taken of them proves the large measure of underlying good in these boys." (Year book, 1899, pages 42-43.)

Deposit stations were maintained in the evening play centre in Public School 160 and also in the Eldridge Street Police Station. At the latter the books "were politely accepted by the captain then in power, and the succeeding captain has cordially assured us that they were fulfilling a want sincerely felt. But the testimony of a less exalted dignitary causes the suspicion that 'Mr. Dooley in Peace and War' has been the only book that met with popular favor, for the simple reason that one of the men on the force has the honor to bear that historic name — and the association of ideas pleases their fancy." (ibid.)

When summer camps were organized by the Settlement the Library provided reading matter for the campers. To the camp at Greenwood Lake in June, 1897, were sent over sixty volumes selected by the campers themselves. The titles are of no little interest as indicating the summer reading selections of East Side children. "Henry Esmond," "Sesame and Lilies," Spencer's "Education," "Sartor Resartus," "Heroes and Hero Worship," Goldsmith's poems, "Barnaby Rudge," "Oliver Twist," the Bible, "Ingoldsby Legends," "Macbeth," "Pilgrim's Progress," Curtis's "Public Duty of Educated Men," Emerson's "Heroism, and Other Essays," Burke "On Conciliation," "Water Babies," "Alice in Wonderland," Tennyson's poems, Bryant's "Iliad" and "Odyssey," Macaulay's "Samuel Johnson," the Introduction to "Tom Brown's School Days at Rugby," Mrs. Dana's "How to Know the Wild Flowers," Serviss's "Astronomy through an Opera Glass," and "Our Common Birds and How to Know Them," are the titles mentioned in the report for 1897 as having been packed up, sent, and read.

In 1899 books were sent to outside stations on a much larger scale than formerly. A few Yiddish books were added to be lent to a neighboring school. The experiment was unsuccessful, as the parents — for whom the books were intended — would not come to the school, and the children — for whom they were not intended — took them out to read themselves.

With the arrival of Miss Phillips in 1900 the books were reclassified according to the decimal system, the catalogue enlarged and put at the disposal of the public, and juvenile books separated from adult. On the report filed with the State Library at Albany on June 30, 1900, the library was said to have a shelf-list, an accession book, and a card loan system. The open shelf system is first reported this year, though it probably dated as far back as 1896 — at least to some extent. The hours of opening were extended to include Sundays from 1.30 to 4.30 p. m.

Special efforts for cooperation with the schools began in 1901. Talks were given to the children after school hours on Friday afternoons on the use of the card catalogue and reference books. A special system of circulating text books was reported this year, whereby a student might take out three books at a time, keep them for four weeks and renew them for four more. The books were not bought from library funds but were gifts from publishers, the College of the City of New York, and other sources.

A Library League was formed this year also, having for its motto a pledge to keep the books in good condition, with what that meant set forth in detail. Copies of the pledge were sent to the schools where the pupils signed them. Honor cards were given to all members, and badges were sold for three cents.

Until 1897 the Library was supported from Settlement funds and the gifts of friends. For 1898 it received $2,000 from the City, and in the following years $4,000, $4,400, $4,150, $5,750, and $4,500.

Miss Helen Moore served as Librarian until 1900; Miss Grace Louise Phillips was taken from The New York Public Library in 1900 and remained in charge until her marriage in 1903, when Miss Theresa Blumberg succeeded her and continued in charge of the work after it was taken over by The New York Public Library.

The transfer of control was effected on December 31, 1903, at which time the stock of books numbered 5,479, the circulation for the calendar year having been 76,582 volumes. The Library remained in the Settlement building until the new branch erected for it at 61 Rivington Street from Carnegie funds was opened on June 10, 1905.

CHAPTER X

The Webster Free Library

The Webster Free Library took its name from Mr. Charles B. Webster who gave to the East Side House a building to house a library in 1893. The East Side House was incorporated June 5, 1891, as a result of a study by the Committee on Social and Economic Questions of the Church Club of New York City, and was located at the foot of East 76th Street, a region that offered fertile soil for cultivation by the settlement and its workers. It was the third Settlement established in New York.

The first annual report of the House states that: "Last Spring (1892) Mr. Oswald Ottendorfer, on behalf of the New York Free Circulating Library Association, offered to the East Side House five thousand volumes, to be placed here, and to be used as a circulating library for this part of the city.* The condition imposed was that the East Side House should furnish a suitable structure to house the books. Mr. Russell Sturgis and Mr. D. N. B. Sturgis have kindly proposed plans for a building which will not only contain the library, but provide for a Girls' Club, which we have been frequently urged by the neighbors to establish. We might also in this building provide living apartments for the kindergartner and librarian and for the janitor and his wife. The estimated cost of this building is $10,000, and it is hoped that the money for this promising addition to our plant may be forthcoming before it is too late to take advantage of the liberal offer.

"In the meantime, by the kindness of the Library Association, the East Side House has become one of its stations and already has begun to circulate books. The house owns a goodly number of books and periodicals, which are kept in the club rooms and are largely used by the members. The daily and illustrated papers, and the monthly magazines are regularly received and enjoyed; but none of the trade journals and scientific papers are seen on our tables. If a half dozen of the organs of the more important trades could be provided, they would undoubtedly be much appreciated by the men, and add to the solid service of our equipment."

The next report (October, 1893) expressed the hope that the building would be ready by Christmas, and thanked Mr. S. P. Avery and Mr. Edward Clarence Spofford for gifts. From the latter had come 4,000 volumes. The library was opened in January, 1894, and the report for that year rejoices that "the circulation of books has exceeded our expectations, and we have many readers in the reading room connected with the library. An average of seventy persons use the library daily. The aggregate circulation for the year is about 20,000. Books of American history and biography, travels, and standard fiction have been especially in demand."

* The Yorkville branch of the New York Free Circulating Library was not opened until June 10, 1897.

WEBSTER BRANCH OF THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

1465 Avenue A

In the ten years of its separate existence the Webster library developed two very characteristic features, one its hearty and intimate cooperation with the schools of the neighborhood; the other an emphasis of the principle that books are happily complemented by objects, or, in other words, that certain phases of museum work may very properly be joined to the ordinary library routine. These two developments were due, in very large measure, to Mr. Edwin White Gaillard who took up his residence in the house and became librarian in March, 1897.

The necessity and advisability of close contact with the schools became apparent at an early day, the report for 1896 pointing out that as it was the only library on the East Side between 60th and 110th Streets, with a population of 600,000, cooperation with three nearby schools had brought the library to the limit of its capacity; at least half a dozen schools within easy walking distance had to be passed by until personnel and stock of books were increased.

In 1897 a reading room was established, the open shelf system introduced, two books at a time were allowed to be taken home, and a Bohemian branch was begun.

Year after year came a fuller and more intimate contact with principals, teachers, pupils in the schools. An effort was made to bring the library home to each school in a rather wideflung neighborhood. Many of the methods then used seem to-day somewhat obvious, but it must be remembered that those very methods and the manner of their application were at that time new and untried. The Library served indeed as a sort of laboratory for trial, study, and experiment, and to its pioneer work in this regard must be given much credit for the more liberal administrative conception held by the public library of to-day. The printed reports tell of cooperation in class room work, of visits from pupils interested in topics illustrated by books, bulletins, and objects. More than usual efforts were made to help teachers who were pursuing special courses of study, attending courses of lectures, or preparing for examinations for promotion.

This cooperation with the schools resulted in the establishment of a Teacher's Department during the last few years of the separate existence of the library, its motto being "the books needed, to be retained as long as necessary." Its success is indicated by the fact that of the 574 teachers in the 12 public schools in the district between Madison Avenue and the East River, 68th and 91st Streets, 377, or 65 per cent., used the library in one way or another during 1902.

It is not a long step, after getting a teacher or pupil to the library to examine a book, to supplement or complement the book by showing some of the objects the book treats about. It was not long until it became necessary to establish a Department of Practical Illustration.

The report for 1902 sets forth at some length the ideals and accomplishments of this scheme. "In this Library" — it says — "was started the plan of illustrating books with the things about which the books are written. It is a plan that can be carried out in practice to a certain extent. It is not proposed to turn the library into a museum, but to gather small, representative and typical collections of objects to broadly illustrate the departments of Natural Science and Useful Arts. The library has been collecting all manner of objects which may serve to make clear some of the things in books. So far has been started the foundation of collections of the following:

"Birds, nests and eggs; butterflies and other insects; minerals, ores, metals, rocks, soils and fossils; reptiles; physical apparatus; maps, charts, photographs and prints; corals and shells; anatomical models; seeds, roots, barks and leaves; cotton, silk and linen; globe, tellurian and orrery.

"If the Library confined itself to collecting and placing behind glass various objects, it would perhaps be a source of regret. When it is possible to replace specimens at reasonable cost or with only reasonable trouble, the Library is glad to lend them when and where they may be of use. This lending of specimens has been mainly to the teachers of the public schools for their class room work. They send here for everything from a prism to a set of colonial flags, even cocoanuts and sugar cane. The flags seemed a stumbling block, but the class agreed to make them if the Library would provide material."

By this time the question of consolidation with The New York Public Library had come sharply to the front. In the summer of 1900 Dr. Billings had, at the request of Comptroller Coler, made a survey of the various circulation systems. The New York Free Circulating Library had given up its corporate life in January, 1901. The Carnegie gift was announced in March, 1901. In the next two years several of the smaller libraries had joined the larger system, and those that remained outside the fold saw the handwriting on the wall. Whether willing to join or not the necessity of joining was practically forced upon them when the comptroller announced that in future city money for library purposes would be paid only to The New York Public Library so far as the boroughs of Manhattan, Bronx, and Richmond were concerned.

The change was not relished by Webster. It was felt that the intimate relationship between librarian and reader could be more successfully cherished in a small collection like this than as part of a large collection. Rules, of course, are necessary for the conduct of any enterprise, but the Webster library had tried to make its rules as elastic and unobtrusive as possible. In the report for 1902 the Librarian set forth a portion of his creed, as follows:

The result of one year's systematic efforts to ascertain the extent to which public libraries would be used for serious study, would tend to confirm the opinion that they are not more so used on account of restrictive rules. Had it not been for the change in the Library policy of the City, precisely the same sort of plans tried for teachers would have been attempted for the general public. The Committee in charge of this Library had approved a plan to open in 1903 a new room, which was designed to contain books and periodicals that would advance ambitious boys and girls, men and women, in their several walks of life. At first books on the following subjects would have been provided: Architecture, building, carpentry, joinery and cabinet making; complete commercial courses; chemistry; electrical engineering, electric light plants and electric railways; locomotive running; mining; mechanical engineering; sheet metal work; sanitary plumbing, heating and ventilation; telegraph, telephone, steam and gas engineering; refrigeration and mechanical drawing. The books have been selected in part and some have been purchased. As soon as possible after the opening of that room it would have been announced to the neighborhood. A man thoroughly familiar with the district had been selected for that purpose. In every elevated railway station, church, political club, trade union and lodge room, saloon, barber shop, drug store and factory in the neighborhood, not only would announcement placards have been posted, which would tell of the general policy, but lists of the new books were to have been included, and these lists would have been kept up to date. Wherever two or three people should meet together who would be interested in a particular subject it would have been the effort of the Library to provide suitable books on that subject.

If the theory of libraries is right, it would seem that they should not only provide the books that are needed and allow them to be properly used; but also see that every man, woman and child thoroughly understands that policy. Even shoe stores endeavor to do that much.

Some, if not all, of these dreams were to come true at a later day and within other walls. It was, to be sure, nothing more than natural that a library that had developed in such characteristic fashion should object to losing its identity as part of a larger system. On the other hand it was certain that help from the city would come only as part of the larger system, and that the Carnegie offer held forth the only hope of much-needed expansion. After mature deliberation, and with some reluctance and misgiving, it was finally decided to join The New York Public Library.

Formal expression of this decision was made at a meeting of the executive committee of the settlement on December 18, 1903, when the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved: That the books contained in the library of the East Side House Settlement be transferred to The New York Public Library, provided that organization shall continue to maintain a library in the building of the Settlement until the opening of a Carnegie Library in the immediate vicinity.

Resolved: That the Chairman (or the proper official) be authorized on behalf of the Settlement to execute such deed of gift or other paper as may be necessary to carry the foregoing Resolution into effect.

Resolved: That The New York Public Library be authorized to conduct a free lending library in the building until the new library is completed.

It is the understanding that The New York Public Library will make a request for a site in the immediate vicinity of the East Side House Settlement, and will proceed to erect, as expeditiously as possible, and thereafter maintain a branch library there.

It is the wish of the Trustees of the East Side House Settlement that they be permitted, if possible, to retain certain of the books, to a limited extent, for their own reading room.

The hopes expressed above were promptly fulfilled. A new site for the Webster branch of The New York Public Library, 38' 8" $\times$ 94', at 1465-1467 Avenue A was approved by the city on May 27, 1904. Title was taken January 6, 1905; Babb, Cook & Willard were chosen as architects, and the new building was opened for use on October 24, 1906.

Mr. Gaillard remained as branch librarian until January, 1906, when he was taken to circulation department headquarters, being succeeded as branch librarian by Miss Clara S. Sackett, who served as acting librarian until November 1, 1906, when she was succeeded by Miss Zaidee C. Griffin.

CHAPTER XI

St. Agnes Free Library

St. Agnes' Free Library was the child of the Rev. Dr. Edward A. Bradley, vicar of St. Agnes' Chapel, 121 West 91st Street. The vestry of Trinity Church appropriated $500 for a parish library at this chapel in 1893. The demand for books was so great that by the end of the year Dr. Bradley was emboldened to expand his field from his parish to the neighborhood and community.

At that day there was no public library nearer than the George Bruce of the New York Free Circulating Library at 226 West 42nd Street to the south and the Harlem branch of that Library at 1943 Madison Avenue, near 125th Street to the north. The Harlem Library had but lately moved into its new home at 123rd Street and Lenox Avenue, but use of its collections was restricted to members or subscribers.

Dr. Bradley asked Trinity vestry to allow him room in St. Agnes' parish house for a free public library, to be chartered by the University of the State of New York. At a meeting of the vestry held May 14, 1894, it was resolved "That the consent of the Vestry be and is hereby given to the Rev. Dr. Bradley to appropriate for the use of a Library to be organized under arrangement with the University Board of Regents, according to the regulations of said board, any rooms in the Parish building connected with St. Agnes Chapel, provided that such use shall not interfere with the parochial purposes of such building, and provided that no expense for the organization or maintenance of such Library shall be imposed upon the Vestry, that the name of the Trinity Corporation shall not be connected with such Library, and that Dr. Bradley shall retain the control of the Library, in respect to the books it shall contain and the general administration thereof."*

A charter was granted by the Regents on June 5, 1894, Winfield Poillon, William B. Harrison, Thomas Watson Ball, Isaac B. Newcombe, and Edward A. Bradley being named as trustees. Dr. Bradley was chosen President, Mr. Ball, Secretary, and Mr. Newcombe, Treasurer. Miss A. L. Gibson was appointed librarian and served throughout the life of the library.

It was a struggle to start the library and then, once started, began the struggle to carry it on. From the State came $200 per year for the purchase of books. The trustees had to raise an equal amount, which they did by solicitation, subscription, various forms of entertainment in the parish house, readings by authors, and similar devices universally familiar to struggling libraries.

Help from the City came in 1896. Though entitled to $2,000, according to the system of apportionment of funds then in vogue, it received but $200. Later years saw this error rectified and support provided at the rate of ten cents per volume of circulation approved by the Regents.

On November 8, 1897, Trinity Corporation resolved that "hereafter no aid be called for or received from the state or city for the free library at St. Agnes' chapel." This meant, of course, either removal or discontinuance of the work, for help from the Corporation — use of two rooms, light, heat, janitor's service — was hopelessly inadequate unless supplemented by other aid. The books were first taken to 526 Amsterdam Avenue, but these quarters soon proved too small and a second move was made to the corner of 85th Street and Amsterdam Avenue.

The historical note prefixed to the minutes of the meetings of the St. Agnes' trustees states that "Dr. Bradley was keenly distressed at the removal of the Library from the Parish house, and felt that the time for his resignation had come, as he could no longer give it his direct supervision, and that work outside of his parish was more than he had time to attend to. Those who knew the immense work of which he was the centre at St. Agnes' Chapel, realized that he was right. He had not, however, spoken officially of his intended resignation. It was with sincerest sorrow that the Trustees and all connected with the Library heard of his sudden death in August, 1898." He was succeeded as President by Mr. Robert Appleton.

In February, 1900, continued growth forced another removal, to the southwest corner of 82nd Street and Broadway, where the books remained until after consolidation with The New York Public Library in August, 1901. Its new building, erected from Carnegie funds, at 444 Amsterdam Avenue, was opened on March 26, 1906.

* Ms. minute book of St. Agnes Free Library.

Opened in 1894, the library had grown to 2,000 volumes by 1895. In the spring of that year the librarian, assisted by Miss Theresa Hitchler, then chief cataloguer for the New York Free Circulating Library, working at night in addition to her regular work, and serving without pay, recatalogued and reclassified the collection. At the time of consolidation the stock of books had grown to number 10,027, and the circulation had grown to 150,722 in the year 1900/1.

At the time of consolidation the officers were: Robert Appleton, President; Judge W. W. K. Olcott, Treasurer; F. H. Hitchcock, Secretary; W. W. Appleton and Bird S. Coler serving as the fourth and fifth trustees, and Miss Gibson as librarian.

CHAPTER XII

The New York Free Circulating Library for the Blind

The New York Free Circulating Library for the Blind was incorporated June 3, 1895, the certificate of incorporation dated May 23 preceding being filed in the county clerk's office in New York City and in the office of the secretary of state at Albany on the date first named. The incorporators were Richard Randall Ferry, William B. Wait, Clara A. Williams, Clark B. Ferry, Charles W. Weston, Stephen Babcock, Eliza J. Hancy, Phœbe J. B. Wait, H. C. Weston, Edward J. Hancy, Jeannie C. Weston, Henry W. Williams, Florence A. Weston, Hannah A. Babcock, Theodore Leroy Ferry. The five first named were recorded as trustees for the first year.

The objects of the corporation were set forth as:

"1. To purchase books, pamphlets or other matter printed in raised or embossed characters for the use of the blind.

"2. To print in such raised or embossed characters such books, pamphlets or other matter as the trustees of this corporation may think best, and to sell or otherwise dispose of such copies of the books, pamphlets or other matters so printed as may not be necessary for the purposes of the library hereinafter referred to.

"3. To stock and maintain a library of books, pamphlets or other matter, printed in embossed or other characters adapted to the use of the blind, such library to be for the free use of all worthy blind persons.

"4. To receive for the use of said library donations of books, pamphlets or other matter adapted to the use of the blind, and to dispose of by sale or otherwise such books in said library which for any reason may have become undesirable as library books.

"5. To raise or receive contributions of money to be applied to the purposes of the corporation above enumerated."

The moving spirit in the work was Richard Randall Ferry,* a hat manufacturer of this city, who lost his eyesight in 1891 and retired from business. A letter to the New York Tribune, November 12, 1894, written by him and signed "More Light," followed by an answer a few weeks later, set forth the circumstances that led to the organization.

Mr. Ferry's letter was printed as follows:

"A LIBRARY FOR THE BLIND NEEDED HERE

"To the Editor of the Tribune:

"Sir: I wish to thank you for the information I have received from an article in your Sunday edition of the Tribune, which gave a description of the 'Free Circulating Library for the Blind,' located at the Church of the Messiah, in Brooklyn. The information is a God-send to me, and I assure you I shall lose no time in availing myself of the use of these books. I learned the New York Point System about two years since, but, to my surprise, I found there was no library for the blind in this city, and no books were to be had except by buying them at from $3.00 to $4.50 a volume. As blind persons, as a rule, are not blessed with an over-abundance of this world's goods, books at this price are a luxury few can afford to indulge in. Is it not a shame that in this city of New York — one of the largest cities in the world — there is no free circulating library for the blind with books, religious and secular, printed in line letters and New York point, for free use by all the worthy blind? But I feel sure that this is due to a lack of information and very many of our charitable citizens would only be too glad to contribute to this object, if the facts in the case were brought to their knowledge. Who will help to start a fund by being one of fifty to subscribe $10.00 each for this worthy object, which will help to lighten the pathway, through life, of these people who are in darkness?

"MORE LIGHT.

"New York, November 12, 1894."

This called forth the following response:

"To the Editor of the Tribune:

"Sir: In response to the question of your correspondent, 'More Light,' 'Who will help to start a fund for this worthy object (a library for the use of the blind) by being one of fifty to subscribe $10.00 each,' I forward the enclosed check.

"X. Y. Z.

"New York, November 27, 1894."

These letters and others that followed led to a meeting of persons interested in the project in March, 1895. The first annual report states that the "Ferry Free Circulating Library for the Blind" was organized on March 9,

* Mr. Ferry saw the library established and finally put on a permanent footing before his death, which took place at his home in this city, 746 St. Nicholas Avenue, February 16, 1906, when he was 71 years old.

1895. The manuscript minutes of the library state that "On the evening of March 16, 1895, Messrs. R. R. Ferry, O. Benedict, Charles W. Weston, H. W. Williams, H. C. Weston, Theodore S. Ferry, Mrs. Theodore S. Ferry, Mrs. Frank S. Weston, Mrs. Charles W. Weston, Mrs. H. W. Williams, Mrs. O. Benedict, and Miss L. F. Benedict met at the house of Mrs. H. W. Williams, 121 West 86th Street, New York City, to form an association to be known as The Ferry Free Circulating Library for the Blind, and to propose Officers, Trustees, &c."

At the second meeting, at the same place, on May 23 following, at Mr. Ferry's request the name of the organization was changed to New York Free Circulating Library for the Blind. Articles of incorporation were signed at this meeting, and the certificate of incorporation was filed in the county clerk's office in New York and in the office of secretary of state at Albany on June 3 following, as above stated.

The officers named at the first meeting were Richard Randall Ferry, president, Clark B. Ferry, vice-president, Clara A. Williams, secretary and treasurer. These officers were named as trustees for the first year, and at the second meeting William B. Wait, superintendent of the New York Institution for the Blind, and Charles W. Weston were added to the number of trustees.

The constitution provided for three classes of members: annual, life, and honorary; the first class was composed of those paying one dollar per year, the second of those paying twenty dollars at one time. The date of the annual meeting was fixed as the second Monday in March. A board of five trustees was to be chosen at this annual meeting from the membership, and a president, vice-president, and a secretary and treasurer were to be chosen by the trustees from their own number. The superintendent of the New York Institution for the Blind was a trustee ex officio, and the other trustees were divided into two classes, two new trustees being chosen at each annual meeting. Three of the trustees were appointed a book committee. Books purchased by the society were to be printed in New York point until otherwise ordered by the trustees, but books printed in any system were acceptable as gifts, and all books in all systems were to be free for use by all worthy applicants, except that transportation charges were to be paid by the applicants.

At first the society was given a room in the George Bruce branch of the New York Free Circulating Library, but on account of the size of the books themselves and of the lack of space in the branch the trustees of the New York Free Circulating Library were forced to withdraw this privilege at their meeting on December 10, 1895. The society was homeless for about three months, but the minutes of the meeting of trustees held on February 11, 1896, record the acceptance of an offer from Rev. E. A. Bradley, D.D., of a room for their use, rent free, in the parish house of St. Agnes chapel at 121 West 91st Street.

The library was formally opened at the above address on Monday, November 9, 1896. On this occasion Miss Nellie Doris and Miss Anna Morris Stockton played on the piano and Messrs. Bernstein and Bergen and Mrs. Danforth and Mrs. Anderson gave vocal selections; Mr. Ferry, Mr. Wait, and Mrs. Williams gave brief talks.

At the time of opening there were about sixty volumes. Increase was rapid. At the second annual meeting the stock had grown to between four and five hundred; at the third to 530 volumes and 352 pieces of music; at the fourth 1,151 volumes and 340 pieces of music; the fifth, 1,265 volumes and 342 pieces of music; the sixth, 1,440 volumes and 382 pieces of music; and the seventh, 1,548 volumes and 412 pieces of music.

There is no report of the number of readers during the first year. The second report records eighteen readers, the third, thirty-six readers, the fourth one hundred, the fifth 175 readers, the sixth 218 readers, and the seventh 248.

The third report gives the number of books and pieces of music taken for home use as 652, the fourth 1843, fifth 4,558, sixth 6,777, and seventh 8,020.

The library was registered with the Regents of the University of the State of New York on February 10, 1897.

Miss Helen M. Ferry was appointed librarian. In November, 1898, Miss Olivia E. Phelps Stokes offered to pay for the services of a teacher for one year, Mrs. C. Frances Kellock beginning in this capacity on January 3, 1899.

Negotiations for a permanent home for the society in the new building planned for The New York Public Library began at an early date. On February 8, 1897, the secretary wrote to Dr. John S. Billings expressing a hope of cooperation, to which he made reply on the 11th following that it would be "desirable that The New York Public Library shall furnish special facilities for the supply of literature for the blind in this city," that the work of the two institutions should not be duplicated, and that a conference should be held at a convenient date.

The delays incident to the building on the reservoir site deferred further action for three years. On April 7, 1900, the Secretary made formal application for a room for the society in the new building, which was considered by the Executive Committee of the Library on May 4 following. On May 10 the Director was instructed to state that the Committee express "their appreciation of the work which is being done by the New York Free Circulating Library for the Blind, and to inform you that the plans for the New Building for The New York Public Library, to be erected on the reservoir site, Fifth Ave. and Fortieth to Forty-second Sts., provide for a good sized room on the first floor for a library for the blind. In this room your library could find a permanent home and you could conduct the circulation of your books among the blind, provided it is distinctly understood that this is to be done under the general direction, and as part of the work, of The New York Public Library.

Under the terms of the contract which this Library has with the authorities of the City of New York for the occupation of this building, it would not be possible to give to your corporation a right to the independent occupation of a room or rooms in this building; hence the above conditions."

Acknowledgment of this letter was made on the 16th following with request that legal papers be prepared for execution by the proper officials of the two libraries. To this Dr. Billings replied on the 19th suggesting that it was then a little premature to execute a formal, legal agreement on the subject, and that the matter had better be left as it then stood. He enclosed, however, a memorandum for an agreement stipulating that in the new building a satisfactory room was to be given for the use of a circulating library for the blind, that the society there deposit its books and continue to add to the collection, and that the society provide a librarian or attendant for the care of these books.

Matters stood on this basis for two years. At their meeting on October 22, 1902, the trustees authorized the secretary "to make respectful application to The New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox and Tilden Foundations requesting that this Library be consolidated therewith and that such consolidation be effected at the first practicable date, also to request that a committee from the N. Y. Public Library be appointed to confer with the trustees of this library to bring about such consolidation."

As a result of this action the secretary reported at the meeting on November 28 following "that Dr. Billings requested that an appointment be made between the Trustees of this Library and a Committee consisting of Dr. John S. Billings and Mr. John L. Cadwalader as soon as possible after action had been taken by this Association," and on this same date a meeting was called for Tuesday, February 10, 1903, at the Library for the purpose of voting on consolidation.

The articles of consolidation consisted of a deed of transfer conveying unconditionally to The New York Public Library all the property possessed by the New York Free Circulating Library for the Blind. The instrument was dated February 21, 1903, and authorization for its execution was given at the special meeting held on February 10. Notification of its signing was sent on February 21 and acknowledgment made on the 26th following.

At the time of consolidation the stock of books consisted of 1,649 volumes in raised print and 485 pieces of music. The library had $505.14 cash on hand and an endowment fund of $314.31.

It remained in the St. Agnes parish house until March 26, 1906, when the opening of the new St. Agnes Branch of The New York Public Library, erected from the Carnegie fund, at 444 Amsterdam Avenue, gave it a new home in more commodious quarters until the opening of the new central building at 5th Avenue and 42nd Street.

In connection with this attempt to provide home reading for the blind it may be not without interest to note an earlier attempt in this city for the same purpose.

The earliest circulating library for the blind was established in Boston in 1882. "During this year the Boston Public Library received a gift from Dr. William Moon of 351 volumes, printed in his own system" (R. R. Ferry in the sixth annual report of the New York Free Circulating Library for the Blind, page 6). Three years later an effort to the same end was made in New York as noted in the following extract from the New York Times quoted in the "Library Journal" for August, 1885, volume 10, page 179:

Five young ladies of this city and its vicinity, recent graduates of the New York Blind Asylum, have undertaken the establishing and maintaining of a circulating library for the blind. Miss Flora E. Rogers, daughter of Jason Rogers, the locomotive builder, and Miss Elizabeth Ginger, of Brooklyn, are credited with originating the idea. Associated with them are Miss Maggie A. Quee, Miss Catherine A. O'Neil, and Miss Susie V. Purdy, of this city. These young ladies have taken out a charter under the title of the New York Free Circulating Library for the Blind, and are named as the first trustees of the corporation. The enterprise involves the raising of a considerable sum of money, for which they will depend in a measure on their personal friends, and in a greater measure on public subscriptions. Superintendent Anagnos, of the Perkins Institution and Massachusetts Asylum for the Blind, has promised to give the new library a dozen books at the outset. The idea of a contribution of that number of ordinary books to a library does not strike one as being a very liberal affair; but twelve books printed for the use of the blind constitute a big donation, as any one at all familiar with the price of such works will readily see.

The incorporators of the new library are enthusiastic over their project, and will begin the work of raising funds as soon as the necessary preliminary work is done. It is probable that they will for the present make their purchases of Superintendent Anagnos, of Boston, as the facilities of the printing establishment in his control place him in a position to supply the books required for the least amount of money. As soon as a suitable place for maintaining the library is secured, and the first instalment of books is received, the books will be loaned in the same manner as are those of any well-organized library.

A free circulating library for the blind was established in this city about six months ago in rooms loaned by the Church of the Holy Apostles, at 9th Avenue and 28th Street. The library has now about 110 volumes, including pamphlets. The books are printed on single sheets of paper, the sheets being pressed down hard on the large types, leaving an embossed impression on the reverse side. There are about 1,000 blind people in New York, Brooklyn, and Jersey City, outside of the institutions for the blind, who depend on this library alone for the reading that they do themselves. Over one hundred have become regular attendants at the rooms. A movement has been set on foot by those interested in the library to have it transferred to more convenient quarters.

About $1,000 is needed, and the management hopes to obtain that amount easily for so deserving a charity.

Manhattan, however, failed to give "so deserving a charity" the support it deserved. The church needed the room occupied by the books and the Mizpah Circle — a voluntary organization having the welfare of the blind as its object — was asked to take charge of the books. The Circle stored them in the Smith, Gray & Company building at Fulton Street and Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, early in February, 1890. On or before July 1 of this year they were taken from storage and placed in the Sunday school room of the Church of the Messiah on Greene Avenue. Here they remained till space again grew small and in March, 1905, the Mizpah Circle gave them, 437 in number, to the Brooklyn Public Library which took them as part of the collections of its Pacific Branch at Fourth Avenue and Pacific Street where they still remain.

CHAPTER XIII

Tottenville Library

Like the Harlem and Washington Heights Libraries the Tottenville Library was a village or neighborhood effort. Lying at the extreme southern end of Staten Island and cut off from participation in many city activities, Tottenville had long felt the need of a public library. The first successful steps to this end came from the "Philemon Literary Society" — the local woman's club — and the men's "Philo Debating Society," which joined in calling a public meeting on February 6, 1899.

A letter to the State Library at Albany on November 14, 1898, had put the organizers in touch with Mr. W. R. Eastman, inspector of libraries throughout the State. Mr. Eastman attended this meeting on February 6, 1899, and by his presence and advice helped in the preliminary organization then effected.

Three weeks later, on February 28, the board of trustees was organized, a constitution adopted, and Frank Joline was elected President, Mrs. Cynthia M. Little, Vice-President, Mrs. Mary L. Mason, Secretary, and Gilbert S. Barnes, Treasurer. With the above officers and Rev. J. C. Hendrickson the board was complete. It held its first meeting on March 2 at which a committee on by-laws was appointed. On March 16 the by-laws were adopted and an application for a charter was made to the regents of the University of the State.

The by-laws called for a president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer as officers. Board meetings were held on the first Monday of each month at 7.30 p. m. The annual meeting was fixed for the second Tuesday of July. Standing committees on finance, books, administration were appointed. The librarian was to perform the usual duties of the office.

TOTTENVILLE BRANCH OF THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

On April 29, 1899, the library was opened to the public in rented quarters at 137 Johnson Avenue, with 230 volumes, "all gifts and mostly unbound." It was the first incorporated public library in the Borough of Richmond. A provisional charter (no. 1276) was granted by the University on June 26. The board as named above was given as the incorporators. When the first annual meeting was held on July 11 the board reported ownership of 173 bound volumes. From April 29 to June 30 the circulation amounted to 421 volumes.

When the second annual meeting was held on July 10, 1899, receipts had risen from $283.79 of 1899 to $603.09, payments from $137.60 to $616.05, volumes owned from 173 to 828, circulation from 421 to 8,229. A state traveling library in the S. S. White Dental Company plant at Princes Bay was taken over for administration, which added 8,724 volumes to the record of circulation.

On November 27, 1900, a library social was held at the Knights of Pythias hall and at the time the advisability of the village's owning its own site and building was brought forward. A committee on site was appointed at the next meeting of the board.

When announcement of the Carnegie gift was made on March 16, 1901, the board filed that same day an application for a building with Dr. Billings, the Director of The New York Public Library, George L. Rives, Secretary, and Bird S. Coler, Comptroller.

At the third annual meeting on July 9, 1901, the board reported the offer of William Ziegler to give three building lots for a site, and the promise of the city to buy one additional lot.

On August 14, 1902, the members of the Association voted to transfer its property, which action was confirmed at a meeting held July 14, 1903. The deed of transfer is dated December 31, 1903. At that time Frank Joline was President, Charles T. Meyers, Secretary, and Charles A. Marshall, G. S. Barnes, and John R. Rowlands the other trustees.

The next year saw the library safely quartered in the new building on Amboy Road in Tottenville, erected from Carnegie funds and opened on November 28, 1904.

At the time of consolidation the Tottenville library owned 3,375 volumes and its circulation for the year 1903 had been 14,733 volumes.

CHAPTER XIV

Other Efforts Toward a Public Library System

Though without tangible results in the record of The New York Public Library, the still-born attempts to form a public lending library system made in the ninth decade of the 19th century are not without interest in connection with the present system, and indeed were not wholly without influence upon some of its elements in their life before consolidation.

It were idle, though interesting, to speculate on what might have been the history of free lending libraries in this city had Cogswell's been a mind of a different type and had his influence led Astor to be for New York in the forties what Joshua Bates was for Boston. Neither time nor place, however, was propitious for such a result, nor did the city then have a man of sufficient calibre, ability or foresight to convince it of the certainty of a large and certain return from every penny spent for a public library. It must be remembered that the local Board of Education had been established only in 1842, public education until that date having been in the hands of the private organization known as the "Public School Society"; that "The Free Academy" — which became the College of the City of New York in 1866 — dated only from 1847; and that the status of the public library as the graduate department of the public school was not conceived then, nor even half a century later, by all the local educational authorities.

Other cities did the pioneer work, New York being content to follow in this as in various other methods of municipal betterment. From time to time voices were raised here to urge the claims of the free lending library, but their cry if heard was not heeded.

An effective argument for a free public lending library was made by Theodore H. Mead in Scribner's Magazine for October, 1880. After citing the example of Boston and smaller places in New England, and of Cincinnati, Chicago, and St. Louis in the West, he suggests several reasons why New York had been denied such an institution, mentioning the mixed character of its population, the shape of the city, its insular site, the intense commercial activity, the nightly exodus of such hordes of workers, etc.

The situation in 1880 was really worse than at the beginning of the century. In 1795 the Society Library, he says, had 900 subscribers and between five and six thousand volumes; in 1880 it had 1,200 subscribers and sixty-five thousand volumes. In 1825 the Apprentices Library was within fifteen minutes' walk of three quarters of the apprentices; in 1880 it was inaccessible to three quarters. Astor and Lenox, open only in day time, were scarcely existent for the mass of workers; the Society, Mercantile, Cooper Union, and Y. M. C. A. libraries were open at night, but consultation of their stores meant loss of home hours.

A library for the city, in his opinion, "ought to be founded and maintained by the city, the necessary appropriation being voted and the money raised in the same way as that for the Board of Education. Practically, however, it would be exceedingly desirable that, to begin with, a fund should be subscribed large enough to defray, at least, the expense of getting the enterprise fairly under way, with a permanent board of management organized and in the field."

The building for such a library should at first accommodate 100,000 volumes in the main library, 25,000 in the popular circulation department, 10,000 in the reference department, and without removal should be capable of housing two to three millions in the main library, 100,000 in the circulation department, and 50,000 in the reference department, with accommodation for 1,000 readers.

There should be more than a main central building, however, some means of bringing books close to the homes of readers. One plan would be a house to house delivery system, another an extension of the New York Free Circulating system, better than either the establishment of delivery stations in the school buildings. This last scheme would give seventy stations in handsome buildings, in centres where they are needed, with the services of seventy scholarly men. Such a use of the schools might be a shock to men of routine minds, but there is no reason why it should interfere with the work of first instruction; a better acquaintance with the schools would be a good thing for the public.

"Of the active measures to be taken toward accomplishment of this plan, one of the first will be to secure the passage of an adequate State law. This legislation, having been anticipated in several States both East and West, offers no new problem, unless the proposed use of the schools may require State authorization. It should cover:

"1. Raising and appropriating money for establishing libraries and reading rooms, to be perpetually free to all.

"2. Receiving and using gifts and bequests, of whatever nature.

"3. Acquisition and absorption of other libraries, with their consent.

"4. Gratuitous contribution by the State of all laws and other public books and papers.

"5. Punishment of thefts or willful mischief.

"6. Appointment for limited terms, without pay, of trustees or directors empowered to buy land and build, purchase books, engage staff of officials, and establish regulations.

"The composition of this board of management should be planned by men of proved sagacity. Such, happily, have never been wanting in New York, and those of us who have observed the recent progress of the city in matters æsthetic, particularly the strenuous effort which resulted in the establishment of our Metropolitan Museum of Art, will recall some by character and education especially qualified, not only to assist in organizing such a board, but also to serve upon it themselves with distinction. In this board the City Government will naturally be represented; the Board of Education, also, and perhaps the trustees of the public schools — certainly Columbia College and the University of New York, and possibly each of the learned professions and the National Academy of Design. It is evident that there should be assured a large and constant majority entirely above political influence."

The layman's point of view is evident here in the passing over of existing agencies and the feeling that a great public library might easily be brought forth full grown. The task was not easy for Cogswell in 1850; the difficulties were multiplied manifold thirty years later. The librarian's attitude towards the problem is well set forth by two articles by C. A. Cutter of about this date, the first in the Library Journal of February,* 1880, the second in the Nation of May 18, 1882.

The earlier article looks towards an arrangement for New York similar to that in Boston where the Athenæum represents the scholar's collection, the Public Library the popular collection. The first, for New York, "will ultimately be fully covered by the Astor and Lenox, on absolutely free foundations; and that there are two instead of one has, perhaps, advantages as well as drawbacks." For popular use a joining of forces, if not actual physical or administrative consolidation, is suggested for the Mercantile and Young Men's Christian Association libraries. "If the Mercantile directors would take the initiative in considering its transformation into the 'Lower Hall' of a New-York Public Library, and the Niblo bequest to the Y. M. C. A. could be made the foundation of a 'Bates Hall' division, and the efforts of philanthropic gentlemen to form local free libraries in the poorer parts of the city, could take the direction of establishing local branches, New-York could immediately be placed in possession of one of its chief needs. The individuality of each element might easily be preserved. If the Y. M. C. A., for instance, were made a special branch of such a library, it could have all the Niblo books, with the help of the telephone, at its command, without the trouble of housing them, and the Niblo bequest could be limited to the purchase of books in certain classes, and always be represented in the Board."

Two years later, taking as his text a recent criticism of the Astor and Lenox libraries, he gave another interesting analysis of the local situation:

"The commandment, 'Thou shalt not look a gift horse in the teeth,' has been repeatedly disobeyed by New York in the matter of the Astor and Lenox libraries. From their very foundation there has been a constant succession of newspaper criticisms on the management, chiefly finding fault with the inaccessibility, which is declared so great that they do not deserve to be called public libraries. But it may be doubted whether Mr. Astor or Mr. Lenox ever thought of establishing public libraries in the sense in which that term has come to be understood of late.

"The Lenox is not a library at all, but a museum. . .

"As to the Astor, the library was hardly open when people began to show their ingratitude. . .

"Now, if the library had been a public institution, supported by the people's money, this would have been, we repeat, a real grievance, calling for very strong language, as showing that the trustees entirely failed to comprehend the public needs. But the case was different with a privately-founded library. . . After twenty-seven years' resistance, the authorities last year lengthened the opening an hour at each end; and there are even rumors, the wish perhaps being father to the thought, that at a not too distant future a room will be opened in the evening where books can be studied for which orders have been left either in person or by mail during the day. When that is done it will be in human nature to complain that the light is poor and the ventilation bad. If we may argue from a considerable experience of evening reading-rooms, both assertions will be true, but we hope they will not be publicly made, at least till the newness of the favor is a little worn off.

"But now a new objection has been brought forward which at least avoids the charge of ingratitude. You may not too closely inquire into the age of the nag given you by a kind friend, but suppose the present prevents another friend from giving you an Arab steed, because you are thought to be well provided for in the matter of horseflesh. May you not ask your friend to take back his gift, or may you not let it be generally known that you are not quite satisfied with the slow gait and staid demeanor of your dobbin? This is what a contemporary critic has done:

"While the Astor Library continues to exist and to grow in superficial area and in the number of its hoarded volumes, the State will not give us what we need; the legislator at Albany will point to the ponderous and drowsy building in Lafayette Place. Let the Astor stand out of the way.'

"We must say that the suggestions here, actual and implied, do not strike us favorably. It is not easy to see how the Astor can 'stand out of the way'; it is not at all likely that the legislator at Albany will give a library to New York city out of the State fund; and the proposition to add a new screw to the 'Machine' is one which taxpayers will regard with dismay.

"The true solution is not a State grant, nor a city establishment managed by a political commission, nor an institution founded by one man for objects dear to him alone; but a fund raised by combined generosity, where no person can have a prevailing influence, vested in the hands of trustees who, receiving it for the public use, will be sensitively on the watch for all methods by which the public good can be furthered; not committed to any one policy, but able to reshape their course from time to time as experience teaches them. Such a library will not need to demand that any of the older ones shall stand out of the way, for those to whom the new organization will look for support will never imagine that the older libraries supply the need. Moreover, it has been noticed elsewhere that a little rivalry between public institutions is a useful stimulus to the generosity of their friends. The late lengthening of the hours at the Astor gives ground for hope that its arrangements may in time be so modified as to meet the requirements of busy as well as of leisurely students; the Mercantile, the Young Men's, and the Apprentices' will supply certain somewhat different needs, and the New York Free Library will cover all the ground that is left, for it is incredible that any institution which does so much good work should long be allowed to labor with such inadequate means. This is not so showy a method as that of meeting all wants by one great public institution, as at Boston; but perhaps it may turn out to be as useful in the end, and as well suited to the circumstances under which the apparently rather clumsy system will have grown up."*

The next move towards the establishment of a public library system for the city came three years later and was made by the Board of Aldermen at the suggestion of their president, Adolph L. Sanger. The Board at this time was occupied with the affairs of the Broadway Railroad, but was not too closely engrossed with such material questions to consider the following resolution, introduced by the President at the meeting of December 8, 1885:

“By the President —

“Whereas, The growth of our city imperatively demands the creation and maintenance of public improvements in the interest of the whole people; and

“Whereas, The intellectual culture of the inhabitants of a great city has been uniformly regarded as entitled to foremost consideration; and

“Whereas, The prominence and influence of a metropolis are largely dependent upon the establishment and concentration within its limits of institutions of learning, art, science, and letters, and the value and importance of such agencies for progress are enhanced by the opportunities accorded its inhabitants of properly availing themselves of the advantages for education thereby offered;

“Now, therefore, be it

“Resolved, That the Legislature of the State of New York be requested to incorporate, on the most liberal and well-considered basis, a free public library, which shall forever stand as a monument of the homage paid by the people to self-culture, and which shall fittingly supplement our system of public education, constituting, with our public schools and colleges, the museums of art and of science, a university worthy of the City of New York.

*“Resolved, That his Honor the Mayor and the Counsel to the Corporation be invited to co-operate with a special committee of this Board to prepare and submit to the Legislature a suitable memorial praying for legislation in this regard, and to draft a proper act of incorporation.”

On motion of Alderman De Lacy, after the adoption of these resolutions, it was decided to appoint a committee of five “for the purpose of carrying into effect the preamble and resolutions adopted by this Board.” The Committee named by the Chair consisted of Aldermen Jaehne, Hall, Morgan, and McGinnis, Sanger as President serving as chairman by the terms of the resolution.

At the meeting of the Board on December 29 following, the President announced a meeting of the special committee to promote the establishment of a free library for the 30th in the Mayor’s office at one o’clock p. m. Here the formal record of the project ends so far as official action by the Aldermen is concerned.

Sanger was a lawyer and politician of some note, later serving as president of the Board of Education.† He was not elected to the Board of Aldermen for 1886, but did not give up his project, transferring the field of battle to Albany instead of the City Hall. He drew up three bills for the incorporation of a free library, for the erection of the building on the site of the Croton reservoir at 42d Street and Fifth Avenue, and for raising the necessary funds, which were introduced in the two houses of the Legislature on January 27, 1886, by Senator Murray and Assemblyman Cantor, as Assembly bills 72, 73, and 74.

The text of the first and last follows, the second providing merely for the removal of the reservoir:

[No. 72.] An act to provide for the erection, payment and maintenance of a building for a Free Public Library in the city of New York.

SECTION 1. The board of commissioners of the department of public parks in the city of New York, is hereby authorized and directed, with the concurrence of the board of estimate and apportionment, to construct, erect, and maintain, in and upon that portion of public land now occupied by the reservoir, situated in the city of New York, on Fifth Avenue, Fortieth and Forty-second streets, or in any other public park, square, or place in said city, a suitable fire-proof building for the purpose of establishing and maintaining therein a free public library, instituted under the direction of the corporation known as The New York Public Library, incorporated by chapter — of the laws of the State of New York, of 1886, at an aggregate cost of not exceeding the sum of $750,000.

SEC. 2. The comptroller of the city of New York is hereby authorized and directed to create and issue in the name and on behalf of the mayor, aldermen and commonalty of the city of New York, a public fund or stock, to be denominated "The Public Library Stock," to such an amount, not exceeding the sum of $750,000, as shall be certified by the resolution of the said board of commissioners of public parks, with the concurrence of said board of estimate and apportionment to be necessary for the erection of said building for the public library. Such stock or fund shall be redeemable within 20 years from the date thereof, and the moneys realized therefrom shall be applied only to the purposes mentioned in the first section of this act; provided, however, that, in the event of the existence of any provision of law which shall operate to prevent the issuing of said bonds in manner aforesaid, then, and in that event, and for the purposes of carrying out the provisions of this act, the comptroller of the city of New York, upon the requisition of the board of commissioners of the department of public parks, with the concurrence of said board of estimate and apportionment, is hereby authorized and directed in each of the years 1887, 1888, and 1889 to raise the sum of $250,000 by the issue of revenue bonds; and the board of estimate and apportionment is hereby authorized and directed to cause to be included in the taxes to be levied and raised upon the real and personal estates subject to taxation in the city of New York in the year 1887 a sum sufficient to pay the revenue bonds in this section directed to be issued in the last-before mentioned year, with all interests due or to become due thereon, and in the year 1888 a sum sufficient to pay the revenue bonds in this section directed to be issued in the last-before mentioned year, and in the year 1889 a sum sufficient to pay the revenue bonds in the section directed to be issued in the last-before mentioned year, with all interest due or to become due thereon, and such sum in each of said last-before mentioned years the board of aldermen of the city of New York are hereby empowered and directed to cause to be raised according to law, and collected by taxes upon the estate real and personal subject to taxation in said city and county.

SEC. 3. The plans for the erection, building and equipment of said building for the public library shall be prepared by the trustees of the corporation denominated "The New York Public Library," and shall be approved by the board of estimate and apportionment.

SEC. 4. The board of estimate and apportionment shall annually include in its final estimate the sum of $40,000 which shall annually be raised and appropriated to said corporation, known as "The New York Public Library" toward the maintenance of said public library.

SEC. 5. This act shall take effect immediately.

SECTION 1. Chester A. Arthur, John T. Agnew, Felix Adler, Daniel F. Appleton, Christopher C. Baldwin, Fordyce Barker, Henry R. Beekman, Samuel L. M. Barlow, Levi M. Bates, Jonas M. Bundy, Frederick A. P. Barnard, Julius Bien, Cornelius N. Bliss, Isaac H. Bailey, Matthew C. D. Borden, William L. Cole, Michael Coleman, Henry Clausen, Jr., Edward Cooper, Andrew Carnegie, Howard Crosby, Abram J. Dittenhoefer, William A. Cole, Hugh N. Camp, John L. Cadwalader, Frederick W. Devoe, Noah Davis, Abraham Dowdney, Daniel Draper, Charles P. Daly, Patrick F. Dealy, David L. Einstein, Franklin Edson, Charles H. Eaton, George Ehret, William M. Evarts, Roswell P. Flower, Hamilton Fish, Gustav Gottheil, Elbridge T. Gerry, William R. Grace, Andrew H. Green, Edwin L. Godkin, Alonzo B. Cornell, John D. Crimmins, James C. Carter, Henry L. Hoguet, Charles Hauselt, Myer S. Isaacs, William M. Ivins, George Jones, John D. Jones, Walter T. Johnson, John Keenan, Henry Knickerbacker, Charles P. Ketterer, Theodore M. Lilienthal, Edward Lauterbach, Alfred L. Loomis, Lewis Lyon, Edward V. Loew, Charles P. Miller, Edwin A. McAlpin, Randolph B. Martine, Jordan L. Mott, Orson D. Munn, Lewis May, Joseph J. O'Donohue, Henry A. Oakley, Joseph Pulitzer, Abram S. Hewitt, Oliver Hoyt, Edward Patterson, Alexander Reitlinger, Adolph L. Sanger, Francis M. Scott, Carl Schurz, William L. Strong, Algernon S. Thompson, William L. Turner, S. Oakley Vanderpoel, Albert Van Santvoord, William H. Wickham, Walter H. Webb, Salem H. Wales, Stephen A. Walker, David G. Yuengling, Jr., and such other persons as may hereafter be associated with them in the manner prescribed by the by-laws of the corporation hereby created, are declared to be and constitute a body corporate and politic by the name of "The New York Public Library."

SEC. 2. The object of said corporation shall be the establishment and maintenance, on the most liberal and well-considered basis, of a free public library, which shall forever stand as a monument of the homage paid by the people to self-culture, and to furnish free reading to the people of the city of New York by the system of a free circulating library with reading-rooms, and such other means as to the trustees of said corporation may seem suitable and proper.

SEC. 3. The number of trustees shall be twenty-two, in which number shall be included the mayor of the city of New York, the comptroller, the president of the board of aldermen and the president of the department of public parks. As soon as practicable after the passage of this act, the persons hereinabove designated as the incorporators of The New York Public Library shall meet for organization and proceed to elect from their number eighteen of said persons as trustees of said corporation. The persons so elected as trustees shall immediately thereupon divide themselves by lot into three classes, those of the first class to hold office for one year, those of the second class to hold office for two years, and those of the third class to hold office for three years. At the next annual meeting of the corporation, and annually thereafter the successors of each outgoing class of trustees shall be chosen for the term of three years by the members of the corporation in such manner as the constitution may direct, and such trustees shall in all cases hold office until their successors are elected.

The said mayor of the city of New York, the comptroller, the president of the board of aldermen and the president of the department of public parks shall be members of said board of trustees with all the rights and powers of their associates in the board.

SEC. 4. The said board of trustees shall organize themselves as a board by electing from their number a president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer, who shall hold such offices until their successors shall be elected.

SEC. 5. The said trustees shall make such rules and regulations for their own government and for the government of said corporation, and in relation to the officers and employes appointed by them, and fix and enforce such penalties for their violation, as they may deem proper and expedient. They shall have the general care and control of the said library together with the building or buildings to be erected for its purposes, the fixtures and furniture thereof, and the expenditure of all moneys annually appropriated therefor.

SEC. 6. The said trustees shall annually present to the board of aldermen in the month of May, a report containing a statement of the condition of the library, the number of books that have been added during the year, with an account of all the receipts and disbursements, together with such information or suggestions as they may deem expedient.

SEC. 7. The said trustees shall appoint a suitable and competent person as librarian and also such assistant librarians and other persons as they may deem necessary to properly conduct the business of said library. The persons so appointed shall hold their respective offices under the direction of, and be subject to such rules and regulations as shall be prescribed by said trustees.

SEC. 8. In case of the death, resignation, neglect or refusal to act of any of the officers or trustees of said corporation, the other trustees thereof may at any regular meeting elect by ballot a trustee or trustees, or officer or officers in the stead of such trustees or officers, who shall hold their offices until the next annual meeting of said corporation, and until others shall be elected in their place.

SEC. 9. Said corporation may purchase and hold and lease any real and personal estate necessary and proper for the purposes of its incorporation, and is authorized and empowered to take by purchase, grant, gift, devise or bequest, subject to all the provisions of the laws relative to devises or bequests by last will and testament.

SEC. 10. This act shall take effect immediately.

A measure of such a nature caused, of course, no little discussion in the newspapers and in library circles. It met adverse criticism as coming from the Board of Aldermen, as an attack upon existing circulating libraries, as too ambitious in its ends, as calling for too expensive a building, as wrong in its principle of establishing a central building instead of emphasizing the branch system, in the names of some of the men in the list of incorporators, and for various other reasons.

Sanger defended it vigorously in newspaper interviews and in public addresses before the New York Library Club and elsewhere. He maintained that the criticisms above noted were unfounded, that his scheme did not preclude branches and inter-branch loans, but that the central building and scheme was necessary first.

One remarkable defence of the omission of names of librarians or of men closely identified with library work in the list of incorporators was made by Hugh N. Camp, one of those so named, in an interview reported in the Commercial Advertiser of February 2, 1886, in which he explained that such men were purposely avoided, "knowing that they would be sure to have fixed ideas on the subject." It was deemed "better to get men who could be inclined one way or the other, and who would, therefore, be able to agree on some one good scheme."

Mr. Sanger's own statement on this point was made in the same paper in its issue of the 5th following. The few politicians "who were put on the list were put there to secure the use of their influence in making the institution a success." "The incorporators are to meet and to formulate their own plans and to organize. I have my ideas, but I don't know whether their ideas will coincide with mine. All I know, and all they know, is that we need a public library. How it shall be conducted must be decided by the directors. I did not use any unfair means, nor did I misrepresent anything in getting these gentlemen to become incorporators. I simply sent them a circular containing the resolution passed by the board of aldermen, adding that their names had been suggested to me."

He recommended establishment of a new institution in preference to urging public support of the New York Free Circulating Library because he felt that money should not be "appropriated to eighteen gentlemen in New York to conduct a private library." His list of incorporators included no names of men prominently connected with existing libraries because "in such a case the cry of 'job' would have destroyed all the good we intend to do."

The New York Library Club held a special public meeting in the law lecture room of Columbia College on the evening of February 24, 1886, at which Mr. Sanger made an able and extensive exposition and defence of his position.*

The Sanger bill never got beyond the committee stage at Albany. A hearing was held by the Senate committee on cities on February 11 at which Judge Henry E. Howland, J. F. Kernochan, Mrs. Kernochan, Mrs. R. J. Cross, and Miss Townsend, trustees of the New York Free Circulating Library, and Melvil Dewey, then librarian of Columbia, argued in opposition to it and in favor of public support for the New York Free Circulating Library.

These arguments and the lack of any marked public support killed the bill in committee. The counter-bill introduced on behalf of the New York Free Circulating Library, though necessarily in form of a general act, passed both houses as Chapter 666 of the Laws of 1886. This act furnished the authorization for appropriation of city money for free circulating libraries until it was repealed by the Membership Corporations Law of 1895, when appropriation of city money was thrown upon the provisions of the University Law of 1892.

Their statement, authorized at a special meeting of the trustees, held February 3, 1886, read as follows:

FROM THE

NEW YORK FREE CIRCULATING LIBRARY

IN view of the interest aroused by a petition before the Legislature looking to the establishment of a Free Library in New York, the Board of Management of the New York Free Circulating Library deem themselves called upon to make the following statement:

This Society, already in active operation in 1879, was incorporated (Chapter 166, Laws 1884) "to furnish free reading to the people of the City of New York by the establishment and maintenance of a system of free circulating libraries, with or without reading-rooms, and by such other means as to its Trustees may seem suitable and proper."

Inasmuch as the New York Free Circulating Library have now been engaged in the business of lending books in the City of New York for the past five years, and as their circulation has now reached 200,000, the Trustees feel that the expression of their views on this subject is entitled to some consideration.

* The address is reported in full in the Library Journal, March, 1886, volume 11, pages 82-86.

The Trustees of the New York Free Circulating Library sympathize heartily with the objects proposed to be attained by those interested in the petition before the Legislature, but they do take it upon themselves to criticise the method advocated by the petitioners.

A perfect free library in a large center aims to meet two views, that of furnishing books of reference for use in the Library Building, and that of furnishing books to be taken out.

As far as books of reference are concerned, New York is already amply supplied by the Astor Library, the Library of Columbia College, and others, which are free to all, under, of course, certain necessary restrictions.

Then it only remains to provide for a lending or circulating library.

The Trustees, speaking from experience, assert without hesitation that, as far as they are able to judge, the only feasible means of attaining this object is by the branch system.

The circulation of books from their first library in Bond Street was a little under 100,000 books annually, when, by the generosity of Mr. Ottendorfer, a new branch came under the charge of the Society at No. 135 Second Avenue, only about half a mile distant; in the very first year nearly 100,000 books were circulated from the Ottendorfer Branch, and no diminution of the demand was caused at the original branch, No. 49 Bond Street.

There can be no doubt that the circulation of books must, in any event, be from various points of distribution in the city, and the only question is, which shall be first established, the large central building (assuming that such building will be required), or the distributing branches?

The Trustees of the New York Free Circulating Library pronounce in favor of starting with the branches, and then, should a central library be required, the same could be erected.

The petition asks for a large sum of money for a building solely; no application is made, at present, at least, for books or to meet current expenses, and it follows that the branch system, if contemplated at all, is to be arranged for after the main building is completed and equipped.

That the branch system must finally be adopted (if the bulk of the population is to be reached) is demonstrated not only by the experience of the New York Free Circulating Library, but by the fact that about two thirds of the circulation of the Boston Library is from the branches and not from the central building, and that, it must be borne in mind, in a city numbering only about 394,000 inhabitants.

If this be so, no benefit will be derived by the plan advocated by the petition for some time to come, as in the first place an expensive building has to be erected, to be furnished with books and a system of distribution organized, all of which will consume much time.

No trouble exists in securing, through the generosity of private individuals, funds sufficient to erect buildings and purchase books, but the difficulty is to arrange for a regular income to meet the current expenses of the different branches. So far this income has been derived from the dues ($10) of annual members and from donations and subscriptions.

The Trustees of the New York Free Circulating Library are well aware that should the whole city be supplied with books they could not expect to obtain from private individuals income enough to meet the outlay, but they have considered themselves bound to demonstrate by experiment the soundness of the views advocated by them before they applied for State aid.

But now that the free library question is prominently before the people, and an effort is being made to obtain public funds, it is well to consider how best the desired end is to be attained.

The New York Free Circulating Library claim that their method (which they propound not as a theory but as an accomplished fact) is the better calculated to meet the wants of the community, and, if public money is to be appropriated, they hold it should be given to a society already chartered and actively engaged in this work. An annual appropriation of $5,000 or $6,000 would be sufficient for each branch, and branches founded by private individuals would rapidly spring up.

The feature of annual membership and yearly dues should be retained, and as the privilege of membership is open to all, and the election of one third of the Board of Trustees occurs each year. The New York Free Circulating Library can never become in any sense a close corporation.

In advocating the system of branches as opposed to that of a general center the Trustees beg to call attention to the fact that, as they have reading-rooms connected with their branches, the public have the benefit of as many reading-rooms as there are branches, whereas in the central-building system they would be limited to a single reading-room, only available to those living in its vicinity.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of November, 1920, the Library received as gifts a total of 3,463 volumes, 8,744 pamphlets, 17 maps and 9 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

Valuable miscellaneous collections were received from Mr. Paul Dana (173 volumes); from Mrs. H. P. Kinsey (166 volumes); from Miss Murray Ledyard, of Washington, D. C. (148 volumes and 5 pamphlets); from Mrs. B. B. Sloan (179 volumes, 15 pamphlets, 80 periodicals and 15 pencil drawings, including limited editions of "Venice of Today," by F. Hopkinson Smith, "Cyclopedia of Music and Musicians," edited by John Denison Champlin, Jr., "Cyclopedia of Painters and Paintings," edited by Champlin, and Stanley's "In Darkest Africa"); and from Mr. Richard George Wiener (187 volumes, including the Encyclopedia Britannica, the Century Dictionary, and books on political economy and finance).

The following interesting foreign language publications were received: From Mr. J. C. Bolet, New York City, 3 volumes of "La Tribuna Liberal" of Venezuela, 1877-79; from Dr. Peter H. Goldsmith, Director Inter-American Division, American Association for International Conciliation, 128 volumes, 100 pamphlets, and 53 periodicals relating to South America; from Mr. T. Y. Leo, New York, 2 Official Topographical Maps of the province of Kuangtung, with historical and descriptive notes, in 2 volumes, Canton, 1897, and Li Hung-Chang: Correspondence and Memorials of Baron Su-yi of Li, in 28 books, China, 1902; from Dj. Mahmoud, care of Robert College, Constantinople, his history of Modern Turkey, 1919 (in Turkish); and from M. Louis Morpeau, Port-Au-Prince, Haiti, two copies each of his "Anthologie Haïtienne des Poètes Contemporains, 1904-1920" and "Pages de Jeunesse et de Foi," both published at Port-Au-Prince.

Mr. Vernon Howe Bailey gave the Library three of his lithographs, Studies of the Municipal and Woolworth buildings; Mr. Jaques Reich gave remarque proof No. 23 of his etching of Edgar Allan Poe; and Mr. Earl Horter gave three of his etchings, entitled "Naples Tenements," "Antique Shop, Nantucket," "Cathedral Tower."

From Mrs. A. M. Virgil, New York City, came a collection of music, comprising 2 bound volumes and 175 pamphlets; and from Mr. John B. Uhle, New York City, came a collection of music, containing 13 bound volumes and 12 pamphlets.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN NOVEMBER, 1920

DURING the month of November, 1920, there were received at the Library 18,389 volumes and 9,340 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 94,704. They consulted 207,521 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 253,889.

HANDBOOK OF THE S. P. AVERY COLLECTION

(SUPPLEMENT)

COMPILED BY FRANK WEITENKAMPF

Chief, Arts and Prints Division

In May, 1900, the late Samuel Putnam Avery presented to The New York Public Library his collection of prints. With very few exceptions, it consisted of nineteenth century work, particularly French, numbering 17,775 etchings, lithographs and other prints, representing 978 artists, a number of them in virtually complete collections of their work. To duplicate this to-day would be difficult, if, indeed, possible at all.

The donor, at the time of making this remarkable and valuable gift, issued a privately printed "Handbook of the S. P. Avery Collection of Prints and Art Books in The New York Public Library" (1901). But he began at once adding to the collection, and after his death the work was carried on by his son, Sam. P. Avery. The additions thus made are set down in the present list, which thus forms a supplement to the "Handbook."

At the head of each section is given the class-mark for that section. Daggers after a title indicate large size (†) or oversize (††). In the few cases where prints are in bound books, the class-mark of the book follows the title.

Nether, D. H.

Twenty-one etchings, with nine extra states, — 30 pieces in all — which came with the original Avery Gift as part of the work of J. P. Norblin, have been identified as the work of that artist's pupil Nether. They are all small studies of heads and figures. If Nagler's statement, fixing the number of Nether's plates at 21, is correct, this Library has a complete set.

INDUSTRIES AND INDUSTRIAL ARTS

Allen, A. F. An introduction to chemical engineering. An elementary textbook for the use of students and users of chemical machinery. London: Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., 1920. xvi, 272 p. illus. 8°. VOE

"An elementary text-book designed mainly for students and users of chemical machinery, and containing plenty of good descriptive matter, which is exceptionally well illustrated with most types of standard plant. Its functions are mainly confined to general operations common to the chemical industry, such as plant for crushing, grinding, filtration, drying and evaporating, distilling, roasting, temperature control and transport of liquids, solids, and gases. The specialties of several engineering firms who cater largely for the chemical industry receive detailed treatment. The work is eminently suitable for advanced chemical students, either in conjunction with or subsequent to their laboratory courses." — Chemical trade journal, Aug. 7, 1920.

Edelman, Philip E. Experimental wireless stations, their theory, design, construction and operation, including wireless telephony, vacuum tube and quenched spark systems. A complete elementary course of instruction in and an account of sharply tuned modern wireless installations. New 1920 ed. New York: The Norman W. Henley Pub. Co., 1920. x, 392 p. illus. 8°. TTF

Hooper, Luther. Weaving for beginners, with plain directions for making a hand loom, mounting it and starting the work ... London: Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd. [1919.] viii, 114 p. illus. sq. 8°. VLD

"The purpose... is to describe practically the art of simple weaving for elementary students; to describe the loom and its construction according to the traditional plan and method as well as that of the few necessary appliances for the work; to state and illustrate the universal principles on which various textures are woven and the faults to be avoided by beginners; also to furnish some simple typical designs such as can be woven without adding to the structure of the most manageable form of loom, and to give clear directions for getting them ready and weaving them. Throughout the book diagrams are freely used, and carefully dimensioned, lettered, and figured in such a way as should be readily understood by any skillful mechanic or intelligent student. Advice is also given on the choice of yarns, and the characteristics of the various raw materials available are described." — Introduction.

Luckiesh, M. Lighting the home. New York: Century Company, 1920. 289 p. 12°. VGS

Treats of electric lighting from the artistic as well as from the practical side, as applied to the simple house. Contains a discussion of wiring, and the selection of fixtures, with stress on lighting in relation to color values.

Marsh, Robert, jr. Steam shovel mining, including a consideration of electric shovels and other power excavators in open-pit mining. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Co., 1920. xi, 258 p. illus. 8°. VDF

Presents in condensed form the essential features of the power shovel, with discussions of locomotives, cars, and other equipment; methods of attack; drilling and blasting; disposal of material, adaptability of methods to highest yields, costs (1915-1917 quotations), and administration.

Sloane, T. O'Connor. The standard electrical dictionary. A complete manual of the science in two parts...with additions by Prof. A. E. Watson, of Brown University. 1920 ed. showing all recent improvements. New York: The Norman W. Henley Pub. Co., 1920. 767 p. illus. 8°. VGC

A concise cyclopedia. Part 2, covering words and expressions of recent use, is new.

"It is doubtful if a mechanic can secure for the price of this book a similar amount of electrical information. Over six thousand definitions are furnished by the text; its possession insures its owner against loss of time in understanding electrical terms." — Tractor & gas engine review, October, 1920.

Also reviewed in Electrical record, Oct. 20, 1920.

Smithsonian Institution. Annual report of the Board of Regents...showing the operations, expenditures, and condition... for the year ending June 30, 1918. Washington: Gov. Prtg. Off., 1920. xii, 612 p. illus. 8°. (Publication 2549.) * EA

One fifth of this report gives interesting accounts of a year's progress in the several branches of the Institution. The rest of the volume comprises 27 monographs on a variety of scientific subjects for the most part adapted to the needs of the general reader. Among these are: helium, tornadoes, wind power, twentieth century physics, sphagnum moss, history of military medicine, the psychic life of insects, sexual selection and bird song, sun worship of the Hopi Indians, history in tools, and a biography of Sir Joseph Hooker.

United States.—Census Bureau. Census of electrical industries: 1917. Central electric light and power stations with summary of the electrical industries. Washington: Gov. Prtg. Off., 1920. 184 p. 4°. † VGS

Elaborate compilation of statistics and data obtained from 6,542 stations, covering general development, hydroelectric plants, primary power equipment, generating equipment, output and disposal of current, line equipment, sub-stations, customers, financial statistics, employees, salaries, wages, and comparative financial and operating features of selected groups.

Wells, Harry Lorin. Automotive wiring manual. The original and official collection of blueprint wiring diagrams. Contains guaranteed correct diagrams covering all motor cars and trucks from 1912 to 1920 inclusive; internal wiring connections of generators, starting motors, controllers, etc., of all electric starting and lighting systems; practical instructions on testing, repairing and maintenance of storage batteries, generators, motors, coils, etc. Chicago: Automotive Publishing Co. [cop. 1920.] xlvii, 768 p. of blue-prints. ob. 8°. TON

Who's who in engineering, edited by John Ed. Sears. 1920-1921 (annual). London: The Compendium Publishing Co. [1920.] 426 p. 4°. Desk—Room 121

Brief biographies of prominent living British engineers, accounts of engineering institutions, universities, manufacturers, trading and research associations, employees associations, and professional journals. Attractive quarto volume.
